KILL MORE THAN WILD BEASTS

The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs. That's why chills, fever and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them, and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. Money back, if not satisfied. Only 50c at All Druggists.

His Choice of Weapons.

In "A Century of English Ballads," a book by Harold Simpson, there is a delightful story of Stephen Incledon, an eminent tenor of other days, whose singing of "Black Eyed Susan" was peculiarly to the people's taste. While staying at a country inn Incledon had quarreled during the evening with an army officer. He imagined he had closed the controversy by going off to bed, but the officer, left downstairs to brood over his wrongs, thought otherwise. Making his way to Incledon's bedroom, he found the singer fast asleep. When he succeeded in waking him, a matter of some difficulty, the officer demanded satisfaction.

"Satisfaction?" murmured Incledon sleepily. "Well, you shall have it." Whereupon he sat up in bed and sang "Black Eyed Susan" in his best style.

"There," he said, lying down again, "my singing of that song has given satisfaction to thousands, and it will have to satisfy you." And he turned over and went to sleep again.

West Point Traditions.

"It is an interesting fact, often referred to at alumni reunions and in addresses delivered to the cadets at West Point," said a retired army officer, "that one of the most distinguished of the graduates of the academy, who afterward wore the epaulets of a major general, was once a bootblack on the streets of New York and was plying his trade when he noticed in a newspaper an announcement of a vacancy at the academy for the district in which he lived, and he applied for it.

"Another of the traditions," continued the officer, "is that one of the best cadet officers that ever wore the gray was the son of a convict, and, although that fact was known to every one of his comrades, it never made the slightest difference in his social standing. I do not know of any other institution where the same social recognition and the same loyalty of comradeship would be displayed."—Washington Herald.

Taming a Tiger.

"It is nothing but kindness that makes animals really tame," said a trainer. "All the terrible accidents that used to occur so frequently to trainers and tamers were due to the fact that the animals had been cowed and not won by kindness. I remember a savage Bengal tiger which was sent to me from Calcutta some years ago. When he arrived he was in a state of fury and rage and for several days would fly at me whenever I approached his cage. I paid him a daily visit, purring as I approached, which was like speaking his own language, and he gave up gradually his furious greeting. After a week I took a piece of meat at each visit, for the way to the heart is through the stomach, and that does not apply to tigers alone. At the end of four weeks I could touch him, and three months later he had quite realized that no one wanted to hurt him and used to come quietly to the bars to be stroked each day."

AUGUST 2-3-4

The attractions which the fair management have secured to appear here during the Pennington County Fair, to be held August 2d, 3d and 4th, are far better than have ever been obtained before and are certainly well representative of what is being done in the way of 20th century amusements.

The flying mahine, in charge of the well-known aviator McGoey, will of course, be the main attraction. There will be two flights each day. McGoey has been flying in Grand Forks this week and reports from there say that no better exhibition flights have ever been given. The aviator and his machine are not an experiment. They have been making good wherever a flight was advertised to take place.

Three free acts have been engaged to take place on the fair grounds in front of the grand stand. These acts are put on by the famous Meier Bros., who are acrobats, gymnasts and entertainers of more than usual ability. Another startling attraction, one that will appeal to those who like the sensational, is the "Leaping of the Death Gap" on a bicycle.

There will be a balloon ascention each evening to take place down town. This act will be in charge of "Dare-Devil" Robinson. He promises to give the people a few new sensations in aerial navigation. Another pleasure place which will be located down town, is a Merry-Go-Round, popularly known as the Carry-Us-All. It is the same kind as the one which is now thrilling the people at Wonderland Park, Minneapolis.

The Warren baseball team will again try conclusions with the local team the second day of the fair. The teams are evenly matched, each having a game to their credit to date. The Warren band will be here on that day to assist the Thief River Band. Warren has "some" band all right. They are going to play at the State fair, too. On the last day of the fair Detroit ball team will be here to give the "Indians" a chance to get even with them for what they did to the "Indians" last Sunday. There's no question but that there will be something interesting doing every second of the game.

Plan to be at the fair all three days and to bring with you any fruit, vegetables, stock, fancy work, educational, or other work that looks good to you. Help boost the fair and by so doing you will help boost yourself and your community.

All the barns, fences, exhibition buildings, the grounds and the race track are being put in readiness for the big event. By the end of this week the barns will have been cleaned and repaired so as to give ample and sanitary surroundings for the stock; the exhibition buildings will have been remodeled and painted thru out so that all exhibits can be shown in neat and attractive surroundings; and, the race track will be the best ever.

The Carlson Bros., of Erskine, will have on the fair grounds their prize herd of cattle. This will be a treat of itself that no one can afford to miss.

Watch for the program next week. —Thief River Press.

BEAT AGAIN

Last Sunday, at the Detroit ball yard, the "Indians" were defeated 6 to 4 in the most evenly contested game of the season. Both teams played excellent ball, and the batting and fielding were about on a par. The errors made by Thief River cost two runs and those by Detroit ore run. In the fifth inning when the "Indians" were beginning to do things to Baker, Courtney was called out on a rank decision at home. It was, literally speaking, anybody's game until the last man was out in the ninth. In the ninth inning with Mattson on third and Bowman on second, Christie came to bat and hit a long fly to center field, but Bebeau made a fine running catch and the game was over.

SOCIAL NEWS.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Ives entertained Judge and Mrs. Ives of Cass Lake last Sunday, the occasion being the eightieth birthday anniversary of the judge. At eleven o'clock the party accompanied by the children, Peggy and Nelly, motored to Red Lake Falls, arriving at the home of Mrs. Harry Ives' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pirath at twelve thirty.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with sweet peas, their fragrance filling the entire house. The center piece on the dinning table was a mammoth birthday cake decorated with eighty pink candles in rose holders. In the center of the cake the figure "80" was outlined with pink roses, the same also bordering the cake.

At one-thirty a chicken dinner, with all the fresh vegetables from Mr. Pirath's famous garden, was served, followed by a fruit salad and a pudding which would tempt the most of which places Mrs. Piarth's name in the hall of fame for fine cooking.

Between the dinner and dessert the rooms were darkened and the cand- number of which made a most brilliant showing. The ceremony of cutting the cake was performed by the judge.

Mrs. Pirath was ably assisted by her sister, Mrs. Spellman of Mankato. The party motored to Thief River Falls the same evening.

Mother Earth is here so kind that you just tickle her with a hoe and she laughs with a harvest.

Don't think that a man is your enemy just because you do not agree on some petty political issue.

Because you disagree with a man on one proposition it does not follow that you have to disagree with him on every proposition.

A vigorous temper is altogether an evil—men who are as easy as an old shoe are generally of as little worth. —Spurgeon.

The man who confines his work to one line gradually becomes a machine. The man who diversifies his work as well as his thought grows to fill greater spheres every day.

With the expected merger of the Times and Herald of Grand Forks, we can hardly look for any independent editorial thought from that city, except from Sam Haislet's Observer.—Binford Times.

You can't compel or persuade a woman to do certain things but if you give her a little bit of jolly she will do those same things unhesitatingly. Why?—Because she is closely related to man.

The recent school election demonstrated one thing: Many men have contended that if we had woman suffrage and there were a woman candidate the women would all vote for the woman. This concrete example proves the reverse.

In the natural course of events the Red Lake River has become worthless for power as well as for navigation. It now serves only the same purpose as the drainage ditch. In the future, while at times the water may become somewhat higher, there will be no regular navigation and no dependable water power.

CONGRESS

The Congressional Record having been stuffed to repletion with speeches never delivered, liberally interlarded with applause that was never heard, all franked free to the confiding public by statesmen desirous of further patriotic service, the business of the extra session will soon be concluded. The tribunes of the nation will soon be welcomed home to the bosoms of the people.

The most significant development of the session's work has been the desire of the Democrats for a hasty off hand revision of the tariff. They seem utterly to fail to realize what a vast structure of complicated technicalities a tariff schedule is. They complain bitterly about the "jokers" in the Payne-Aldrich tariff.

Yet the haste with which they propose to enact a new tariff is the very condition most favorable to "jokers."

Only a specialist is fitted to grasp the true significance of a tariff rate. Slight changes in the classification and description of goods alter the conditions of an entire industry, sometimes giving a manufacturer a simply hoggish amount of protection, and at other times wiping him off the map. The average Congressman is about as apt to detect the true inwardness of a tariff phraseology as he is to tell whether there is conscious life on the Planet Mars.

The tariff board now working on the wool and other schedules has secured in behalf of the government and of the American people, a band of experts, who are endeavoring to go to the bottom of the thing and no tariff investigators ever went to the bottom of it before. They are trying to find just how much protection a manufacturer needs in order to live on his side of the water.

Making a new tariff in advance of the findings of that board means simply making one that can't last. And this is as true of Canadian Reciprocity, so called, as of any other tariff.

Of course the Democrats have had no serious idea that they could pass a tariff other than reciprocity that the president would sign, even if they could get it by the Senate. They have been simply trying to get a political record made up for free mailing to the voters. This is natural and proper enough, but it forms no basis for judging what the Democratic party would do if it got into power.

An English King's Death.

William Rufus was killed by an arrow, either accidental or with murderous intent. He died in the New forest. His body was stripped by tramps and the next day was found by a charcoal burner, who placed the naked corpse on his cart, hoping to receive a reward. On the way to Winchester the cart was upset, and the king's body fell in the mire. Covered with filth and black with charcoal, it arrived in Winchester, where it was buried in the cathedral. A few years later the tower fell and crushed the tomb, and ten years after the Puritans rifled the grave and played football with the king's skull.

The Best She Could Do

"There is only one reason," he said, "why I have never asked you to be my wife."

"What is that?" she asked.

"I have always been half afraid you might refuse."

"Well," she whispered after a long silence, "I should think you'd have curiosity enough to want to find out whether your suspicion was well founded or not."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Damascus Swords.

It is seldom that a really good specimen of a Damascus sword can be obtained, for the art of working and engraving the kind of steel of which they are made is lost. These famous swords were made of alternate layers of iron and steel so finely tempered that the blade would bend to the hilt without breaking.

She Needed Them All.

There are over 200,000 words in the English language, and most of them were used last Sunday by a lady who discovered after coming out of church that her stunning new hat was adorned with a price tag on which was written, "Reduced to $2.75."—Norborne (Mo.) Leader.

His Idea of the Show.

"What do you think of the plot?" asked the theater manager.

"That isn't a plot," replied the man who had paid $2 to see the show. "That's a conspiracy."—Washington Star.

Another Quibble.

"Don't you hate to sleep in an upper berth?"

"No; I like to sleep when I have to take an upper berth."—Chicago Record Herald.

Appropriate.

"Here's a hairpin in the soup, waiter," said the mad diner.

The Landlubber.

They were enlightening the landlubber as to maritime matters. He was becoming more and more crestfallen as their explanations progressed.

"Why, I always thought," he sadly sighed, "that the port side of a ship was the one nearest port!"—Boston Herald.

Maddening.

"They really fear she will become insane. You see, she found a diary he kept before he married her."

"Oh, I see! And the awful revelations"—

"Revelations? No. It was all in cipher, and she couldn't read a word of it."—London Tit-Bits.

An Affront.

D'Auber—Your daughter paints in the Dutch school, does she not? Mrs. Newrich—Not much she don't! We pay $50 a quarter to give her private lessons at home. Dutch school indeed!—Philadelphia Record.

Posting Mother.

"Did that young man kiss you last night?"

"Mother, do you suppose he came all the way up here just to hear me sing?"

When Cricket Playing Was a Crime.

Until a century and a half ago our great national pastime in fact figured in the statute book as a crime. The game was declared illegal in the time of Edward IV., owing to its having become so popular as to interfere with archery, the then sport of kings. The law against it was vigorously enforced, and every person convicted of playing the game was fined £10 or sent to prison. It was not until the formation of the famous Hambledon club in 1749 that the statute was repealed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

An English Ghost.

A Westmoreland ghost used to haunt the shores of Windermere, where the Lowthers from time immemorial have been lords of the lake—the "crier of Claife." One tempestuous night in prereformation times a cry was heard across the water by the ferryman at the Nab inn—"A boat!" The ferryman, against all his cronies' persuasions at the inn, set out. After many hours he reached the Nab again, his boat dragged down by some unseen weight and himself, with hair on end, a raving lunatic. Soon he died, and every stormy night his wraith was heard in agonized shrieks across from Claife till at last the resident monk of Furness was sought in his retreat on Lady Holm and persuaded to "lay" the unhappy spirit, which he duly did. Harriet Martineau and others tell the tale.—London Chronicle.

The Weaker Sex.

The young woman had spent a busy day.

She had browbeaten fourteen sales people, bullyragged a floorwalker, argued victoriously with a milliner, laid down the law to a modiste, nipped in the bud a taxi chauffeur's attempt to overcharge her, made a street car conductor stop the car in the middle of a block for her, discharged her maid and engaged another and otherwise refused to allow herself to be imposed upon.

Yet she did not smile that evening when a young man begged:

"Let me be your protector through life!"—Life.

New Angle on Help.

"Why did you inquire so particularly into the wardrobe of that girl you just hired?" asked one of two women who were leaving an employment agency.

"To find out how carefully she will guard against burglars," said the other. "My experience has been that a girl who has nice things of her own will lock up more securely at night and keep a sharper eye out for sneak thieves in the daytime than one who has nothing of value to lose."—New York Press.

She Was Right.

"How effusively sweet that Mrs Blondey is to you, Jonesey," said Witherell. "What's up? Any tender little romance there?"

"No, indeed. Why, that woman hates me," said Jonesey.

"She doesn't show it," said Witherell.

"No, but she knows that I know how old she is. We were both born on the same day," said Jonesey, "and she's afraid I'll tell somebody."—Harper's Weekly.

The First Lighthouse.

The first lighthouse was erected at Pharos, near Alexandria, in Egypt. It was finished in 285 B. C. Its height was 550 feet, and the light, which was kept burning on top at night, was visible forty-one miles away. This tower existed for some 1,600 years, when it was destroyed by an earthquake.

The Idea.

"Can a married man acquire happiness?"

"Sure! You don't think that bachelors are the only ones that die, do you?"—Toledo Blade.

What's the Matter With Thomas?

There are some names which seem peculiarly suited to royalty; Louis, for instance, has a kingly sound. Francis, George, Henry in both spellings, Charles, William, Edward and James all have served their turn. Johns there have been, and Stephens. I remember a Robert in Sicily and a Peter in Russia and Servia. Frederick has often worn the crown, and royal honors are even now paid to Ferdinand in Bulgaria. But was there ever, anywhere, a king named Thomas? Oscars and even Haakens ascend the dais, but ever through all the centuries Thomas remains the subject, sometimes struggling up to a bishopric or an earldom, but never attaining the crown. Nicholases wear the imperial purple; Godfreys lord it over Jerusalem; Alexis struts in ermine; Alexanders fare forth to conquest; Julius and Leo don the triple crown, but Thomas, poor plebeian Thomas, has never a crown to his name. Now tell me, you who are wise in the occult influence of names, what is the matter with Tom?—London Idler.

Washington as a Humorist.

While president Washington's humor seemed to find expression in the diplomacy of self protection. A French revolutionist came to him for a general testimonial, which Washington did not care to grant, yet he did not wish to give offense to the French by a curt refusal, so he wrote an evasive card worthy of Lincoln—"C. Volney needs no recommendation from G. Washington."

After Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown Washington treated him with high consideration. At a dinner given in honor of the distinguished prisoner Rochambeau proposed "The United States" as his toast; Washington responded with "The king of France;" Cornwallis, perforce, faintly suggested "His majesty," when Washington startled them all by announcing, "The king of England—may he stay there!" with a ready wit that made even Cornwallis laugh.—Century.

A Little Way Off.

Tommy—What does the paper mean by calling Mr. Bugghaus an eight by ten business man? T.'s Father—I presume it means he is not exactly square.

Fort and Fortress.

Wife—Is there any difference between a fort and a fortress? Husband—Not much, except that a fortress must be harder to silence.

THE FOUR FAMOUS PACERS THAT WILL RACE THREE HEATS OVER STATE FAIR TRACK FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD, LABOR DAY, SEPT. 4, 1911.

These champions will be introduced by Dan Patch, 1:55, the world's most popular harness horse, and the great Savage quintet will be the great feature of the greatest racing program ever given in Minnesota or in the West.

MRS. JOSEPH DUNLEE, SOLOIST, WITH CONWAY'S BAND.

In addition to the famous Patrick Conway Band the state fair management has engaged the Kiltie Band of Galt, Ont., an equally famous organization, together with three other high class bands and three orchestras. There will be music everywhere and always at the 1911 state fair.

Wanted More Converts.

Southey in his life of Wesley relates the following whimsical incident. He states that some of the opponents of these religionists in the excess of zeal against enthusiasm took up a whole wagon load of Methodists and carried them before a justice. When they were asked what these persons had done there was an awkward silence. At last one of the accusers said, "Why, they pretend to be better than other people, and, besides, they pray from morning till night."

The magistrate asked if they had done nothing else.

"Yes, sir," an old man said. "An't please your worship, they have converted my wife. Till she went among them she had such a tongue, and now she is as quiet as a lamb."

"Carry them back; carry them back," the magistrate said, "and let them convert all the scolds in the town!"

Icebergs and Echoes.

Icebergs are always a source of worry to the transatlantic steamship skippers. It isn't pleasant to run along through a fog or a murky night and smash into one of these floating mountains of ice. The liner captains have a way of finding ice that at first strikes the landsman as curious. When it is suspected there are bergs in the neighborhood the whistle is kept going. If there is an echo the navigator slows down and keeps a sharp eye out, for echoes don't grow in the open ocean.

Disraeli's Gorgeous Costume.

When Disraeli was a young man he once went on a vacation trip to Corfu in this extraordinary costume: "A blood red shirt with silver buttons as big as shillings, an immense scarf for girdle, full of pistols and daggers; red cap, red slippers, broad blue striped jacket and trousers. His servant, engaged for the occasion, wore a Mameluke dress of crimson and gold, with a white turban thirty yards long and a saber glittering like a rainbow."—London Spectator.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $5o per acre. Red Lake county is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this coming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speaK.

MINNESOTA'S FAIR AND EXPOSITION

An Outline of What the Men Behind the Fair Are Working For.

Secretary J. C. Simpson, the other officers, and the directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society are working to make, this year's fair greater in every way than any of its predecessors. Some of the objects which those in charge are working unremittingly to attain are:

To make the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions of the state.

To make it a place where all classes and conditions of people can come and learn from observation the best that brains and time and money and perseverance have achieved in every line of industry.

To make it a mirror of the state's resources and Minnesota's greatest advertising asset.

To make it not only the country's greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where every one no matter what their walk of life, can find entertainment and instruction.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its 350 acres and its week in September the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest and entertainment to the greatest number of people in the Northwest.

SPECIAL DAYS AT STATE FAIR

Directors of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society have chosen the following special days for the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition:

Monday, Sept. 4th, Labor Day.
Tuesday, Sept. 5th, Minneapolis Day.
Wednesday, Sept. 6th, Farmers' Day.
Thursday, Sept. 7th, St. Paul Day.
Friday, Sept. 8th, Pioneers and Soldiers' Day.
Saturday, Sept. 9th, Children's Day.

THE BIGGEST CHEESE.

One of the biggest cheeses ever made is now being constructed for exhibition at the Minnesota State Fair. This mammoth dairy product will weigh between five and six thousand pounds, will be approximately six feet in diameter and will stand about forty-four inches high. It will be made of full cream American cheese of the best quality. As a novelty it will be attractive and is expected to stimulate the cheese making industry in Minnesota and the Northwest.

Friday, Sept. 8, has been designated as Grand Army day at the Minnesota State Fair. Veterans wearing the regular Grand Army badge or regimental reunion badge will be admitted free on that day.

CHARGES WILL BE PROBED

Alaskan Delegate Says Attorney General Permitted Fraud.

Washington, July 15.—After secret consideration of charges made by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska that Attorney General Wickersham deliberately permitted the statute of limitations to run against agents of the Alaska syndicate who defrauded the government through perjury to the extent of $50,000 the house committee on judiciary has determined to report favorably a resolution of inquiry offered by Delegate Wickersham.

The resolution would call upon the attorney general to furnish the house with all documents, affidavits and testimony in his possession relating to an affidavit submitted to him more than a year ago and sworn to in 1908 by H. J. Douglas, former auditor of the Alaska syndicate.

PUBLICITY BILL PASSES SENATE

Measure More Drastic Than It Came From the House.

Washington, July 18.—The most drastic campaign publicity legislation ever passed in either branch of congress was adopted by the senate practically without a dissenting vote. Using the pre-election publicity bill passed by the house of representatives as a basis the senate constructed a proposed law with the following important features:

No candidate for the senate or house shall spend in the election more than a sum equal to 10 cents for each voter in his district or state.

No senatorial candidate shall spend a total of more than $10,000 in the primary and general election and no candidate for the house shall spend more than $5,000.

Publicity must be given to all primary campaign contributions and expenditures.

All general election expenses must be made public before the election, beginning fifteen days before election, and making publication each six days until election.

All promises of political jobs must be made public.

The bill further makes it illegal to promise political places in order to obtain election support; or to aid in influencing the election of any member of a state legislature.

SENATE AGREES UPON DATE

Will Vote on Canadian Reciprocity Bill July 22.

Washington, July 15.—An agreement to vote on the Canadian reciprocity bill on July 22 was adopted in the senate without opposition. Agreements also were made for votes on other measures which will carry the session "through the legislative day" of Aug. 7, immediately after which congress will adjourn.

The agreement in full, reached at a conference of the various elements of the senate and later adopted in the senate, calls for votes as follows:

July 22—Canadian reciprocity.
July 27—Wool revision bill.
Aug. 1—Free list bill.
Aug. 3—Reapportionment bill.
Aug. 7—Arizona-New Mexico statehood bill.

FOUND GUILTY OF ABDUCTING GIRLS

Founder of Absolute Life Cult Convicted at Chicago.

Chicago, July 14.—Evelyn Arthur See, founder of the Absolute Life cult, the chief tenet of which was said to be the establishment of a perfect race, was found guilty of the abduction of Mildred Bridges, seventeen-year-old disciple. The jury was out only forty-five minutes and is said to have taken but one ballot.

The jury also returned a verdict of guilty of contributing to juvenile delinquency, which had been incorporated in the abduction charge.

The jurors were instructed to retire and return with a single verdict. Counsel for See offered the claim that the return of two verdicts necessitated a new trial and made an immediate appeal for a retrial.

See's flat, the home of Absolute Life, named in the cult publications as "the House of the Lord," was raided in January. See was arrested and two girls, Mona Rees, aged twenty-one, and Mildred Bridges, aged seventeen, who had been living in the apartment, were taken into custody.

PLAGUE CLAIMS ONE VICTIM

No New Cases, However, Reported in Gotham in Twenty-four Hours.

New York, July 18.—The cholera situation at quarantine was reported as reassuring by Dr. Alvah H. Doty, health officer of the port, and his assistants.

During the last twenty-four hours there has been one death, but no new cases have been reported and several of the eighteen persons in the Swinburne Island hospital are convalescent. Some of these now suffering from the plague are seriously ill, however, and the death list may be swollen within the next few days.

FOREST BLAZES UNDER CONTROL

Known Dead in Northern Ontario Totals 122.

LIST MAY BE AUGMENTED

Fire Sweeps Section of Country Three Hundred Miles Wide and Unknown Length.

Toronto, July 14.—Reports from Northern Ontario points are that the forest fires, which for several days have swept over a section of country extending 300 miles northward from North Bay and covering a wide section east and west, have either been extinguished or are under control.

No further extensive damage or loss of life is expected. The towns of Cochrane, South Porcupine and Pettsville have been obliterated. The fire swept clean the townships of Langmuir, Eldorado, Shaw, Deloro, Ogden, McArthur and Cripple Creek districts.

The known dead total 122, the majority of whom lost their lives at South Porcupine. There are believed to have been many other fatalities and estimates based upon unverified reports run as high as 400.

A relief train left North Bay for Porcupine with supplies. Plenty of funds have been subscribed in this city for immediate help.

Refugees from the burned area say that it covers 10,000 square miles, comprising a district that housed 20,600 people. From every quarter have come fugitives who escaped the flames, many of them badly burned.

It is evident that it will be some days and perhaps weeks before any accurate idea of the total number of dead is available. Many of the terror stricken fled into the interior woodlands. They have not been heard from since. Others who possibly survived the storm of fire are believed to have died from exhaustion.

Some survivors are coming in with their clothing torn and their limbs cut from their mad rush through the woods. Some told of stumbling over bodies of those who had died on the way.

The number drowned in Porcupine lake is about forty. Some bodies were found in shallow water, showing that exhaustion had overcome the victims as they reached the cooling water.

PROPERTY LOSS IS HEAVY

Immense Damage Done by Brush Fires in Michigan.

Detroit, July 13.—The destruction of the twin villages of Au Sable and Oscoda and the $500,000 fire at Alpena, which were not due to forest fires, probably caused exaggerated reports of heavy damage and possible loss of life from forest fires in the northern counties of the Southern peninsula of Michigan.

Towns along the Detroit and Mackinac railroad, from Posen, in Presque Island county, to Onaway, in Cheboygan, suffered considerable damage but many towns that were reported burning are now reported safe. These include Lewiston, Turner and Alger.

Reports of loss of life at Au Sable and Oscoda are persistent, but it is impossible to confirm them. Most of them originated from the stories of panic stricken refugees who in their mad rush from the burning towns saw many people fall from exhaustion and counted all these as inevitably lost, some of the reports estimating the dead as high as fifty.

Six towns between Alpena and Cheboygan that were thought to be threatened with destruction, escaped with serious property losses when the forest fires invaded their precincts

TWENTY-ONE ARE KILLED IN MINE

Explosion Occurs in Colliery at Sykesville, Pa.

Dubois, Pa., July 17.—Twenty-one miners were killed in an explosion in the shaft of the Cascade Coal and Coke company's mine at Skyesville, nine miles from here.

All the dead but three are foreigners. The explosion was slight as evidenced by the small damage done in the mine, but the deadly afterdamp is responsible for most of the deaths

OLEO FRAUDS ARE ALLEGED

Twenty-four Indicted By United States Jury.

Chicago, July 14.—Two revenue officers and a former government official are charged with accepting bribes in indictments returned by a federal grand jury. Twenty-one officers and employes of butterine manufactories are charged with conspiracy to defraud the government out of the butterine tax, the bribery of government officials, it is charged, being a part of the conspiracy.

SUIT TO COMPEL DISSOCIATION

Government After Coal and Railway Companies.

SECOND MOVE IN NEW FIGHT

Action Brought to Compel Bona Fide Separation of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company From the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company—Case Parallels Recent One Against the Lehigh Valley.

Washington, July 18.—A government suit to compel a bona fide dissociation of the Philadelphia and Reading railway company from the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company was filed in the federal court in Philadelphia. The action parallels a recent one against the Lehigh Valley and is the government's second move in its new fight to separate the coal carrying railroads from their virtual control of the coal business.

As in the Lehigh Valley suit the government charges that the coal company and its subsidiaries are buying anthracite from independent operators along the line of the Philadelphia and Reading railway with the object of removing competition, transporting it to market at a loss and there regulating the selling price. The coal company loses on such transactions, the government alleges, that the railway company may profit from the freight charges.

As a further evidence that the coal company is not a bona fide corporation, but a mere adjunct of the railroad and a device for evading the commodities clause of the interstate commerce law, the government charges that the officers of the railway company and the coal company are the same and that the railway company has advanced more than $70,000,000 to the coal company, which is carried as an open charge.

The government cites that the railway company has paid as high as 4 per cent for money for the coal company's operations, while the coal company has seldom paid any interest at all and never more than 2 per cent to the railway company.

SURPRISE FOR ATTORNEYS

Federal Suit to Separate Coal and Railway Companies.

Philadelphia, July 18.—Attorneys for the three Reading companies appeared surprised when informed that the government had instituted action to dissociate the Philadelphia and Reading Railway company and the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company in the mining and transportation of anthracite coal.

The Reading, in its answer to the government's suit some years ago, declared the railway company did not own one share of Reading Coal and Iron company stock; that the stock was owned by the Reading company, a holding corporation and not a transportation company. When final argument came up the Reading companies were not called on to defend themselves and the decisions of the circuit court and the United States supreme court did not include the Reading companies.

GREED OF ICE COMPANIES

Reason Given for High Price in New York City.

New York, July 18.—From the facts as they are alleged to have been found in an investigation by Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo "it would appear that the present high price of ice is largely due to the greed of the ice companies in refusing to take necessary measures to supply the city's wants."

In reporting his findings to the mayor the commissioner says that of 480 independent ice dealers interviewed 229 complained of prices charged by the larger wholesalers; that about July 1, when the hot weather set in, the largest of the New York companies—the Knickerbocker Ice company—raised the price from $2.25 to $3, and at one East Side house more than doubled the price to $5 a ton.

A Mighty Big Can.

An Irish harvester found himself in a small Scottish town. At the gas works he saw a gasometer for the first time in his life and stopped a countryman who was passing to ask, "What's that big round thing there standing on end?"

"Get out with you," said the Irishman. "You never saw a dinner can as big as that in your life."

DR. WILEY.

The attempt to oust from his post Government Chemist Dr. Harvey W. Wiley centers attention on ont of the most picturesque and virlie figures of official Washington.

Dr. Wiley got through Hanover college at Madison, Ind., with a room for which he paid but 50 cents a week, through his four years course. He tramped home once a week, returing with a seven day's supply of corn meal, potatoes, bread, and molasses, which constituted his living. He never owned an overcoat turough that period, and yet he led his class both in book work and athletics.

Dr. Wiley began his work as head of the bureau of chemistry in a little office in the cellar of the old agricultural building, with four assistants and a dish washer, working for years and a dish washer, working for years on a clerk's salary. Now he has a building of his own, a staff of 800 and has the spending of $8,000.00 a year.

Dr. Wiley is a born experimenter, and early got to work on the sugar and other agricultural industries. He studied the way soils, fertilizer, rain and sun affect plant life. His experiments enabled the Louisiana cane growers to insrease their production 30 per cent, and they led to the development of the great sugar beet industries of Colorado and Michigan.

Later Dr. Wiley began to get after the adulteration of food stuffs. He showed how maple sugar, molasses, honey, etc., were being stuffed with glucose, and how various prepared foods were being doctored with salicylic acid, formidahyde, sulphate of copper, borax, and benzoate of soda. He conducted the "poison squads" of clerks who volunteered to have their health broken down to test the effects of the poisons that food manufacturers were using in their product.

Dr. Wiley is a fellow who has always run his bureau in his own way. It would not be at all strange if as charged he had run it more or less contrary to law. He has trodden on more toes than any other man in the United States, and he seems to enjoy hearing the squealing that results from sore corns.

Dr. Wiley is a round faced, bullet headed, square mouthed sort of a man, and some fur will be distributed thru the atmosphere before he quits his desk at Washington, D. C.

HUMAN INFIRMITIES IN RAILROADING.

The frightful accident last week at Bridgeport, Ct., by which a famous Washington-Botson train was frightfully wrecked, again brings the American public up against the irreducible human element in the matter of railroad accidents.

It is often said that our frightful national record for railroad slaughter is due to the poor equipments of granger roads. But in this case a horrible wreck takes place on one of our finst developed lines.

The expenditure of millions for safety appliances proved helpless to avert a tragedy caused by taking a cross over at 60 miles an hour when 15 miles was the limit of safety.

In every profession and trade occasional human lapses occur, but else where they do not occasion much trouble. Every newspaper man, for instance, may write Smith when he means Jones, and usually the proofreader corrects it. If the mistake gets by, it is very annoying, but usually harmless.

The problem in railroading is how to prevent these occasional lapses that are a part of our wobbly human nature.

In American railroad life, safety has been looked upon as secondary a luxury beyond our reach. Satistics show from four to five times as many accidents per mile of train runs as in Europe. It is not a question of speed altogether. The single German state of Prussia has 43 trains making an average of 38 miles per hour, while the great trunk lines connecting New York, Buffalo, Pittsburg, St. Louis, and Chicago had but 26 of these trains at the time of this computation.

Disciplining men concerned in accidents does not alwayes remedy the trouble. Frequently that merely substitutes an inexperienced man for one who is trained to the business.

There is too much taking of chances in our American temperament. Some of us are still willing to keep up the gamble even when human life is the stake.

While railroading attracts some of the finest types of men to be found among our laboring pople, its novelty and change also draw many reckless characters. To get the "rough rider" type weeded out before they get into responsible places is one of the most serious tasks of the management.

JULY GARDEN AND ORCHARD NOTES

Keep the cultivator going. It not only kills weeds, but conserves moisture.

Cucumbers for pickles may be planted yet. Boston Pickling is a good variety.

Do not cultivate beans when the foliage is wet. They will become spotted or rusted.

If the onions are not growing well, a little nitrate of soda or hen manure sown broadcast, before or during a rain, often helps them to fill out.

Chicken wire makes a good trellis for tomatoes. A single stake will do or a barrel-hoop supported about two feet from the ground by three stakes is good.

If dead and unslightly limbs have not been taken off the trees, now is a good time to do so. Paint with white lead the place from which the limb came. Cut close to the tree, and do a clean, smooth job.

If the strawberry plants are vigorous, and the bed not too weedy, it may pay to renovate it for another year. Mow the plants close to the ground, rake off the foliage and burn it. Plow a furrow, cutting out all but about one foot of the row, and then go through and take out the weeds and diseased plants in this row. Fill the furrow with throughly-rotted manure and cultivate the soil back. Keep up a thorough cultivation of the soil all the season.

REPAIRS ON THE BARN

Every business man, in making out the annual balance sheet which is to show the profit or loss on business for the year, allows a certain amount for depreciation in the value of his equipment and buildings and for the cost of repairs. He also finds a slack-period at some time during the year, when the buildings, machinery and other equipments are overhauled. Unless he does this, he will find that the efficiency and producing power of his plant will not be kept up to the standard.

Every farmer who is in the live stock business is confronted with this same problem. He has his barn and other stable equipment, which remains idle a part of the year, but plays an important part in the returns from the herd during the winter. It should receive a thorough overhauling during the summer, so as to have everything in readiness when fall comes. The floors unless they are cement, will probably need repairing in various places. In dirt floors, all holes that have been made during the winter shtould be filled with clay and packed. The inside of the barn should receive a thorough cleaning, and then be given a good coat of whitewash, which will make it lighter as well as more beautiful. The mangers stanchions, doors or windows may need some repair; these can be taken care of during a rainy day. To increase the life of the barn, it should receive an occasional coat of paint. There may be places in the barn that last winter let in too much cold air, to the discomfort of the cows. These should be taken care of before the rush of the season is on. There may also be something wrong with the ventilation in the barn, which can be remedied by a little work and a few boards.

These points may seem like small matters, but unless looked after they will do much toward keeping down the milk-flow of the cows, as well as reducing the size of the cream-check. Further than this, there is much pleasure and satisfaction in working in a place that can be kept clean, and where everything is convenient and handy. With these things taken care of, and good handling and feeding, the dairy herd,—where such is kept—should be a profitable adjunct of the farm during the winter.

FINANCE KINGS FACE INQUIRY

Steel Committee Will Probe Ore Rates to Pittsburg.

SOME FIGURES OUTRAGEOUS

Thorough Investigation to Be Made of Alleged Agreement Between James J. Hill, John D. Rockefeller and J. Pierpont Morgan, by Which Ore Rates to Independents From Minnesota Were Made Four Times What They Should Be.

Washington, July 18.—A thorough inquiry into an alleged agreement between James J. Hill, John D. Rockefeller and J. Pierpont Morgan by which ore rates to independents from the Mesaba and adjacent ore fields to Pittsburg, it is charged, were made four times what they should be, is about to be begun under the direction of the Stanley steel committee.

Members of the committee believe that the alleged Hill-Rockefeller-Morgan agreement offers the most fruitful subject of inquiry yet undertaken and that it will be demonstrated that as a result of long time contracts with the independents the steel trust is in control of the situation so far as fixing the price of manufactured steel is concerned.

The steel committee will go to New York Aug. 27 to stay several weeks. Hearings will be held there daily and it is expected that J. Pierpont Morgan and other men of great prominence in the financial world will be called as witnesses.

Morgan is expected home from Europe about Aug. 1 and while Mr. Stanley would not say that it was his intention to call him it is nevertheless understood that both the Democratic and Republican steel probers desire to hear what he has to say under oath concerning the formation of the United States Steel corporation and the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company. In fact, nothing could be learned concerning the witnesses the committee will call, although it is known that a list has been made up.

Long Executive Session.

The committee had a long executive session and concluded that before going to New York it would be well to hear the testimony of Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations under the bureau of commerce and labor, whose reports on the United States Steel corporation, compiled by experts of the department after several years of investigation, was recently published. It is also probable that the experts who did the actual work of inquiry will likewise be called.

As a result of Chairman Stanley's recent trip to Pittsburg the steel committee unanimously adopted a resolution directing F. H. McRae, the committee's expert accountant, to proceed to that city to inspect the minutes of the steel corporation's executive committee and the books of the concern, with a view to determining the cost of production of the various kinds of steel products.

More important than this, however, is the committee's direction to Mr. McRae to make a particularly careful inquiry into the ore rates on the steel corporation's lines from the Mesabi and contiguous ore fields to the Great Lakes and from the lakes to Pittsburg. Some members of the committee assert that there is at present on hand in the committee's files conclusive proof of violations of the law by these roads in connection with the carriage of ore for independent concerns.

THE PENNINGTON COUNTY FAIR

Everything is now ready for You. Aerial Flights, Shows, Ball Games, Free Acts.

There are only five more days left before the big Pennington County Fair to be held at Thief River Falls on August 2d, 3d, and 4th. Everything indicates that there will be the largest crowd ever in attendance at the county fair. Every citizen of Pennington and surrounding counties, who is interested in what northern Minnesota is raising in the way of high quality farm produce and prize stock, will certainly be there. In no other year has conditions been so favorable for showing what this section of Minnesota can produce. Any special information desired in regard to the fair can be obtained from W. W. Prichard, President or W. H. Akre at First National Bank.

Ample provision has been made for the entertainment and enlightment of the public. A delegation from the fair association attended the aeroplane flights given at Grand Forks the latter part of last week in honor of the Minnesota Auto Club while on its tour to Helena, Montana. The aeroplane which is booked for the Pennington County Fair made two flights.

During the first flight the machine circled around over the heads of the crowd in about a mile circle and alighted in 10 minutes. The second flight was made immediately after the first and extended from the Dobmeier farm, four miles west of Grand Forks, to the state fair grounds where flights are being given this week during the state fair. Two flights will be given here each day, one at 2 p. m., and the other later in the afternoon.

There will be plenty of good horse races. Aside from the local horses, several fast horses from Roseau, Warren and Crookston will be here.

A purse of nearly $600 will be distributed.

The following are scheduled:

2:17 trot or pace
2:30 trot or pace
Farmers race (running)
Slow race
Gentlemen's driving race.

Considerable enthusiasm is rampant among local horse-men. We have inside information that the gentlemen's driving race is going to be the most hotly contested race ever pulled off in Minnesota.

Three Free Acts will be located on the Fair Grounds to entertain the people between horse races, aeroplane flights, etc.

Each evening there will be a balloon ascention in the down town district.

Those who wish entertainment later in the evening can attend the street shows. Nothing but clean shows, morally, will be allowed to come in.

On August 3d the "Indians" will play the Warren ball team. There will be a big bunch of rooters from Warren accompanied by the band. On August 4th the "Indians" will play Red Lake Falls. Both of these games will be interesting from start to finish. The "Indians" have broken even with both teams so far this year. The purse is $75 for each of these games.

The Crookston and Thief River Commercial Travelers will entertain the public the first day with a few new wrinkles in baseball science.

BOYS' JUDGING CONTEST

A Chance For Youngsters To Show Their Skill.

For the first time in the history of the Minnesota State Fair the boys of the state will be given an opportunity to show their practical knowledge of live stock. The ones with the most knowledge will be liberally rewarded.

The boys' judging contest, as arranged by Secretary Simpson has been enthusiastically received by officals of the farm schools, those most interested in the agricultural development of Minnesota and by the boys themselves. Owing to the fact that the contest is a new feature it is difficult to get the information concerning it into the hands of all those who wolud be interested. For this reason the state fair management would appreciate it if any boy who desires to enter the contest or any person knowing such a boy or boys, will send the names to Secretary J. C. Simpson, State Fair Grounds, Hamline, Minn.

Eleven scholarships in the agricultural schools of St. Anthony Park, Crookston or Morris will be awarded to the boys who do the most efficient work in judging classes of horses, cattle, swine and samples of corn and wheat, assigned for the purpose and writing reasons substantiating their judgment.

The contest will take place in the live stock pavilion on the state fair grounds, beginning promptly at 9 a. m., Monday, Sept. 4, 1911. President C. W. Glotfelter is superintendent of the contest. The rules and regulations are as follows:

Rules and Regulations Governing Eligibility of Contestants

1. Any boy living in the state of Minnesota under 21 years of age who is entitled to enter one of the Schools of Agriculture and who has never been regularly classified in any college or having taken any more than one year in any school of agriculture may enter this contest; this restriction to in no way apply to those who have attended four week short courses.

10. Referring to text books, or other data, or giving or receiving of opinions by contestnats among themselves or from any other person, on any class thereof, being passed upon, or to be passed upon, or before written judgments of all contestants are in the hands of the superintendent, is strictly prohibited and a disregard of this rule may expel an contestant or contestants, a party thereto, as may be determined by the superintendent.

Special $50 Prize.

Recognizing the important aid given by various persons and associations in furthering the boys' judging contest, the state fair management hereby offer a special prize of $50 to any person within the state of Minnesota who shall be instrumental in bringing into the contest the largest number of competitors. Fair associations are also eligible to this prize.

Rules Governing Such Competition.

DUSTLESS STREETS.

Last Friday, under the direction of street commissioner Melby, the city started to apply number 4 road oil to eight blocks in the business district. The oil is made on a forty per cent asphaltum base, the remainder being crude oil with most of the inflammable substances removed.

The loose dirt is removed from the surface of the street after which a supply of oil is put on and spread out thoroughly with fiber brushes. In about eight hours after application of the oil, pure sand is sprinkled over to absorb and work in with the surplus oil. After forty-eight hours the streets are opened to traffic.

The oil keeps the water out of the ground, so no mud can be formed after a rain. The streets of Thief River Falls are in especially good condition for the application of oil on account of the oval shape which has been given them by constant dragging.

The use of road oil is an experiment here, but in the cities and thruout dusty states like California it has been giving perfect satisfaction for several years. The oil is supposed to wear for a year, each successive year taking less oil than the preceeding one. Once in awhile a year can be skipped.

This year the city ordered about 8000 gallons at a cost of 5¾ cents a gallon. Next year the cost will be much less on account of the lesser amount of oil required. It looks now as though the cost of keeping down the dust the new way will be eventually much cheaper than the old way of sprinkling. If it keeps the dust down it will have accomplished something that sprinkling never did, because sprinkling helps for a few minutes at a time only.

ANOTHER GAME

Last Sunday the Plummer baseball aggregation proceded to Oklee and encountered in a game of baseball with that place. The Oklee team proved to strong for the Plummer boys, altho they held them down good the score being 12 to 13 in favor of Oklee. This makes two games between Plummer and Oklee, the latter having won the victories twice.

The Plummer team this yeay is somewhat broken up, not having all of their Star players. Just the same the home boys are all self confident of each other and due credit will be given them for what they have done so far.

LAND SHOW TO OPEN

From December 12 to December 23, inclusive, the Northwestern Land Products Show will be held in the St. Paul Auditorium under the auspieces of the Northwestern Development league.

These dates were announced today after advices had been received from the various Western states and the dates of other shows and expositions had been considered. The dates selected give those who will exhibit in Chicago an opportunity to bring their exhibits here. The Chicago show closes December 9.

The entire enterprise has but one object in view, according to officials of the league, to aid in the development of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Alaska.

More Than a Mere Land Show.

It is more than simply a land show, hence the incorporated name will be the Northwestern Land Products Exhibit, and it may include not only those things grown but things taken from the soil. The show will be more than a mere instrument for the use of the land men in selling land. It will show graphically what can be produced on land in territory west of the Twin City, what it costs to produce the crops and the profits.

St. Paul and Minneapolis business interests have pledged their co-operation on the theory that every man and every dollar put to work in the states interested, will be a direct benefit to the local markets.

An Educational Movement.

The Northwestern Development league is defined by Secretary Will A. Campbell as "an educational movement," and he says, "after all, a booster is an educator, seeking to make people acquainted with the facts, and only the facts, about a certain section, state or city."

"Launched on these lines," Mr. Campbell said, "the land show to be given in St. Paul is to be void of selfish interests. It is not to make any money, and the Northwestern Development league has nothing to sell, its only object being to attract settlers, arouse interest and educate people who are moving West to the advantages of making their homes in one of the states represented in the league. It matters not to this organization whether a man with his family and capital settle in Minnesota, go on to the Dakotas, or choose a home on the far Pacific coast—just so they stay in Twin City territory."

Officials of the League.

It has been decided that H. H. Bigelow and Eli Warner of St. Paul, with P. L. Howe of Minneapolis, will constitute the finance committee, and that Will A. Campbell, secretary of the league, will be general manager of the show. He has been instructed to secure the necessary experts, and work is under way for the show.

Some interesting exhibits are already in sight, including a ur [illegible] e exhibit from Alaska, which [illegible] vill be shown in the way of an [illegible] kan village. There are to be e [illegible] tainment features which will me [illegible] he show an attractive mid-winter [illegible] usement for the half million pe [illegible] of the Twin City.—Dispatch.

You may not succeed in doing what you want to do; but you ought to be doing something.

The vote in the U. S. Senate on the Reciprocity Treaty was 56 for and 27 against. Our protests out here in the Northwest look like little potatoes to the Big Guns in the East.

The Democrats are wily politicians. Look at this showing if you doubt it: On the protected list are cotton, sugar, rice and Texas cattle; all produced by Democratic farmers. On the unprotected list are wheat, barley, butter, eggs, hogs, sheep and northern cattle; all products of Republican states. The Democrats have taken care of their farmers in fine style, while the farmer of the North is betrayed into the hands of capital by his Republican party. It is not difficult to foretell what the farmers will do with Taft on the ticket in 1912.

ELECTION IN CANADA

The best news we have to offer our farmer friends is embodied in a dispatch from Ottawa, Canada, dated July 25, and reads as follows:

> That reciprocity with the United States will have to get the indorsement of the voters of Canada was the decision of a party caucus of the Conservation today. "No backdown, but continued obstruction of the reciprocity measure until the government is forced to dissolve parliment and go to the country," was, in effect, the attitude.
> The Liberal caucus thereupon decided that the election should be held as soon as possible.

This may delay the bad effects of the reciprocity treaty in some measure till after our farmers market their fall grain.

JAIL FOR TRUST LAW-BREAKERS.

Attorney-General Wickersham's announcement that the government has distinct plans for criminal action against trust magnates will be greeted with a dismal squeal from the "interests."

The trouble with these men is that they have never grasped the idea that one's rewards ought to be in proportion to one's service to humanity, and no more.

The trouble with the great majority of modern fortunes is that they are not gained by producing anything, by introducing efficiencies or making a saving for the public. A certain type of men have learned that by shuffling the cards that represent other men's production, they can always slip a certain portion of them up their own sleeves, which do not represent anything saved for the public.

The disposition of the trusts to drive other people out of business goes against the inmost grain of American temperament. Our people have a fatal weakness for money grabbing. But there is at the same time a strain of independent idealism running in their blood that demands for every man a fair chance in the race.

When our fathers revolted from England, an economist might have been able to argue that it would have been cheaper to take whatever crumbs King George felt good natured enough to hand out to us. But this strain of idealism revolted against a submission which however much more profitable it might seem from a money view point, ran up against this idealistic love of liberty and fair play.

Similarly, the right of any man to engage in any business, to obtain meanwhile the same privileges that are granted to the big fellow, to be subjected to no unusual competition on account of the small size of his business, touches the heart of our political idealism. Sooner or later, our people will place those who deny that right in the same quarters as other thieves.

MUZZLING THE NEWSPAPERS

Newspapers are a mighty unhandy thing to have around, just as the police are. At least, for people who have deals to put through in the dark, or burglaries to commit.

The latest attempt to gag the newspapers is in Ohio, where a bill has been favorably reported in the Legislature to put editors and publishers in jail, if they exact a promise from candidates for office. There is also a fine of $100 to $500.

It is a newspaper's business to record the buyings and sellings in the market, and legislators whose votes are put up at auction will no doubt favor a law that will harass honest publishers.

No doubt some men will vote for such a bill thoughtlessly, or from honest motives. Gov. Harmon favors the proposed law, and no doubt he honestly thinks it will remove an evil.

Let such men think how such a proposal would hamper the publisher seeking to defend the rights of the people.

The people naturally want to know how their representatives are going to vote on important public matters. Any citizen has a perfect right to ask a candidate to pledge himself to vote a certain way. The candidate has a perfect right to make such a pledge, or to decline to make it, just as he sees fit.

Newspapers naturally want to know something about a candidates's point of view before wasting their good space on supporting him just as the voter hates to cast his ballot for a man who afterwards acts against his wishes.

The question whether candidates should or should not pledge themselves in advance is not one that can be settled in an sweeping way. As a general thing, the independent legislator keeps his mind open until the final show down, and disikes to tie himself up in advance. But occasionally there come square issues of right and wrong, where the voters want the sheep and the goats lined up before the ballot box by definite pledges. In seeking to secure such pledges, the newspaper is simply the agent of the people.

RECIPROCITY VOTE DECISIVE

Bill Passes Senate by Fifty-three to Twenty-seven.

MANY ROLL CALLS TAKEN

Preceding Passage of the Measure All Amendments Offered Are Voted Down.

Washington, July 23.—The Canadian reciprocity bill passed the senate without amendment by 53 to 27. All amendments had been previously defeated. It becomes law upon the president's signature, the senate measure being the bill that passed the house.

The final vote on the bill came at the close of a lively session. There were numerous roll calls on the various amendments, but no attempt at any time to delay final action. The senate chamber was well filled, many members of the house having gathered in the rear of the hall.

News of the passage of the reciprocity bill was telephoned at once to the White House. President Taft made no attempt to conceal his pleasure. Following was the vote on the measure:

FIVE THOUSAND BUILDINGS BURNED

Part of Foreign Section of Constantinople Destroyed.

Constantinople, July 25.—More than 5,000 buildings were destroyed and many thousands of persons rendered homeless by an incendiary fire which raged in the Stamboul, or native quarter of Constantinople, for nearly twenty-four hours.

Cherket Pasha, minister of war, and one of Turkey's most famous generals, was injured by a falling beam while directing successful efforts to save the ministry of war building.

The fire is said to have been started simultaneously in six places. Official circles attribute it to opponents of the present government.

A Note That Was Paid.

History is constantly repeating itself. Once upon a time a landlady in Washington called on President Andrew Jackson and told of a government clerk who owed her a big bill for board. In those days it was easy to have access to the White House. President Jackson listened to her story and advised her to get a promissory note from the clerk and put it in bank. She replied:

"I've done that twice, general, and he won't pay even then."

"Is that so?" said the president in surprise. "Now you go and get his note and bring it to me. I simply want to see it, and I'm sure that the clerk will pay that note. Go and bring it to me."

The landlady did so, and soon returned with the promissory note. The president turned it over and wrote across the back of it his own indorsement: "A. Jackson."

That note was paid at maturity.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Waves in Solid Metal.

As illustrating the advances in metallurgy and engineering it has been demonstrated that solid metals may reveal by their structure the vibrations to which they have been subjected. In explaining this phenomenon experiments have been shown proving that a beautiful wave structure can be imparted to the surface of mercury by the vibrations of a tuning fork, and that even the surface of solid lead which had been subjected to similar vibrations possesses a structure resembling that of a vibrating surface of mercury. Mild steel has been defined as a "solid solution" of iron and carbon, free from cinders. Metallurgists have doubled the strength of steel as it was known in its early days.—Scientific American.

Relieved.

"Where did you get these examples of faultily constructed sentences?" asked Dr. Campbell, the great rhetorician, of a student.

"Out of one of your books, doctor."

"What? Where? Out of one of my books?"

"Yes, sir; out of your 'Rhetoric.'"

"Out of my 'Rhetoric!'" roared the doctor. "Impossible! Never did I make use of such language. You are mistaken; badly mistaken. But—but—where in my 'Rhetoric' did you find such composition?" he demanded angrily.

"In the part, 'Sentences to be Corrected.'"

"O-h-h-h-h-h! A-h-h-h-h! Yes, yes," said the relieved doctor.—Philadelphia North American.

Too Much For Her.

Calling one day to see an old friend who was visiting her married son, I inquired of the colored maid who answered the bell, "Is Mrs. Smith at home?"

"Yas'm, she home," the girl replied, showing no inclination to invite me in. "She here, all right, but she got a misery in de haid."

"Mrs. Smith senior?" I asked with concern.

"Seen me!" she exclaimed suspiciously. "Cose she seen me. Huccome she ain' see me w'en she hire me las' night huh own self?" And she indignantly shut the door.—Lippincott's.

The Worst.

"My wife has been having some trouble with her throat," confided a friend, "and I got pretty worried about it and sent for a doctor. He examined her and looked very grave, and that scared me even worse. So I said, 'Tell me the worst at once, Doc,' and he whispered, 'She will recover her voice.' And my wife overheard the question and the answer, and now Doc and I are both in bad."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Resentment.

"Did you say I was a cheap trickster?" asked the ward worker.

"No, I didn't," replied the man who is close to the boss. "I merely said you were a trickster."

"Well, that's all right, but don't you ever insinuate that I am doing a cut rate business."—Washington Star.

A Tragedy.

"How did you like my new tragedy?"

"Tragedy? I thought it was comedy."

"So did I till I got my check for the profits."

Paradoxical.

"All this time the cashier was burning the candle at both ends."

"And keeping it dark. Well, I declare!"—Exchange.

A Challenge

By REGINALD D'HAVEN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Monty Sherman was ambitious to fight a duel.

Monty was still young when he married and went on the Mediterranean trip to Italy for a wedding tour. He talked so fiercely about what he would do if he had any trouble with any one in foreign lands that his bride was nearly scared to death.

In Rome Mr. and Mrs. Sherman were constantly to be seen, w[illegible] engaged in sightseeing, seate[illegible] heir favorite sidewalk outside [illegible] in the Piazza Colonna, the lady [illegible] g something, the man smokin[illegible] garettes. One day Monty wished to go a short distance around the corner to buy some cigars, and his wife chose to remain where she was till he returned. While he was gone an Italian faultlessly dressed stepped up to the bride and, raising his hat politely, said something in Italian which she did not understand. She turned away from him, and he passed on.

When her husband returned, forgetting his duelistic propensities, his wife told him of the occurrence. He at once became very much enraged.

"But the man was very polite."

"That doesn't matter. He shall apologize."

Mrs. Sherman tried to reason with him, but to no purpose. He rushed into the cafe and asked the proprietor if he had seen the man who had spoken to his wife. The proprietor said that he had not, but called several of the waiters who happened to notice the episode, one of whom said the man was Signor Capponi, who came to the cafe every afternoon.

Monty could not wait for the next afternoon to avenge the insult to his young bride, so he asked the proprietor for Capponi's address. The proprietor gave it as No. — Via Nationale. He tried to say something else, but Monty did not understand him. Indeed, he was so hot that all he wished to know was Capponi's street and number, which he received written on a card.

Then Monty took his wife to their hotel on the Via Cavour and, leaving her there, went to the number on the Via Nationale given him, where he found a store for the sale of books and stationery. Monty, who was bent on doing things as he had always read of their being done in affairs of honor, entered the store and asked a clerk who advanced to meet him if he spoke English.

"Si, signor, a leetle."

Monty thereupon told him that he wished to see Signor Capponi. The clerk managed with difficulty to tell Monty that Signor Capponi was out. Then Monty told him to tell Signor Capponi when he came in that he had insulted a lady and there must be an apology or a fight. Then he threw down his card on the counter. The clerk took it up and began to talk to Monty about it in a mixed language of three-fourths Italian and one-fourth execrable English. He got out the words "How much?" to which Monty replied, "Immediately." The clerk made a pencil mark on the card, and Monty, taking it from him, wrote Grand Hotel on it. Then he stalked out, saying that he would await a reply at the address given.

Now, if there is a matter of life and death on the tapis it is better to have an interpreter. The clerk had not understood one word of what Monty had said, and vice versa. Monty returned to his hotel, where he tried to act before his wife as if nothing of importance had happened. But the eye of love is not to be deceived. Mrs. Sherman worked upon him till he confessed that he had challenged Signor Capponi to deadly combat. She was in despair. She was sure he would be killed. She was so troubled that he half regretted he had been so precipitate, especially since his wife, who understood a little Italian, said she thought the man asked her if he might not take an order for some merchandise.

Monty received no reply to his challenge that evening, and before he went to bed his wife secured a promise from him that if Signor Capponi did not accept he (Monty) would let the matter drop. The next day passed, but still Capponi sent no representative to arrange a meeting. The bride was beginning to hope that the trouble had fallen through when a waiter announced that some one wished to see Signor Sherman in the reception room. Mrs. Sherman insisted on going down with her husband, and he was unable to prevent her. Entering the reception room together, an Italian, handsomely dressed, arose, poking a card at Monty.

Mrs. Sherman gasped and clutched her heart. Monty looked at the card and was surprised to see that it was the one he had left at Capponi's, pencil marks and all. Then the visitor handed him a little packet. Monty pulled off the cover and found a hundred of his own visiting cards. Then the man shoved a bill under his nose for 10 francs.

Mrs. Sherman gave a sigh of relief. "Oh, how fortunate!" she exclaimed. "They must have mistaken the card you left for a sample and supposed you wished some cards printed."

Monty smiled a sickly smile.

The next day at the cafe on the piazza colonna they saw Capponi soliciting orders for visiting cards.

All of which goes to show that men who send challenges for deadly combat should do so in the language of the country.

SPOKANE WINS FREIGHT CASE

Commerce Commission Settles Important Rate Controversy.

ORDERS MATERIAL SLASHES

Railroads Have Exacted From Shippers to Intermediate Points Higher Rates Than Were Charged to San Francisco, Seattle and Other Pacific Coast Points—Decision Fixes Rates and Gives Lines Until Oct. 15 to Adjust Tariffs Accordingly.

Washington, July 25.—In what are known as the Spokane-Reno-Pacific-coast cases the interstate commerce commission ordered material reductions in freight rates from the East to points between Denver and the western terminals of the great transcontinental railroads.

For many years the railroads have exacted from shippers to intermediate points, such as Spokane and Reno, higher rates on eastern freights than were charged for the much longer hauls to Seattle, San Francisco and other Pacific coast points. The theory has been that the railroads must meet water competition to the Pacific coast. The higher rates to intermediate points, arbitrarily fixed, have been defended by a comparison with the coast rates plus a theoretical back haul from the coast to the inland stations along the line.

The commission recognizes the right of a railroad to meet water competition to Pacific coast points, but practically wipes out the back haul rates to inter-Rocky mountain territory. It lays down what it considers would be fair and just rates to various freight zones in the West and gives the railroads until Oct. 15 to adjust their tariffs accordingly.

The commission also lays down the important principle that hereafter railroads will not be permitted to fix arbitrary market limits and that hereafter commercial conditions rather than the will of railway traffic managers shall control rates on transcontinental transportation.

The decisions announced are of far-reaching importance. They affect directly all freight rates between the Atlantic ocean and the Pacific coast. Particularly they affect the rates in the territory lying between Denver and Pacific coast points. Hereafter the rates paid by shippers will be governed by a strict interpretation of the long and short haul clause.

HEARING ON GRAIN RATES

Commerce Commission Takes Testimony at Superior.

Superior, Wis., July 25.—The hearing of the Superior Commercial club's grain rate case, in which unreasonable and discriminatory rates from parts of the Dakotas, Montana, Iowa and Nebraska in favor of Chicago and Minneapolis are alleged, was held before the interstate commerce commission here. Commissioners E. E. Clark and B. H. Meyers presided.

An array of half a hundred traffic experts and attorneys representing several big railroad lines, the Duluth board of trade, Chicago board of trade, Minneapolis chamber of commerce, Milwaukee chamber of commerce and other interests were in attendance.

At the conclusion of the testimony the case was set over indefinitely for final decision, until the Duluth and Milwaukee hearings are considered.

HEARST IS FOR HARRISON

Hopes to Line Up California, Illinois and New York in Support.

Chicago, July 25.—When A. M. Lawrence returns to Chicago from his trip to the coast he will have in his pocket, according to the expectations of the "Hearst-Harrison" Democrats, a signed pledge from the leaders of California's Democracy to support Mayor Carter H. Harrison for president at the national convention.

When Mr. Lawrence returns he will not remain, but will leave the Hearst interests here in other hands and proceed to New York, where he will try to repeat the performance he is accredited with having put on in California.

Hearst leaders here believe they can swing the Illinois delegation for Mayor Harrison and they figure that with New York and California on the band wagon at the start they will have little trouble in nominating Harrison.

OPTIONS ON CANADIAN HAY

Milwaukee, July 25.—The central market of the West has begun a movement to take immediate advantage of the reciprocity treaty by beginning at once to option Canadian hay for sale in the United States.

Hay prices advanced here for the seventh consecutive market day, reaching the highest figure since the Civil war, choice timothy being quoted at $25 to $26 a ton.

A SENSITIVE PAIR

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

This is a story of the old army in ante civil war times.

Among the graduates of the West Point Military academy class of 18— was Paul Lambert. He was adjutant of the corps, which is a prominent position among the cadets, and was graduated in the engineers. There was present at the graduating exercises that year Florence Rutherford, a young lady equally prominent with Lambert. The two had met there in June once before and had been much together.

Perhaps there is no place more conducive to lovemaking than a military post, and for the purpose West Point stands pre-eminent on account of the youth of those assembled. The cadets are in camp near the hotel, and when they are on leave couples may be seen on the piazza or starting up to old Fort Putnam or down Flirtation walk—indeed, anywhere they like within "bounds."

Paul Lambert and Florence Rutherford were one of these couples and much observed for their physical beauty. As soon as Lambert was given his commission he made a proposition of marriage to Miss Rutherford. He had been in doubt as to his acceptance, for the girl, though she permitted his attentions whenever he talked "spoon"—to use a slang phrase—was very chary of a response. But every lover is in doubt until he receives a consent. Lambert when he was refused received as great a blow as if he had been sure of an acceptance.

The girl was very conscientious and the man very sensitive. She took too much pains in interrogating her feelings, and he attached too much importance to her refusal. Had he persevered she would have yielded. But our paths in life are determined often by some small incident. The worlds of these two persons were determined by Lambert's failure to ask the same question twice. A consent upon the second asking would have made him inexpressibly happy. The reason he did not ask again was because he had been so sure of himself that he considered that the girl could not fail to recognize her own feelings. Had she felt toward him as he felt toward her there could be no mistaking the emotion.

The consequence of this reasoning on both sides was that two persons who seemed to have been made for each other were kept apart and consequently entered upon lives the honey of which had been extracted. Lambert never dreamed that Miss Rutherford regretted her decision the moment it had been made, and she could not understand how, if he loved her, he should be content without her. And if he was not content without her he must surely try to win her. This similar reasoning in each, though nothing in itself, served to make a chasm between them.

Five years passed, during which neither of the lovers married. Then Miss Rutherford, being assured by a friend of Lambert that he would never marry, taking the reason for granted, wrote her lover a note, reopening the case.

But what was her surprise to receive a reply ignoring what she had intended. All her pride revolted at having so demeaned herself. She considered that she had been served aright for attempting to recall a man she had refused, and she did not blame him for having declined what was virtually an offer.

Nothing could have been more touching than the note written by Lambert. There was the same melancholy in it he had shown ever since he had been refused. He did not refer to that refusal or its consequences. He referred to life as inexpressibly depressing in his case, but made no intimation as to the cause. Had he done so it would have left a loophole for another communication from Miss Rutherford that might have led to a union between the two. As it was, it sealed her lips on the subject.

There was one suspicion in Miss Rutherford's mind that made her think that Lambert had a reason for not reopening his affair with her. At the time her letter was sent Lambert was in attendance upon his father, who was a confirmed invalid. She fancied that Lambert might feel that he should permit nothing to interfere with his giving all his devotion to his parent. Then she heard that the father had died, and a faint hope sprang up in her breast that if there had been such a cause it was now removed. But time passed, and she heard nothing from her lover. Then she settled down to the belief that Lambert had grown away from his love for her.

But he certainly could not have come to love any one else, for he became a recluse. He left the army and shut himself up in a house by himself. When the Cuban-American war came on he re-entered the service, and by the way he exposed himself his brother officers suspected that he was trying to get himself killed. Finally during the last fighting before Santiago he was mortally wounded and died in a few days.

Miss Rutherford, though she did not put on widow's weeds, considered herself a widow. One day she was notified that she was heir to a considerable estate left her by Paul Lambert. With the papers handed her was a letter informing her that his father previous to his death had informed him that he (Paul) was illegitimate.

LAURIER ISSUES AN ULTIMATUM

Canadian Premier Says Permit Vote or Go to Country.

CONSERVATIVES FAVOR DELAY

Chief Obstacle to Holding General Election at Present Time to Determine Whether Dominion Favors Reciprocity Agreement With the United States Is That Under Pending Census Western Canada Will Gain Twenty or More Members.

Ottawa, July 25.—"Permit a vote to be taken in parliament on reciprocity or we will take a vote of the Canadian people on it without delay," was the ultimatum Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed to the Conservative opposition in parliament.

The chief obstacle to holding the general election at this time is that under the census which is just being taken Western Canada will be entitled to twenty or more additional members. The census will not be completed until October and a law giving the West its increased representation cannot be passed for some weeks after that.

If an election is held before the law is enacted the West will be under represented in parliament for at least four years and the political leaders believe it will show its resentment to the party which it holds responsible for this.

With this situation confronting them there was a sharp debate when consideration of the agreement was resumed. A. S. Middleboro (Conservative) said that fifty-five Conservatives have not spoken on reciprocity who have the right to speak without obstruction being charged. He declared that the government should have taken the census two months earlier.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

"My honorable friend," replied Premier Laurier, "tries to convince the house and the country that the opposition is not obstructing. Neither the census nor the redistribution are before the house to be dealt with. We do not want reciprocity to wait. We want it to pass either in this house or before the country.

"The opposition say that they want an election, but when we take steps to have one they protest. But we understand this. The last thing the Conservatives want is to go before the people of Canada in opposition to this question. Well, there is but one way for them to escape that and that is by allowing a vote to be taken on the agreement and pass it so that the Canadian farmers may have access to the American market for their crops this fall."

Opposition Leader Borden replied that as Canada had waited forty years for reciprocity it could afford to wait six months longer and allow redistribution to give the West its proper representation.

WICKERSHAM CALLS IT A FALSEHOOD

Denies Charge Made by Alaskan Delegate.

Washington, July 25.—The name of Senator Nelson of Minnesota was brought into the discussion before the house committee on the judiciary, which held a hearing in the matter of charges brought against Attorney General Wickersham by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska.

Attorney General Wickersham denounced as an absolute falsehood the charge recently made before the committee by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska that the attorney general "purposely did shield and defend the Alaska syndicate criminals from crimes against the government, in instances wherein I personally gave him the evidence which would justify him in finding indictments."

The instances mentioned by the delegate had to do with a contract for supplying coal to United States forts in Alaska, and the alleged bribery of witnesses at the Hazey murder trial. Delegate Wickersham charged that in the coal contract case the attorney general disregarded the proof furnished to him and permitted the statute of limitations to run.

At the conclusion of the attorney general's statement Representative Martin W. Littleton of New York, a member of the committee, demanded that Delegate Wickersham either prove his charges against the attorney general or withdraw them. The delegate asked for a few days to prepare a statement and the committee allowed him until next Monday.

BRYAN STRIKES AT HARMON

Fires Opening Gun In Fight Against Ohio Governor.

Lincoln, Neb., July 22.—In defending himself from an attack by Douglas county Democrats, who assailed him for bolting the gubernatorial candidacy of Mayor Dahlman last November, William Jennings Bryan, in the current issue of the Commoner, fired what is regarded as his opening gun in his fight to prevent Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio from securing the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1912.

Bryan declares the attack upon him is made by Omaha brewers through the Douglas county Democracy, which, at the same time, endorsed Harmon, "who bolted the Democratic national ticket in 1896 and used his influence to help elect Mr. McKinley, the Republican candidate."

THREE HIGHWAYMEN GO THROUGH TRAIN

Hold Up the North Coast Limited Near Buffalo, N. D.

Fargo, N.D., July 21.—Three masked highwaymen held up the North Coast limited No. 2 on the Northern Pacific road near Buffalo, N. D., searched the passengers, shot and wounded the engineer, E. D. Olson of Fargo, and escaped with cash and valuables estimated at between $500 and $1,000.

The North Coast limited, eastbound, stopped at Highbridge, between Valley City and Buffalo. The three men, armed and wearing masks, entered a day coach. One held the train crew at bay, while the others lined up the passengers and took their valuables. The sleepers and dining car also were invaded and few passengers escaped the search.

Completing their work in the train the robbers crawled over the baggage car to the tender of the locomotive. They ordered the engineer, Olson, to stop the train. He refused. Two shots were fired into the engine cab. One bullet inflicted a flesh wound in the side of the engineer. The other went wild. The engineer stopped the train and the highwaymen dropped off the tender and fled.

TAFT TALKS TO BLUE AND GRAY

President Makes Plea for Peace on Bull Run Battlefield.

Manassas, Va., July 22.—Mud bespattered after a strenuous trip from Washington by automobile, over flooded roads and swollen creeks, Mr. Taft faced an audience made up in part of veterans who wore the blue and the gray, within a few miles of the scene of the first great conflict of the Civil war, and was applauded and cheered when he made a plea for international peace.

The president declared that a general arbitration treaty both with Great Britain and with France probably would be signed within ten days. He added that he hoped within a few days to announce that three other powers would enter into similar agreements with the United States. It was generally believed he referred to Germany, Italy and The Netherlands. Japan ultimately may come into the far-reaching peace pact, but the negotiations with that empire as yet are said to be merely tentative.

Two Die In Suicide Pact.

Middletown, N. Y., July 25.—Edward D. Crans and wife, a middle aged couple, were found dead in their home here. They had carried out a suicide pact by drinking carbolic acid, after making all arrangements for a funeral. Mrs. Crans was dressed in her bridal clothes, which she had saved for more than a score of years.

ESCAPED WITH HIS LIFE

"Twenty-one years ago I faced an awful death," writes, H. B. Martin, Port Harrelson, S. C. "Doctors said I had consumption and the dreadful cough I had looked like it, sure enough. I tried everything, I could hear of, for my cough, and was under the treatment of the best doctor in Georgetown, S. C., for a year, but no relief. A friend advised me to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I did so, and was completely cured. I feel that I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure. ROBBED!

Sometime between Saturday afternoon and Monday morning a burglar entered Dr. Penney's dental office and carefully removed all the gold that is wont to be about such places. The gold taken amounted to about $100, but nothing else was touched.

How the robber entered is not known because all the doors and windows were left locked as usual, and everything about the office was in the same condition as when the doctor left it Saturday afternoon. In fact so neat and gentlemanly about the matter was the thief that Penney did not discover his loss until he reached into the customary place to get some gold to fill a lay's tooth. The robber has not been apprehended as yet.

The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs. That's why chills, fever and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them, and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. ALDRICH DENIES HINES' EVIDENCE Declares He Did Not Select Lorimer for Senator.

TESTIFIES AT INVESTIGATION

Declares He Simply Informed Lumber Baron That Lorimer Was "Not Objectionable."

Washington, July 21.—Former Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island, told the senate Lorimer committee of the part he and President Taft took in the election of a senator from Illinois in 1909.

Instead of telling Edward Hines of Chicago, the storm center in the present Lorimer investigation, that he and the president were anxious to have Lorimer elected, Mr. Aldrich declared that he said Lorimer's candidacy was "not objectionable." When attorneys for Lorimer on cross-examination tried to show that the former senator might have said "acceptable," Mr. Aldrich emphatically declared that he said "not objectionable," and that he meant that word and nothing more. He added that he knew Hines would use the information given him at Springfield.

Mr. Aldrich also denied he had told Hines that he considered Lorimer the only man who could be elected. He declared that he did not ask Senator Penrose to bring Hines to consult with him in regard to the Illinois election and added that he did not believe Senator Penrose brought Hines to his room.

Discussed President's Attitude.

According to Aldrich all the conversations he had with Hines in regard to the senatorial situation were regarding the president's attitude toward candidates, first, Hopkins, then Boutell and finally Lorimer. The senator denied that he told Hines he wanted a senator elected because of the prospective close vote on the tariff.

The regular procedure of the committee was interrupted to allow Mr. Aldrich to take the stand. He shook hands with members of the committee, taking particular pains to greet Senator Lorimer, who had listened to his testimony.

Hines had testified that Aldrich sent for him about May 1, 1909, to ask about the possibility of the Illinois legislature electing a senator; that eventually, after repeated conferences, Aldrich had asked him to urge Lorimer to become a senatorial candidate and that after a night conference at the White House, Mr. Aldrich had returned to his home, where Hines was waiting and told Hines to inform Governor Deneen that the administration was anxious to have the senate vacancy filled and believed Lorimer could be elected.

ANOTHER TALE OF BRIBERY

Witness Tells of Efforts to Buy Votes for Hopkins.

Washington, July 25.—A detailed account of a reputed attempt to buy enough Democratic votes in the Illinois legislature to re-elect Albert J. Hopkins to the senate was told on the witness stand before the senate Lorimer committee by James Keeley, general manager of the Chicago Tribune.

It was the sensation of a day of sensations in the hearing. It followed Mr. Keeley's testimony as to how he happened to buy the confession of Charles A. White, the legislator whose story about grafts at Springfield resulted in the Lorimer investigation.

It was subsequent to testimony by Edward Hines that Henry S. Boutell, now American minister to Switzerland, told him President Taft would assist in the election of Lorimer to the senate. Mr. Hines had been placed on the stand to tell about visits he paid last winter to E. H. Gary, R. S. Lovett, successor to E. H. Harriman, J. S. Bache & Co., and others in New York. None of these visits, the witness said, had anything to do with the Lorimer case.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD NOTES, JULY AND AUGUST.

Trim any apple or plum trees that are over-bearing. It pays.

Allow no weeds to go to seed. This will make cultivation easier next year.

Seed onions should now have produced plants big enough for bunch onions.

Boards should be used for bleaching early celery. Soil is apt to cause it to decay.

The last of July or first part of August is a good time to bud apple or plum seedlings.

Cut out sprouts about shade trees, plums and apples. They only take strength from the main plant.

Keep the sweet peas picked. It is better for the plants, and the house can be made more attractive by their use.

Save seeds of trees and shrubs, as they ripen, and plant them. This is one way to multiply your ornamental plants.

Keep the new strawberry-bed clean cultivated until the runners are matted too much to permit the cultivator to go through.

Cabbage and cauliflower will grow better if frequently cultivated. Tie the leaves about the cauliflower heads to keep them white.

The wild high-bush cramberry, common in many marshy districts of the state, is good both as an ornament on the lawn and for making jelly.

Keep the windfalls in the plum and apple orchards picked up. They often harbor inesets. Pigs turned in among the trees will rid the ground of windfalls. If they are fed occasionally, there is little danger of their injuring the trees.

Do not market poor or dirty fruit. Put good healthy fruit in a clean, neat package, and you will get a good price. The attractiveness of a package often aids greatly in selling Never put apples or plums in a sack to take to market. Always use a box or basket.

Be careful to whom yo ugiye your order for more nursery stock. It is safer to deal with a nursery near home, or at least within the state. In a good many cases the outside nursery is only a tramp concern, visiting a locality but once, while the hoem nursery is anxious to build up a business.

LYCEUM COURSE FOR THIEF RIVER.

Prof. K. M. Hagestad, of Leeds, N. Dak., representing the Mutual Lyceum Bureau of Chicago, has been in the city the last few days endeavoring to interest the public in a Lyceum course. He represents the largest Lyceum Bureau in the West, and has has a splendid list of entertainments, concerts and lectures to offer. A committee has been formed to take charge of the matter, and a subscription list for Season tickets has been put in circulation.

Judging from the interest aroused and especially from the ready sale of the season tickets, the course is going to be highly successful. The season tickets for the entire series of five entertainments selected by the committee, are being sold at $3.00 per ticket, two tickets for $5.00. In the neighborhood of 200 season tickets hvae already been disposed of, showing that a course of this kind is going to be appreciated. Certainly, it is worthy undertaking, and should have the support of all who want good clean attractions, instructive as well as entertaining. The tickets have been placed at an unusually low one ought to refrain from subscribing for at least two tickets. Season tickets entitle the holder to a choice of seas at the Auditorium. The following attractions havebeen selected by the committee, at a total price of $700.00: Turolian Alpine Singers and Yodlers, Castle Square Entertainers, The Cambrian National Glee Singers, from Wales Gt. Britian, all musical entertainments of unquestioned merit As lecturers, Victor Berger, Milwaukee, and Ralph Parlette ,the famous humorist, on either of whom comment is unnecessary.

ECONOMICS OF HARVEST

It is possible for careless help to leave a considerable portion of the grain crop in the field by neglecting to gather up scatterings, loose bundles, etc., and by hauling grain on open-bottom racks. From a few pounds to a few bushels of grain may be saved every day, during stacking, by using a tight-bottom rack, or a convas over the rack that will catch all of the grain that is shattered out of the heads. In seasons when the grain shatters badly, a surprisingly large amount of grain can be saved in this way.—A. D. Wilson, Minn. University Farm.

COUNTY FAIR BEST EVER

Everything Started Fine Wednesday morning. Exhibits good.

The tenth annual exhibition of the Pennington County Agricultural Society started out Wednesday morning with the indication of being the most gigantic and successful fair of them all. Already on Monday the crowds began to pour in and by Tuesday night everything was in full sway so far as the amusements were concerned. Never before was there such a good attandance for the first day. All of the agricultural exhibits were in and nicely displayed, and the ladies department was a vertiable dreamladn of nice things. A goodly number of race horses were in their stalls being made ready for the races to be held yesterday and today. The noted aviator, after much delay caused by a high wind and backward engine, late in the evening actually got his machine to leave the ground a couple of times. With conditions more favorable for flying it is expected that he did better the last two days.

The exhibt which far and away exceeded all the rest, and made the people stop and marvel the most, was that of the farm produce raised in Pennington County soil. It is safe to say that anybody who saw that exhibit will forever feel like living in this country. A person would have to be exceedingly particular if they looked for anything better in paradise. The following are some of the products, the like of which would delight the eye of the most fanciful theorist: Celery, cabbage, lettuce, cauliflower, tomatoes, citron, cucumbers, squash, grapes, apples, onions, rheubarb, potatoes, roots of all kinds, corn, flax, wheat, barley, oast, rye, timothy, red top, red clover and alsike.

About four thousand people assemled on the fair grounds yesterday afternoon to view the sports and examine Pennington County products. The grand stand was packed; but by far the larger number were crowded along the race track and on whatever elevations were suitable for viewing the races. Yesterday the big event was horse racing. There were four races, the gentlemen's driving race, the 2:30, the 2:17 and the 2:15. Horses were entered from St. Hilaire, Red Lake Falls, Anges, Courtany, Crookston, Warren and Grand Forks. The races promised to be exceptionally interesting.

The entertainment features were out of the ordinary. The Warren band furnished delightful music during the interims and during the Meier Bro's. stunts. The Meier Bro's., elicited lots of applause while going thru their acrobatic novelties and illustrating the "human elevator."

The display of stock was very good. The majority were Jersies, short-horned Durhams and Guernseys. Mr. Woolson had a fine collection of registered Guernsies, and Mr Carlson had a registered herd of short-horns. In the sheep department there were mostly Shropshires. The hogs were mostly Yorkshires, most noticeable among them being a registered lot brought in by Mr. Woolson. The chicken row was handsomely represented by Rhode Island Reds, Plimoth Rocks, Light Brahmas, White Minorcas and Brown Leghorns. There were also good representatives from the goose, duck, turkey and pigeon families. C. Gustafson and son had in operation an excellent lot of 20th century farm machinery.

HELD SPECIAL MEETING.

At a meeting of Progressive Republicans held yesterday the following trite resolutions were adopted:

RESOLUTIONS

As Republicans we are heartily in favor of the success of the Republican party fully realizing that in the past it has been the party of progress, and we fully agree that the many reforms that our country stand in need of today; can we think be best realized through the party which has served us so well in the past.

The progressive ideas and deeds of our former President, Theodore Roosevelt we heartily commend; and it is with extreme regret that we cannot extend the hearty commendations to the present administration.

If the success of the party is to continue, we are fully of the opinion that the , so called, progressive element must prevail in the party councils and progressive men with progressive ideas must lead next year. To this end we favor the nomination for president of some man of honor and action who will favor reforms and principles such as are now advocated by Senator Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin and others.

For over forty years the farmers of the Northwest and of Minnesota in particular have consistently been in favor of the principles of a protective tariff. They accepted as a fact that protection would build up a home market for the products of the farm and that ultimately the farmer would come to his just reward. Such a condition is about to be realized, and we condemn as unjust and unreasonable and a direct violation of faith; the Canadian Reciprocity Pact which the present administration has just forced by the use of patronage, the aid of the Democratic Party, and other unjust and unlawful means; through our congress.

We are fully of the opinion that if protection is good for the eastern manufacturer it is equally as good for the Western farmer and we again reassert that the Canadian Reciprocity Pact is an unfair, unjust discrimination against the American farmer, and in favor of the trust protected manufacturer.

The farm stand taken by our United States Senators, Honorable Knute Nelson and Honorable Moses E. Clapp and by our Representative in Congress, Honorable Halvor Steenerson in their fight against the Canadian Reciprocity Pact meets with our heartiest commendation, and we respectfully ask that they continue the good fight that in the end the trust protected manufacturer receive no more protection than does the American farmer.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The Commission Plan is spreading fast. Do we Want it?

As a city grows the manner of its government becomes more and more a problem which should be given the closest attention by the city's ablest business men. The larger a city the greater and more important are the problems it has to solve, and, therefore the better its system of government should be.

A city in the management of its affairs is practically up against the same business proposition as are the big industrial concerns scattered thru out the United States today, and the same essential business principle will apply.

The idea introduced into the most successful industries we have today has been to concentrate responsiblity and power. This is done by selecting a few competent men, giving them a great deal of power, and then holding them responsible for the success of the business.

Out of this idea introduced by large business concerns has grown the idea of city government by commission.

The first practical illustration of the commission plan, in a rough farm, was given in the year 1900 at the time of the Galveston flood. A few men came forward, took charge of things and saved the city from wreck and ruin. This arbitrary manner of doing things shocked the public at large, but the results were such that people genrally began to sit up and take notice.

The next of the larger cities to adopt the commission plan were Houston and Des Moines. The forms chartered by these cities are somewhat different from one another. At present over half the states have passed, and many are considering, a law enabling cities to vote on the commission form of government. Minnesota has such a law. Mankato adopted the commission form of government in 1910, she being the first to do so. Now the proposition has been voted upon, or is about to be, in several other cities in this state. Later on information will be furnished as to how the plan is working out in cities where the commission form is now in operation.

Some Features of the Plan

A brief outline of the plan will be given now, and followed later by more detailed explanations. The following is suggestive:

The division of the city into wards, for the purpose of choosing aldermen or councilmen, is done away with.

There are no political conventions and party names, so far as the city is concerned; in fact, politics are com pletely eliminated.

There is no city ticket, like formerly, on which there was a long list of officers to be voted for.

Under the new system nobody is elected but five commissioners. One of these is called mayor, and presides over the commission; but he has only one vote, and no veto.

Any qualified elector can become a candidate for a mayor or commissioner by securing the petition of twenty-five qualified electors.

The names of the candidates for mayor and commissioners are arranged alphabetically on the ticket and without political designation.

The commission chooses by ballot all other officers and employees, mostly from competitive examination list.

The administrattive powers are distributed among five departments, each headed by a commissioner, as follows:

1. Departmetn of public health, sanitation, public and general welfore, headed by the mayor.

2. Department of accounts and finances.

3. Department of parks; public grounds, buildings and fire protection.

5. Department of water works and sewers.

4. Department of streets and alleys.

The mayor and commissioners are paid a salary and devote either all or a part of their time to the duties of their office.

Each commissioner has complete charge in his department, and runs it the same as though he were the executive head of a department of a large business concern.

The five, acting as a commission, make policies, pass ordinances, prepare the budjet, levy taxes and do anything else that is necessary in a well-regulated city. However, they can not give away a public franchise.

The charter contains the initiative, referendum and recall; the meaning and operation of which will be explained in an early issue.

VICTORIES WON

At the fair grounds last Sunday the "Indians" once more proved that they are a real baseball team, and wiped out the disgrace of last week's antics. It was a good, exciting game all the way through and none of the fans evidenced any desire to go to sleep.

Things looked a trifle dubious up to the sixth, but after that it was all for the locals. Several hits and some weak fielding allowed Red Lake Falls to cross the plate four times in the fourth and fifth innings. The "Indians" got five good ones during the fifth and sixth innings. At this stage of the game Garceau's support was pretty ragged, but he did not lose heart, and finished by shutting out the locals.

All of the pitchers did good work, especially Mattson, who allowed but one hit and had the opposition at his mercy at all times. The feature of the game was Mattson's two-bagger. The Thief River lineup was considerably strengthened with Holstein behind the bat. Holstein is an excellent catcher, has lots of ginger, and holds the men on the bases.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD NOTES, JULY AND AUGUST.

Trim any apple or plum trees that are over-bearing. It pays.

Boards should be used for bleaching early celery. Soil is apt to cause it to decay.

The last of July or first part of August is a good time to bud apple or plum seedlings.

Keep the sweet peas picked. It is better for the plants, and the house can be made more attractive by their use.

Save seeds of trees and shrubs, as they ripen, and plant them. This is one way to multiply your ornamental plants.

Keep the new strawberry-bed clean cultivated until the runners are matted too much to permit the cultivator to go through.

Cabbage and cauliflower will grow better if frequently cultivated. Tie the leaves about the cauliflower heads to keep them white.

The wild high-bush cranberry, common in many marshy districts of the state, is good both as an ornament on the lawn and for making jelly.

Keep the windfalls in the plum and apple orchards picked up. They often harbor insects. Pigs turned in among the trees will rid the ground of windfalls. If they are fed occasionally, there is little danger of their injuring the trees.

Do not market poor or dirty fruit. Put good healthy fruit in a clean, neat package, and you will get a good price. The attractiveness of a package often aids greatly in selling Never put apples or plums in a sack to take to market. Always use a box or basket.

Be careful to whom yo ugive your order for more nursery stock. It is safer to deal with a nursery near home, or at least within the state. In a good many cases the outside nursery is only a tramp concern, visiting a locality but once, while the hoem [illegible] to build up a business.

LYCEUM COURSE FOR THIEF RIVER.

Prof. K. M. Hagestad, of Leeds, N. Dak., representing the Mutual Lyceum Bureau of Chicago, has been in the city the last few days endeavoring to interest the public in a Lyceum course. He represents the largest Lyceum Bureau in the West, and has has a splendid list of entertainments, concerts and lectures to offer. A committee has been formed to take charge of the matter, and a subscription list for Season tickets has been put in circulation.

Judging from the interest aroused and especially from the ready sale of the season tickets, the course is going to be highly successful. The season tickets for the entire series of five entertainments selected by the committee, are being sold at $3.00 per ticket, two tickets for $5.00. In the neighborhood of 200 season tickets hvae already been disposed of, showing that a course of this kind is going to be appreciated. Certainly, it is worthy undertaking, and should have the support of all who want good clean attractions, instructive as well as entertaining. The tickets have been placed at an unusually low one ought to refrain from subscribing for at least two tickets. Season tickets entitle the holder to a choice of seas at the Auditorium. The following attractions havebeen selected by the committee, at a total price of $700.00: Turolian Alpine Singers and Yodlers, Castle Square Entertainers, The Cambrian National Glee Singers, from Wales Gt. Britian, all musical entertainments of unquestioned merit. As lecturers, Victor Berger, Milwaukee, and Ralph Parlette ,the famous humorist, on either of whom comment is unnecessary.

ECONOMICS OF HARVEST

It is possible for careless help to leave a considerable portion of the grain crop in the field by neglecting to gather up scatterings, loose bundles, etc., and by hauling grain on open-bottom racks. From a few pounds to a few bushels of grain may be saved every day, during stacking, by using a tight-bottom rack, or a convas over the rack that will catch all of the grain that is shattered out of the heads. In seasons when the grain shatters badly, a surprisingly large amount of grain can be saved in this way.—A. D. Wilson, Minn. University Farm

COUNTY FAIR BEST EVER

Everything Started Fine Wednesday morning. Exhibits good.

The tenth annual exhibition of the Pennington County Agricultural Society started out Wednesday morning with the indication of being the most gigantic and successful fair of them all. Already on Monday the crowds began to pour in and by Tuesday night everything was in full sway so far as the amusements were concerned. Never before was there such a good attandance for the first day. All of the agricultural exhibits were in and nicely displayed, and the ladies department was a vertiable dreamladn of nice things. A goodly number of race horses were in their stalls being made ready for the races to be held yesterday and today. The noted aviator, after much delay caused by a high wind and backward engine, late in the evening actually got his machine to leave the ground a couple of times. With conditions more favorable for flying it is expected that he did better the last two days.

The exhibt which far and away exceeded all the rest, and made the people stop and marvel the most, was that of the farm produce raised in Pennington County soil. It is safe to say that anybody who saw that exhibit will forever feel like living in this country. A person would have to be exceedingly particular if they looked for anything better in paradise. The following are some of the products, the like of which would delight the eye of the most fanciful theorist: Celery, cabbage, lettuce, cauliflower, tomatoes, citron, cucumbers, squash, grapes, apples, onions, rheubarb, potatoes, roots of all kinds, corn, flax, wheat, barley, oast, rye, timothy, red top, red clover and alsike.

About four thousand people assemled on the fair grounds yesterday afternoon to view the sports and examine Pennington County products. The grand stand was packed, but by far the larger number were crowded along the race track and on whatever elevations were suitable for viewing the races. Yesterday the big event was horse racing. There were four races, the gentlemen's driving race, the 2:30, the 2:17 and the 2:15. Horses were entered from St. Hilaire, Red Lake Falls, Anges, Courtany, Crookston, Warren and Grand Forks. The races promised to be exceptionally interesting.

The entertainment features were out of the ordinary. The Warren band furnished delightful music during the interims and during the Meier Bro's. stunts. The Meier Bro's., elicited lots of applause while going thru their acrobatic novelties and illustrating the "human elevator."

The display of stock was very good. The majority were Jersies, short-horned Durhams and Guernseys. Mr. Woolson had a fine collection of registered Guernsies, and Mr Carlson had a registered herd of short-horns. In the sheep department there were mostly Shropshires. The hogs were mostly Yorkshires, most noticeable among them being a registered lot brought in by Mr. Woolson. The chicken row was handsomely represented by Rhode Island Beds, Plimoth Rocks, Light Brahmas, White Minorcas and Brown Leghorns. There were also good representatives from the goose, duck, turkey and pigeon families. C. Gustafson and son had in operation an excellent lot of 20th century farm machinery.

HELD SPECIAL MEETING.

RESOLUTIONS

As Republicans we are heartily in favor of the success of the Republican party fully realizing that in the past it has been the party of progress, and we fully agree that the many reforms that our country stand in need of today; can we think be best realized through the party which has served us so well in the past.

The progressive ideas and deeds of our former President, Theodore Roosevelt we heartily commend; and it is with extreme regret that we cannot extend the hearty commendations to the present administration.

If the success of the party is to continue, we are fully of the opinion that the , so called, progressive element must prevail in the party councils and progressive men with progressive ideas must lead next year. To this end we favor the nomination for president of some man of honor and action who will favor reforms and principles such as are now advocated by Senator Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin and others.

For over forty years the farmers of the Northwest and of Minnesota in particular have consistently been in favor of the principles of a protective tariff. They accepted as a fact that protection would build up a home market for the products of the farm and that ultimately the farmer would come to his just reward.

Such a condition is about to be realized, and we condemn as unjust and unreasonable and a direct violation of faith; the Canadian Reciprocity Pact which the present administration has just forced by the use of patronage, the aid of the Democratic Party, and other unjust and unlawful means; through our congress.

We are fully of the opinion that if protection is good for the eastern manufacturer it is equally as good for the Western farmer and we again reassert that the Canadian Reciprocity Pact is an unfair, unjust discrimination against the American farmer, and in favor of the trust protected manufacturer.

The farm stand taken by our United States Senators, Honorable Knute Nelson and Honorable Moses E. Clapp and by our Representative in Congress, Honorable Halvor Steenerson in their fight against the Canadian Reciprocity Pact meets with our heartiest commendation, and we respectfully ask that they continue the good fight that in the end the trust protected manufacturer receive no more protection than does the American farmer.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The Commission Plan is spreading fast. Do we Want it?

As a city grows the manner of its government becomes more and more a problem which should be given the closest attention by the city's ablest business men. The larger a city the greater and more important are the problems it has to solve, and, therefore the better its system of government should be.

A city in the management of its affairs is practically up against the same business proposition as are the big industrial concerns scattered thru out the United States today, and the same essential business principle will apply.

The idea introduced into the most successful industries we have today has been to concentrate responsiblity and power. This is done by selecting a few competent men, giving them a great deal of power, and then holding them responsible for the success of the business.

Out of this idea introduced by large business concerns has grown the idea of city government by commission.

The first practical illustration of the commission plan, in a rough form, was given in the year 1900 at the time of the Galveston flood. A few men came forward, took charge of things and saved the city from wreck and ruin. This arbitrary manner of doing things shocked the public at large, but the results were such that people genrally began to sit up and take notice.

The next of the larger cities to adopt the commission plan were Houston and Des Moines. The forms chartered by these cities are somewhat different from one another. At present over half the states have passed, and many are considering, a law enabling cities to vote on the commission form of government. Minnesota has such a law. Mankato adopted the commission form of government in 1910, she being the first to do so. Now the proposition has been voted upon, or is about to be, in several other cities in this state. Later on information will be furnished as to how the plan is working out in cities where the commission form is now in operation.

A brief outline of the plan will be given now, and followed later by more detailed explanations. The following is suggestive:

The division of the city into wards, for the purpose of choosing aldermen or councilmen, is done away with.

There are no political conventions and party names, so far as the city is concerned; in fact, politics are completely eliminated.

There is no city ticket, like formerly, on which there was a long list of officers to be voted for.

Under the new system nobody is elected but five commissioners. One of these is called mayor, and presides over the commission; but he has only one vote, and no veto.

Any qualified elector can become a candidate for a mayor or commissioner by securing the petition of twenty-five qualified electors.

The names of the candidates for mayor and commissioners are arranged alphabetically on the ticket and without political designation.

The commission chooses by ballot all other officers and employees, mostly from competitive examination list.

The administrattive powers are distributed among five departments, each headed by a commissioner, as follows:

1. Departmetn of public health, sanitation, public and general welfore, headed by the mayor.
2. Department of accounts and finances.
3. Department of parks; public grounds, buildings and fire protection.
5. Department of water works and sewers.
4. Department of streets and alleys.

The mayor and commissioners are paid a salary and devote either all or a part of their time to the duties of their office.

Each commissioner has complete charge in his department, and runs it the same as though he were the executive head of a department of a large business concern.

The five, acting as a commission make policies, pass ordinances, prepare the budjet, levy taxes and do anything else that is necessary to a well-regulated city. However, they can not give away a public franchise.

The charter contains the initiative referendum and recall; the meaning and operation of which will be explained in an early issue.

VICTORIES WON

At the fair grounds last Sunday the "Indians" once more proved that they are a real baseball team, and wiped out the disgrace of last week's antics. It was a good, exciting game all the way through and none of the fans evidenced any desire to go to sleep.

Things looked a trifle dubious up to the sixth, but after that it was all for the locals. Several hits and some weak fielding allowed Red Lake Falls to cross the plate four times in the fourth and fifth innings. The "Indians" got five good ones during the fifth and sixth innings. At this stage of the game Garceau's support was pretty ragged, but he did not lose heart, and finished by shutting out the locals.

All of the pitchers did good work, especially Mattson, who allowed but one hit and had the opposition at his mercy at all times. The feature of the game was Mattson's two-bagger. The Thief River lineup was considerably strengthened with Holstein behind the bat. Holstein is an excellent catcher, has lots of ginger, and holds the men on the bases.

Every man and woman that takes in the "Fair" this week will be more convinced than ever that the country tributary to Thief River Falls was originally the location of the Garden of Eden.

One of our exchanges has the following editorial:

> "The average small boy views with alarm the calendar. August 1 and school opens September 1." If such is the case, what is the matte with our schools?

Ex-Forester Gifford Pinchot put his finger on a vulnerable point in the president's armor when he asked why the usual 30 or 60 days notice was not given before opening the Pontroller Bay lands in Alaska to filing last October. Taft is cowed; he cannot answer. Yet he has the audacity to seek your support for renomination!

Representative Payne of New York leading minority member of the ways and means committee expressed opposition to the proposed Democratic Cotton Schedule, "because it does not furnish protective duties for a great American industry and it is frankly admitted that it is not intended to do so." It does not appear that he made the same objection to Canadian reciprocity. But, then, that did not effect manufacturers, and what does he and his kind care about the farmer!

The following clipping from the Willmar Tribune is interesting to us for three reasons. The city of Willmar is the county seat of the editor's boyhood home; The city is just the size of Thief River Falls and the man who spoke the words was none other than our own Prof Hay:

> "Director J. H. Hay closed with a very complimentary talk about Willmar. He said that he believed that Willmar was the cleanest and most prosperous city of its size in the state and he had been very favorably impressed with the city and its people during the five weeks of his stay here."

Taft is dogmatic. He seems to think that we may not question his "say so." The mere fact that he makes a velement statement, should banish doubt. But does he forget how he defended Ballinger, the Payne-Aldrich tariff act and, later, Reciprocity with Canada? Now he is equally certain that he was right in betraying the public in the controller affair in Alaska. He failed to give the usual 30 or 60 days notice before filings could begin on the forest reserves that he threw open. This gave the Morgan-Guggenheim interests the advantage, because they were on the grounds and quite likely knew the order was coming for they stood in well with Sec. Ballinger,—the president's mongrel pet—and, of course were kept informed. The order went forth and the billionaires got what they wanted and there is nothing good left to the public. The part of the shoe that is fit for harbor purpose is small and was immediately snapped up by a representative of the Morgan-Guggenheim interests. Taft has served these interests and presumally got what he asked for doing so. Now he turns on the public in a long defense and tries to browbeat them into believing that he issued that order of last October in the interests of the "dear people." And, of course, his billionaire friends are supporting him by buying up all the great papers of the country and teaching them to sing Taft's praises. Already these have cornered every Twin City daily except one. Money talks, indeed. Will you allow yourself to be hood-winked? Remember, they are going to try to do it.

NATIONAL BIRD PROTECTION

A constitutional amendment to give Congress power to protect migratory birds has been offered in Congress by Senator McLean of Connecticut.

To some minds it will seem hardly consistent with our venerable constitutional forms, that Congress and 46 state legislatures are asked to devote their official dignity and highly paid time for the benefit of little insignificant "chipbirds."

And yet, the Department of Agriculture, in those formidable black books that look so solemncholy that one can not imagine them as fibbing, tells us that the board bill for the Hessian fly in two states in 1909 alone was $24,000,000, and that the chinch bug has a record of eating up $60,000,000 of our farm products in one year. And that is saying nothing of the damage by the bollweevil, the gypsy moth, the canker worm, and scores of other foes, as a factor in high cost of living.

It is the testimony of most farmers that these pests are vastly more destructive than in their youth. And all country people will agree that wild bird life, thanks to the gunners and the small boy, is decreasing. Who can doubt that the latter condition is cause ,and that the sway of the pests is the effect?

In California the agricultural interests are realizing this situation so keenly, that a state bird farm was created two years ago, which from this year is expected to turn out annually 4000 to 8000 wild birds for distribution about the state.

One big fruit ranch handling 11,000 acres was one of the first to apply for fledgeling birds for breedng on its lands. They did not ask for those birds merely as targets for their work men on Sundays and holidays.

There being no uniform laws on the subject, migratory birds not specially valued in one state may there be wantonly slaughtered for mere sport, when crops elsewhere which they would naturally protect if allowed to multiply, are being slaughtered by insects. There needs to be either a national bird law, or uniform state legislation, if insect pests are to be fought successfully.

SPEAKER FAVORS EXTRA SESSION.

Speaker H. H. Dunn of the Minnesota house, favors an extra session of the legislature, but he would subscribe conditions says The Minneapolis Tribune. He says if there could be a short, snappy session, accompanied by the passage of several measures, he would favor it.

His program of legislation for an extra session includes the following measures: The passage of a 5 per cent gross earnings tax for railroads; a distance tariff law; a state wide primary; the Spooner waterways laws; re-apportionment; local option for cities of the fourth class, and a recall bill, including judges and everything.

The speaker does not believe it necessary to wait until the supreme court has passed on the Minnesota rate cases.

"What's the use?" said the speaker. "We can have an extra session now just as well as later. If we pass the measurers I have outlined we will make a record that will take the state by storm."

The speaker failed to explain why these measures were not passed at the last session, whirbn kakakaa the last session, when his organization was in perfect order, nor why the gross earnings tax law was not passed when it was up in the house following the rulings of Master in Chancery Otis.—Lake City Graphic Republican.

The steadily- increasing attendance at existing Schools of Agriculture and the demand for more such schools, in addition to the demand for agricultural instruction in the common schools, show that farmers are awake, as never before in history, to the fact that the size of their incomes from the soil is largely a matter of education. The man who knows when to plow, and why; when to plant, and why; when to reap, and why, is seen to have a decided advantage over him to whom the time for each of thes fuctions is a mere "happenstance" and who ever concerns himself with the "why?" Scientific exactness is becoming the rule on the farm as well as in the laboratory and the mahcine-shop; and exactness comes only with the mastery of principles.—C. R. B.

Do not neglect to spray the orchard trees and berry-bushes this year. A little time and attention now will be worth dollars at the harvesting period. If for any reason the early sprays have not been given, apply the later sprays. Make a start at the spraying problem, and see how every little attention given the plants in applying proper sprays during the season pays.

DEBATE ON COTTON SCHEDULE

Minority Report Condemns Bill as Nonprotective Measure.

Washington, July 29.—Debate on the Democratic cotton schedule revision bill was begun in the house by Representative Underwood of Alabama, chairman of the ways and means committee, which prepared the bill. No date was fixed for closing debate on the measure, although it is believed it will end Wednesday with a vote on the day following.

The minority report was presented by Representative Payne of New York, leading minority member of the ways and means committee. It expresses opposition to the bill "because it does not furnish protective duties for a great American industry and it is frankly admitted that it is not intended to do so."

EIGHT KILLED IN MAINE RAIL WRECK

Smoking Car Telescoped When Trains Collide.

Grindstone, Me., July 30.—Eight persons are dead and fourteen seriously injured as the result of a head-on collision which occurred at the Bangor and Aroostock railroad station here. The trains were a special of three light coaches, containing about 150 excursionists, and a regular passenger express.

Five of the dead were passengers of the excursion train. The other three included the two firemen and the engineer of the special. The five passengers killed and all of the injured were in the smoking car directly behind the engine of the excursion. Both trains were moving slowly, one of them just pulling out of the station and the other slowing for a siding where the trains were to have passed.

The accident appears to have been due to a misunderstanding of orders. None of the cars left the rails and the passengers on the regular train escaped with a slight shaking up.

Grindstone is a small settlement of not more than fifty persons, with no facilities for the care of the injured. They were cared for temporarily by physicians on board the trains and placed on a special train and taken to Millinocket.

FAVORS RECALL OF JUDGES

Senator Owen Advocates Passage of His Measure.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Severe criticism of the supreme court of the United States marked the speech of Senator Owen of Oklahoma, who advocated before the senate the adoption of his bill providing for the election and recall of federal judges. This bill provides that any justice of the supreme court, or any judge of any other United States court, shall be subject to recall by a resolution of congress; that all district and circuit judges of the United States shall be elected by the voters of the district or circuit; and that their tenure of office be four years.

PENSIONS FOR THE AGED

Congressman Berger Introduces Bill in the House.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Government pensions for the aged were provided in a bill introduced in the house by Representative Victor L. Berger, the Wisconsin Socialist.

The measure proposes to grant to every person who brings proof that he or she is more than sixty years old, has been a citizen of the United States for more than sixteen years, and if a husband, has not without just cause failed in the maintenance of his wife, a weekly pension of from $1 to $4, depending upon their income.

BRITAIN ISSUES SHARP WARNING

Intimation to Germany She Will Defend Her Rights.

FLEET IS ORDERED TO COAL

Patriotism Wipes Out Party Differences and United Support Is Accorded the Government.

London, July 28.—The most pessimistic views regarding the acuteness of the Moroccan crisis were largely confirmed by the prime minister in the house of commons when, with a manner as impressive as his words, he read from a manuscript which had been carefully prepared, a warning to Germany that Great Britain proposed to stand for what she considered her rights and to maintain the balance of power in Europe.

Further testimony as to the gravity of the situation is given by the fact that the prime minister obviously had taken the leader of the opposition into the government's confidence and Mr. Balfour's declaration was no less firm than Mr. Asquith's.

The prime minister's statement was couched in diplomatic, though not reassuring, language. At the very opening he said:

"It is obvious that this Moroccan question has reached a point at which it will become increasingly difficult, embarrassing and anxious, unless a solution is found.

"We thought it right from the beginning to make clear that, failing of a settlement such as I have indicated, we must become an active party in the discussion of the situation. It might be our duty in defense of British interests directly affected by further developments."

"If there are any who supposed that we would be wiped off the map of Europe because we have our difficulties at home it may be worth while saying that they bitterly mistake the temper of the British people and the patriotism of the opposition."

Such plain speaking on a question fraught with possibilities of a great European war has not been heard in the British parliament for years.

Britain Priming Her Guns.

London, July 28.—The first division of the home fleet, stationed at Portland, has been ordered to coal and complete its supplies with oil fuel by morning. Operations will be continued throughout the night.

CONTROLLER BAY MESSAGE

President Denounces "Dick-to-Dick" Letter as a Fabrication.

Washington, July 27.—President Taft has transmitted to the senate, in obedience to its request, all of the papers and records connected with the elimination of 12,800 acres of land from the Chugach forest reservation, made by his order a year ago. The Chugach reservation lies along the margin of Controller bay in Alaska and the elimination in question formed the basis of what became known as the Controller bay scandal, out of which grew the alleged "Dick-to-Dick" letter.

But the president did not send the documents unaccompanied. They were under the convoy of a message to the senate in which he goes into the history of the elimination of the land, assuming all responsibility and justifying it to the limit, showing the impossibility of its promoting any character of monopoly, reintroducing a Ballinger echo, scoring the "Dick-to-Dick" letter as a malicious fabrication and finally denouncing the methods which have attacked all proper plans for the development of Alaska and besmirched all officials connected with Alaskan affairs.

PINCHOT SCORES MESSAGE

Says President Leaves Root of Alaska Affairs Untouched.

Washington, July 28.—Gifford Pinchot, former government chief fortster and now president of the National Conservation association, issued a statement declaring that President Taft "leaves the root of the matter wholly untouched in his message to the senate, denying that there could be any monopolization of the water front of Controller bay, Alaska."

Mr. Pinchot's statement says:

"The president's defense of his course in the Controller bay affair shows how hard it is to make a good excuse for a bad mistake."

ONLY ONE SURVIVES WRECK

Steamer John Irwin Sinks Off Nova Scotian Coast.

Halifax, N. S., July 29.—The steamer John Irwin struck a rock and sank off Beaver Harbor last Tuesday morning.

Willie McLeod of Halifax was washed ashore on a hatch at Liscombe, ninety miles east of here, and it is believed he is the only survivor of the dozen or more men in the steamer's crew.

Whistler's Eccentricities.

Whistler's remarkable genius is no doubt responsible for his many eccentricities. He quarreled indiscriminately with friend and foe, and for him the public were a set of ignoramuses who had no right to any opinion whatever.

Especially well known is his quarrel with John Ruskin, who in his "Ars Clavigera" had heaped scorn on one of Whistler's "Nocturnes" in the following language, "I have seen and heard much of cockney impudence before now, but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask 200 guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face." The artist promptly sued for damages, and in the celebrated trial which followed he was awarded one farthing, which coin he triumphantly wore as a watch charm ever afterward.

In his art work, as in his own personal appearance, Whistler was fastidious. His palettes were beautifully wiped, his brushes faultlessly kept, and as for his general behavior it was foreign, one may even say exotic.

Why Thackeray Was Moved to Tears.

A lady, an intimate friend and a frequent visitor at the Thackeray home, called late one afternoon. She was shown into the study, and on entering perceived the novelist himself seated at his desk, his head bowed upon his arms. Fearing she was intruding in the presence of some great and unknown grief, she paused, hesitating. Then, thinking she might be of some help or at least express her sympathy, she stepped forward. Just then Thackeray looked up. His shoulders were shaking, the tears streaming from his eyes.

"Little Nell is dead," he said brokenly.

"Little Nell?" his visitor interrogated.

"Yes, Little Nell," was the answer. "She is dead. I've just been reading it." Before him on his desk lay an open copy of "Old Curiosity Shop."—Ladies' Home Journal.

When Lobsters Were Common.

The lobster was not always the aristocrat of the supper table and the most costly of delicacies. A man who used to live in Maine, but now lives in Ohio, has this reminiscence, according to a writer in the Cleveland Leader: "One day here in Cleveland I took a friend out to luncheon, and suddenly the old appetite for lobster came back to both of us, as we were both born on the Maine coast. We had two full portions, and the bill was $2. And yet as a boy I've seen my father standing on the wharf, bargaining with a fisherman for his lobster catch of the day, and often, for $2 I've seen the lobster fisherman turn over to my father the entire catch, and the whole boatload—250 or 300 big, black lobsters, perhaps—would be dumped on the landing and taken back on our old farm as feed for the pigs.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake county is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this coming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

SENATE PASSES THE WOOL BILL

LINE UP WAS 48 TO 32

Said President Taft Will Veto Bill When It Reaches Him for His Approval.

Washington, July 28.—The compromise wool tariff bill offered by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, a modification of both his own and the house bill, was passed by the senate, 48 to 32, by the union of Democrats and Republican insurgents. Upon this middle ground the Democrats, having secured a record vote on the original Underwood bill, joined with the Republican insurgent forces. Those who voted for the bill were:

Republicans—Bourne, Oregon; Bristow, Kansas; Brown, Nebraska; Clapp and Nelson, Minnesota; Crawford, South Dakota; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Gronna and McCumber, North Dakota; La Follette, Wisconsin; Poindexter, Washington; Works, California.

Democrats—Bacon, Georgia; Bailey, Texas; Bankhead and Johnstone, Alabama; Bryan and Fletcher, Florida; Chamberlain, Oregon; Chilton and Watson, West Virginia; Clark and Davis, Arkansas; Foster and Thornton, Louisiana; Gore and Owen, Oklahoma; Hitchcock, Nebraska; Johnson, Maine; Kern and Shively, Indiana; Martin and Swanson, Virginia; Martine, New Jersey; Myers, Montana; Newlands, Nevada; O'Gorman, New York; Overman and Simmons, North Carolina; Paynter, Kentucky; Pomerence, Ohio; Reid and Stone, Missouri; Smith, Maryland; Smith, South Carolina; Taylor, Tennessee; Williams, Mississippi.

Bill Certain of Veto.

Proceedings in the senate and developments that are to follow the resolution for the wool bill, however, will be futile so far as any addition to the statute books is concerned.

It can be said upon highest authority that President Taft will veto the wool bill if it ever gets to the White House and there are not a sufficient number of votes in its favor to pass it over the veto.

One of the interesting bits of gossip in connection with the result is in regard to the effect it may have on the future of the farmers' free list bill. There is a firm belief among the Republican leaders that the farmers' free list bill is to be put through by practically the same coalition and this was one of the considerations upon which the Democrats finally consented to become a tail to Senator La Follette's presidential kite.

Not only will a considerable number of progressive Republicans be ready to vote for the farmers' free list bill, but there are at least two regular Republicans who are peeved over the passage of the Canadian reciprocity bill and who are ready, it is believed, to join with the Democrats in passing the farmers' free list bill as a complement of the Canadian pact.

MARSHAL KILLS ONE BANDIT

Three Highwaymen Raid First National Bank at Harlem, Mont.

Harlem, Mont., Aug. 1.—One bandit is dead and armed posses are scouring the country between here and the Bear Paw mountains in search of two others who escaped after they attempted to rob Senator Everett's First National bank of this town.

But for the quick work of Marshal J. Q. Taswell, who is also a deputy sheriff of Choteau county, the bank would have been looted, but his deadly aim killed the man who was looting the vault and caused the man who was guarding the cashier and others in the bank office to flee.

JOHN W. GATES NEAR DEATH

Condition of Financier Is Critical and Physicians Have Little Hope.

Paris, Aug. 1.—The condition of John W. Gates is critical. He is semi-conscious most of the time.

His physicians say that the pneumonia which has attacked both lungs has not increased. This was a good sign, they declared, and added that if the lungs began to clear up there may be a hope, although a very faint one, for Mr. Gates' recovery.

Girl Awakes After 105 Days.

Vandalia, Ill., Aug. 1.—After sleeping almost continuously for 105 days, Miss Hazel Schmidt, the eighteen-year-old girl whose strange case has puzzled physicians for weeks, was awake for five hours and ate three meals. She said that she felt no ill effects from her slumbers.

ALASKAN MESS GOES TO HOUSE

House Committee Decides to Report All Evidence.

DELEGATE WICKERSHAM SORE

Frequent and Bitter Clashes Between the Alaskan Representative and Attorney General—Former Fails to Impress Committee, Criticises Alaskan Officials, Declares Everybody Is Against Him and That His Official Patronage Has Been Taken Away.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Following general charges and denials between the two Wickershams of the government—the attorney general and the delegate from Alaska—the house committee on judiciary decided that it had no power to do anything but report the evidence to the house. It will report Delegate Wickersham's resolution calling on the attorney general to furnish all the papers and data bearing on the alleged frauds in connection with government coal contracts.

The committee will not recommend that the house investigate Delegate Wickersham's charges that Attorney General Wickersham had shielded and protected "Alaska syndicate criminals."

In a hearing enlivened by frequent and bitter clashes between the two Wickershams it developed that the delegate from Alaska had offered his legal services in 1908 to the Guggenheim interests in the Northwestern Commercial company for a salary of $15,000 a year and the maintenance of office headquarters in Seattle.

The Alaska delegate renewed his statements that the attorney general had shielded and protected breakers of the law who represented the Guggenheim interests in Alaska. Members of the judiciary committee frequently called upon him to prove statements he made and in some cases challenged the sufficiency of his proof.

Attorney General Indignant.

Attorney General Wickersham declared that the Alaskan delegate's charges called for vigorous denial from the government officials.

"He has seen fit to make charges against me which it was his duty to prove before this committee if he could do so," said the attorney general, "and I submit to the committee that he has not proved his statements."

The Alaska delegate repeatedly criticised the officials of Alaska, said the Guggenheims "owned the government" there and made general charges of the officials being influenced by them.

He sought to prove that United States Marshal H. K. Love had extorted money from his deputy marshals by making them "divide the graft" contained in the profit from boarding prisoners. The government allows $3 per day for each prisoner.

Attorney General Wickersham produced two official reports to show that the whole matter had been investigated and the system of taking profit out of the prisoners' per diem allowance was fully recognized and considered a form of "legalized graft."

"It was a bad practice and I abolished it as soon as I found out about it," said the attorney general, "but it was not illegal."

Delegate Wickersham criticised the attorney general because he had not brought prosecutions on the Cunningham coal claims and the latter retorted that no proof had been furnished him upon which he could proceed.

The delegate declared everybody was against him in Alaska, that the Taft administration had taken away his official patronage and that the Guggenheim interests voted 800 railroad men illegally in Cordova to defeat him.

TERRIFIC STORM IN TEXAS

Two Persons Killed, Many Injured and Heavy Property Loss.

Abilene, Tex., Aug. 1.—Two persons are known to have been killed, a score are injured and practically every business house in Abilene is more or less damaged as the result of a storm of wind and hail which swept over this vicinity. A number of residences were also wrecked.

Dr. Hollis, a prominent physician, is one of the known dead. He was struck by a falling timber.

Electric and telephone wires are strewn over the streets and with the exception of one wire to Fort Worth telegraphic communication is cut off.

It is understood that the storm raged with equal fury elsewhere in Taylor county and farmers coming in from places three and four miles east and north bring stories of wholesale destruction of property.

Chicago Lawyer Horsewhipped.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Frank T. Brown, a prominent Chicago lawyer, was horsewhipped on a public highway in West Chicago by a woman supposed to be his wife. Then he was knocked down by her and, after a chase, caught and horsewhipped again.

FRENCH CAPTURE GERMANS

Arrest Two of Six Who Crossed the Frontier From Lorraine.

Paris, Aug. 1.—A dispatch to the Journal from Nancy says that six German soldiers crossed the French frontier from Lorraine and that two of them were arrested by French soldiers and taken to the prison at Longwy, in the province of Meurthe.

According to the dispatch the Germans had cut the telegraph wires and broken down several telegraph posts.

COTTON MILLS CLOSE IN THE CAROLINAS

Drouth Throws Seventy Thousand Operatives Out of Work.

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 1.—As a climax to the unprecedented drouth this section is experiencing 152 cotton mills in North and South Carolina shut down because the water in Catawba river is so low the Southern Power company cannot supply the plants with power. It is estimated that 70,000 operatives are thrown out of employment, but it is believed work will be resumed in two days.

It has been many weeks since rain of any consequence has fallen and creeks which have not gone dry before in forty-five years are mudholes. Mountain streams, upon which many flouring mills, tanneries and cotton mills are dependent for power, have dwindled to mere brooks. Crops are burning up in the fields, while the hot winds are playing havoc with cotton.

Cities and towns to the north and west of Charlotte are facing the ordeal of such a water famine as this city is now experiencing. At Greensboro, Salisbury, Concord, Spencer, Monroe, Wadesboro and other places the situation is grave and measures of economy are being rigidly enforced.

STRINGENT MARRIAGE LAWS

Kansas City Judge Says That Would Be Remedy for Divorce Evil.

Kansas City, Aug. 1.—Nineteen hundred marriage licenses have been issued in this city since Jan. 1 and during that time 600 suits for divorce have been filed. This shows an increase in the number of divorce suits brought here, as about a year ago it was found that a ratio of one divorce suit to every four marriage licenses was maintained.

Judge Porterfield of the juvenile court said the situation demanded immediate improvement.

"Instead of devoting so much attention to divorce laws," he said, "it would be far better to make more stringent laws governing marriages."

WILL REBATE DUTY ON COAL

Dominion Government Comes to Relief of Western Canada.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—Owing to the failure of coal miners and mine operators to settle the strike in Alberta mines which has existed throughout the summer and threatens Western Canada with a serious coal shortage the government decided to rebate the duties on bituminous coal brought in from the United States to Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Eastern British Columbia.

The rebate will run two months. If the strike continues beyond that time the period will be extended, but if it is settled rebating will be discontinued two weeks after the mines resume operations.

White Retelling His Story.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Charles A. White, who, after running the gamut from street car conductor to member of the Illinois legislature, confessed to receiving money to vote for William Lorimer for the United States senate, began to retell his story before the senate Lorimer committee. He was the first witness at the previous Lorimer investigation.

DIPLOMATS CHANGE PLACES

Ambassador Leishman May Go From Rome to Berlin.

Washington, Aug. 1.—A wholesale shifting of the United States diplomatic service, incident to filling the vacancy in the Berlin embassy, was taken up at the White House and the state department.

John G. A. Leishman, ambassador to Italy, and Thomas J. O'Brien, now at Tokio, are at the head of the list of eligibles named by state gossip to succeed David Jayne Hill at Berlin. The appointment of either would necessitate a general rearrangement of the foreign service.

WOOL GROWERS IN PROTEST

Appeal to President Taft to Veto Bill Recently Passed by Senate.

Washington, Aug. 1.—President Taft received a long telegram from F. R. Gooding, president of the National Wool Growers' association, protesting against what he terms "the ill advised wool bill" recently passed by the senate. The appeal concluded thus:

"I appeal to you Mr. President, in the name of nearly 1,000,000 American wool growers, who earnestly pray that you will allow no measure affecting the wool industry to become a law until all the facts as to the cost of producing of wool and cloth have been submitted to congress."

"INDIANS" 10—R. L. FALLS 2

Last Wednesday afternoon, at the fair grounds, the redoutable Mr. Garteau was unmercifully bumped by the run-thirsty "Indians" and the sequel to the woeful doings was 10 to 2 in favor of the "Indians". However, outside of the third inning, when seven runs were copped, it was a real baseball game.

Goustan, of St. Vincent, was in the box for the locals and he sure had the Frenchmen guessing at every stage of the game. Holstein handled the receiving end in a creditable manner. Courtney's work at short was gilt-edged. Lambert's batting and fielding was the feature of the game, he pulling in two difficult flies and getting a three bagger.

THIRTY YEARS TOGETHER.

Thirty years of association-think of it. How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worthlessness of a bad one. So there's no guesswork in this evidence of Thos. Ariss, Concord, Mich., who writes: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery for 30 years, and its the best cough and cold cure I ever used." Once it finds entrance in a home you can't pry it out. Many families have used it forty years. It's the most infallible throat and lung medicine on earth. Unequaled for lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever, croup, quinsy or sore lungs. Price 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

Foolhardy Snake Keeper.

The only fatal case of snake bite on record in the London zoological gardens was directly due to the foolishness of the victim. He was in charge of the snakes and, coming in one morning with some friends, began to boast of his power over the creatures and the extent to which they would submit to be played with by one whom they knew. This led to practical experiments. The overconfident keeper took an Indian cobra from its comfortable sleeping place and, declaring he was a snake charmer, proceeded to swing it about his head and play other tricks with it. A native snake charmer would have known there was no more certain way to rouse the snake's temper than this, for the race abhors rough handling or sudden movement of any sort. The result of the exploit was that the keeper was bitten on the nose. He was hurried off to the hospital, but died in a few hours.—London Globe.

The Dreadful Looking Person.

Rodin, the world famous French sculptor, has had a wonderful career, and, like most men who have risen from obscurity to fame, he still preserves much of the simplicity of his early days. One day he was entertaining a few artists, among them a German who had never before visited the sculptor. At dinner they were waited on by a particularly plain looking woman.

"I'm surprised," remarked the German during one of the woman's absences from the room, "that you should have such a very dreadful looking person about you. Why don't you get a nice, good looking young housekeeper?"

There was a sudden ghastly silence. Then Rodin smiled.

"I don't like to be waited on at meals by servants," he explained. "The dreadful looking person is my wife."

"The Texas of Europe."

In the reminiscences of Mrs. T. P. O'Connor, "I Myself," the author tells of her first meeting with Henry James, whom she calls "a sort of Massachusetts Sir Galahad:"

The first time I met him I sat next him at a dinner. I had just come to London, and he asked me if I liked it. I said I hadn't made up my mind, and he said I would—that in London you were allowed every independence of opinion and action, only you must contribute something socially—beauty (and he bowed very courteously to me; and I bowed very prettily to him) or wit or agreeableness—and then London accepted you. I said: "History repeats itself. In Texas, where I was born, they say a man is not asked his nationality, his religion or his politics, but only if he is a good fellow." "Ah," said Mr. James, "then London is the Texas of Europe."

Jolted Mark Twain.

"Mark Twain," said a magazine editor, "brought out 'Joan of Arc' anonymously. Before he acknowledged its authorship he sometimes fished for compliments about it. One evening at a dinner he said carelessly to a senator:

"'Are you a novel reader?'

"'Yes, a great novel reader,' was the reply.

"'I don't suppose you're following that anonymous new serial, "Joan of Arc?"'

"'Indeed I am, though, every installment.'

"'What do you think of it? Is it good?'

"'That's hardly a fair question to ask me,' the senator, who knew the book's real author, replied. 'You see, I wrote "Joan of Arc" myself.'"

All but That.

"My present patient," said the pretty nurse, "is a peevish old millionaire."

"Never mind. He may ask you to marry him."

"Yes, he may. He has about run out of other requests."—Kansas City Journal.

Ought to Be Well Posted.

"I am quite surprised, Mr. Meeker, at your wife's knowledge of parliamentary law."

"She? Great Caesar! Hasn't she been speaker of the house for the last fifteen years?"

Quite Frank.

NAMING THE BABY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

There is no prettier village in the whole west than that of Pentwater, situated on the shores of Lake Michigan. It is also a thriving place, but there was a time in its history, and not so many years ago, that it had a terrible fight for its life, and that fight was precipitated by a ten pound boy baby.

Mr. James Pond, a young man of twenty-two, fell in love with Miss Edith Brown. He bought and shipped butter, eggs, potatoes and the like, and she was a schoolteacher. It is not on record that one single person in Pentwater had an objection to the courtship. Marriage followed, and still no objection. It was congratulations instead. But when time had passed and a little feller of a baby jumped into the arena there was a sudden and awful change. The father had become a Sunday school superintendent, and within two days after the birth of the baby he announced that it was to be named Leviticus.

Mrs. Pond was a very good woman, indeed, but she wasn't good enough to stand for such a name as that. She announced that the boy was to be named Leon, and right there the row began. Both had relatives, and the relatives were dragged into it. If you trace the record of Leviticus back you will find that he was a very good man and that his name was all right for the age in which he lived. At that time no one used nicknames. No one thought of shortening his cognomen to "Leave" or "Levi." It was always pronounced in full.

Mrs. Pond and her adherents held that the name had served its purpose and should not be dug up for the benefit of her son. When the two names, "Leviticus" and "Leon," were written side by side the odds seemed to be ten to one in favor of the latter. The boys might cut it to "Lee" and still leave it a pretty name.

"It shall be Leon, little darling, and don't you worry," murmured the mother as she held the kid closer to her bosom and her relatives said they would back her up in it to their last ton of hay.

But there was the father to deal with. He had not been known as a desperate or determined man, but now it appeared that he was. He vowed by the beard of his father that the baby should be baptized under the name of Leviticus or not at all, and he began using the name at home and abroad. There were those who congratulated him and told him that he was doing a great thing for Pentwater.

It cannot be said that business came to a complete standstill, but it was certainly affected. Several houses that were to be erected were not begun because the interested parties quarreled over that baby.

When the kid had reached the age of six weeks and was just beginning to take an interest in the questions of the day its father insisted that baptism should take place. Tears were shed and protestations made, but in vain. Then he came home to supper one night to find that wife and baby had fled to her mother's. He ordered them back, but they refused to come as mother and Leviticus. Then Mr. Pond's minister and his two deacons stepped in. They hadn't done so before, hoping the affair would be settled in the family. The trouble that faced them now, however, was that they were all for Leviticus. They pronounced the name as softly as they could and had much good to say as to the character of the man, but they made no headway. There were other ministers and deacons in the village, but they kept hands off. Tin peddlers and lightning rod men visited Pentwater, and those who were wise enough not to butt in did good business; those who sniffed at "Leon" and called it a novelish name or those who giggled at "Leviticus" and called him a back number got themselves into trouble.

Months went by, but both sides remained firm.

But there must come a climax to all things, and Pentwater finally had a climax. It was being proposed by citizens of sense to have a fire, a circus or an earthquake to kill off the old question when a good old man came to the town and heard all about the matter. He was selling a homemade liniment, good for man or beast. It could be used externally or internally. It would cure outside rheumatism or inside colic. Rub it on your back with a piece of red flannel and your lumbago would disappear. Take ten drops internally, with the red flannel left out, and your heartburn would trouble you no more.

When the old man had learned the particulars of the quarrel over the baby he stroked his venerable chin whiskers and murmured:

"I see; I see. You are a pack of idiots in Pentwater! There should have never been an argument over it."

"Have you got a compromise?" was asked.

"Certainly. You've hit it right there. Let the little shaver be called Compromise Pond, and let his father and mother and the rest of you quit being idiots!"

It was thought over, talked over and adopted within a week, and Pentwater went back to its good old days again.

P. S.—Every citizen keeps a bottle of that homemade liniment on hand against emergencies.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD NOTES FOR AUGUST

Locate vines of fruiting grapes, that you wish to move from the woods to that porch or arbor next spring.

Prune out old canes of raspberries and blackberries, And burn them. Thin the hills to three or four shoots. Cultivate, and add some manure to the soil.

Do not let any weed go to seed in the orchard or garden. It's easier to kill the one plant than the hundred coming from it next year.

August begins the apple and plum hravest. The grower who sprays his trees well this spring is enjoying a crop of clean, marketable fruit.

Keep all windfall apples and plums off the ground. They often have dropped because they are diseased or have insects in them. Feed to the pigs or burn.

Strawberry plants may be set this month, if the ground is moist and the weather cool for a few days. They are worth trying if you failed to set a bed this spring.

Notice the quainty of bright-berried plants growing wild, and mark a few of the most attractive plants to move into the home yard next spring. The high-bush cramberry and black haw are at their best now. Elderberries, red and black, are also fruiting well this year. Wild cherries, plums and apples are also fruiting well.

ADVERTISE

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself has said, 'My trade of late is getting bad; I guess I'll use a ten inch ad.' If such there be, go mark him well, for him no bank account shall swell; no angel watch the golden stair to welcome home a millionaire.

"The man who never asks for trade by local ad or line displayed, cares more for rest than wordly gain, and patronage but gives him pain. Tread lightly, friends, let no rude sound disturb his solitude profound; here let him live in calm repose, unsought except by men he owes, and when he dies, go plant him deep that naught may break his dreamless sleep; wherein no clamor may dispel the solitude he loved so well. And, that the world may know it's loss, plant on his grave a wreath of moss, and on a stone above, 'Here lies a chump who wouldn't advertise.'

"But he who hustles night and day to bring the trade along his way, and who indentifies his store with goods that bring a 'call' for more, shall never keep upon his shelves such goods; they almost sell themselves.

"So friend, if you are feeling glum because your 'biz is on the bum', don't moon around and think and think, but use a lot of printer's ink. That evil time will never rise, if you start now and advertise."—Ex.

With seven specific charges brought against him by Delegate Wickersham of Alaska it begins to look like Attorney General Wickersham was no greater a friend of the people than was Ballinger. It must be conceded either that Taft is not that consummate judge of human nature that some have tried to make him out to be; or he is a weakling, unable to do as well as he knows; or else, lastly, he is a hypocrite and only made believe he was a friend of the people to win his way to power when in reality his interests were all with the moneyed powers who now own and control him to their own advantage.

FOR MONEY OR FOR MEN?

Don't be misled by the plan to lease the Alaska coal-lands. Just remember that in order to use that coal the lessee must do these things:

Develop Controller bay into a true port.

Install a fleet of ocean-going steam ships.

Establish shipping points and facilities of distribution all along the Pacific coast.

Could you do that, Mr. Reader?

Could any person of your acquaintance? It is a rich man's proposition, isn't it? Yes, and more—it is a proposition only to be handled by one of two interests, viz.: The eight men who now control the great industries of the country (Morgan, Hill, Stillman, Guggenheim, Baker, Schiff and the two Rockefellers) or the people of the United States. So the question is:

Private monopoly or public monopoly—which?

There is no middle ground. To this have we come at last, the plain choice between organized dollars and organized men.

Every American citizen must decide, once for all, where he stands. He must be for money or he must be for men. Alaska coal is the crux of the conflict. Mysterious Providence has made that far northern territory the battleground whereon will be settled the question of the ages.

The fight is on. This nation has been irrevocably conquered for money or it shall be forever ruled in the interests of mankind.—Daily News.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

In last week's issue was given a brief outline of the cause of the introduction of city government by commission, and some of the salient features of the plan. At first a great many citizens shake their heads in doubt when they understand that the government of the city is to be given over to five men who, apparently, have unlimited powers.

In solving this problem to their complete satisfaction, those citizens should investigate several questions. First, Is this method best from a business stand point? Second, Are the commissioners elected in such a way that there is no chance for any but the best men? Third, If a commissioner should go wrong, is there any way of speedily removing him from office? Fourth, Do the people have the right to introduce legislation? Fifth, Do the people have the right to have referred to them any ordinance passed by the council? Sixth, Is the commission plan giving satisfaction in these cities where it is in operation right now? Seventh, Can the question, of whether the commission plan is best, be solved by merely chewing "rag"?

In the charters that are giving the best satisfaction are incorporated the initiative, referendum, and recall. It is thru these that the people express their desires when occasion demands. They are the big sticks of the people, the uplifted finger of admonition which keeps the commissioners in the straight and narrow.

The Initiative

The initiative provides for direct legislation by the people. If it is desired by some of the people to pass an ordinance which the council has not seen fit to do, an ordinace may be prepared by those people. A petition should accompany the proposed ordinance and be signed by twenty per cent of the electors who qualified at the last preceding election, and should contain a request that the ordinance be forthwith submitted to a vote of the people at a special election. Then the council may either pass the ordinance without alteration, or submit the same to a vote of the people. All petitions are submitted to the city clerk who in turn submits them to the council, provided that the petition has the required number of signers and is duly sworn to.

The Recall

The recall provides that the holder of any elective office may be removed at any time by a vote of the qualified electors. Suppose that one of the commissioners got to misbehaving. All that it is necessary to do is to get out a petition signed by twenty per cent of the electors who qualified at the last preceding election, and submit the same to the council thru the city clerk. If the officer sought to be removed does not resign within five days, the council fixes the date for an election. The offending commissioner may be a candidate for re-election; and, it is usually customary for the petitioners to give written reasons for the recall of the officer, and for the officer to give in writing reasons in jusification of his acts.

The Referendum

The referendum provides that no ordinance passed by the council shall become a law before the people have had a chance to register a kick. After its final passage an ordinance does not go into effect until after ten days. This gives disatisfied citizens ample time to prepare a petition to submit to the council. If such a petition, signed by twenty per cent of the electors who qualified at the last preceding election, is presented to the council; then the council may either repeal the ordinance, or submit it to a vote of the people.

The initiative, referendum, and recall are comparatively new additions to city charters, but they have been operating long enough to prove that they do not keep a city in constant turmoil, as was once supposed that they would. The advisability of such provisions is no longer a question of debates. In the light of actual experience it is shown that no better or safer innovation was ever introduced into city government.

TWO NEW ELEVATORS

Thief River will have Five Elevators represented by 4 companies.

Thief River Falls is becoming one of the great grain centers of the Great Northwest. Many thousand more bushels of grain will come in this fall than ever before, and big preparations are being made to receive this supply. There are now, or soon will be, five large grain elevators operated by four different companies. Hansen and Barzen have one on the Soo and another on the Great Northern. The Red Lake Falls Milling Co., has one on the Great Northern, while the latest additions, those of Tessum and Temanson and The Thief River Falls Farmers Exchange Elevator Co., are located along the Soo tracks

The Hansen and Barzen and the Red Lake Falls Milling Companies have been doing business here for a long time, and the men in charge and their methods of doing business are well known to farmers and business men thruout the state. It is quite likely that the fair and square deal which they have always given their patrons will retain for them a large percentage of their former trade

The increased acreage planted the last two years, however, necessitates more elevator room to insure prompt handling of the grain marketed here.

The New Elevators.

After visiting the new elevators and asking questions about construction, conveniences and business methods it is hard to say whether this is going to be the better one or that the better one. Certain it is that both elevators will be thoroughly up-to-date. To go into details about them would no doubt only lead to an invidious comparison, so it is left to the farmers and business men to make their own personal investigations. Both firms will do considerable advertising as a means of letting the people know all about their respective businesses.

Mr. Tessum has been engaged in the flour and feed business here for several years and needs no introduction to the majority of the people. His partner, Mr. Temanson, is an experienced grain man and has made good in the grain buying business. They will be ready to buy grain the first of next week. Aside from the usual grains they intend to buy clover and timothy seed.

The Thief River Falls Farmers Exchange Elevator Co., is the newest addition. They are keeping busy a dozen or more men and expect to be doing business by the last of the present month. There are now over one hundred farmers who have stock in the business, and there is no question but that they will hustle to make the institution a paying proposition from the start. Mr. H. A. Halvorson, of Winger, Minn., has been engaged as general manager. He has had lots of experience and knows the grain business from A to Z. Chas. O. Evenson is president, T. R. Rinestad is vice president, Emil Johnson is secretary and Oscar Sponheim is treasurer. All of the above gentlemen are known to be hustling business men of unimpeachable integrity.

TRUTH IN ADVERTISING

The necessity of literal, exact truth for successful advertising, was given a foremost emphasis at the meeting of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at Boston the pastweek.

One speaker declared amid applause that a code of ethics for advertising could be made out of just one word, that word to be "Honest." To this, he said, might be added the Golden Rule.

The profession of advertising has within the past decade attracted the devoted energy of a host of the brightest men in our country. They have pretty thoroughly learned the principle that the only way to build a successful business is on the foundation of the satisfied customer.

The dissatisfied customer is not an asset. In fact, he is very much a liability. Any business man of keen perceptions would far rather that such a customer should never have entered his estabiihsment. The slight profit that may be made off the stuff be bought is far more than offset by the the left handed advertising that he supplies to his friends to vent his dissatisfaction.

The only way to secure a satisfied customer is to represent goods precisely as they are. If the goods have defects, and the nature and extent of these defects are fully explained by the seller, the customer is never dissatisfied. Often he rather enjoys the defects, as he feels that they do not injure the goods for his purpose, but have been the means of enabling him to make a saving in price. He boasts of his bargain to his friends, and points out the faults, to show how essentially trifling they were, compared with the reduction that they made possible.

The customer would soon have discovered such defects, even had the seller remained silent about them. In that case, even if he bought the goods low, he would forever believe that he had been defrauded.

There are still so many cheats and shams in the world of trade, that the business man who makes his advertising an honest description of his goods just as they are, shines by contrast and wins a community of permanently satisfied customers.

CONCERNING SMALL MEADOW AND BOG FIRES.

Since the appropriation for forest fire prevention in the State of Minnesota is very limited most of it is being spent in maintaining as effective a patrol system as may be in the regions where serious fires are most likely. It is the idea of the Forest Service that most of these fires in meadows and bogs should be taken care of by the local people, without calling upon the State for aid. It is against the law for any man to leave a fire unattended even on his own property; so that it is but fair when a fire is found burning in a meadow or bog to call upon the owner of the land to put out it out. Any land owner ought to be willing to go to the expense of extinguishing a fire, since in dry weather it might easily start running and escape to adjoining lands and do damage for which he would be liable.

With the limited force of patrolmen and rangers, the Service is doing all it can to prevent fires, the idea being to concentrate help on the more serious ones, and to call upon the owner of the land to extinguish the smaller, smouldering fires. Under the law it is the duty of the Township Officers to see that every one uses proper care in the matter of fires. A person permitting a fire or burn unattended on his own land is guilty of a misdemeanor, and should consider himself lucky to get off with the cost of putting out the fire, without being taken into Court.

If it is found necessary for the Township can levy a tax not exceeding five mills on all property to form a fund for fighting fires.

The way certain ones at Washington favor putting off this tariff revision drives home the thought that they would sooner give the monopolies the benefit of the doubt than the people. Who, then, do they serve?

George W. Perkins, in arguing for the trusts, says "competition produces the two extremes—millionaires and paupers, while co-operation looks toward more stable conditions and a more equal distribution of wealth." We believe this is good socialist doctrine, and when the representatives of wealth take up the trite contentions of socialism the program of the latter must be at the door.

There are four big factors in the situation at Washington: The President, the Standpat Republicans, the Democrats, and the Insurgents. The President wants to be renominated and reelected. The Sandpatters don't care whether he is re-nominated and don't believe he can be reelected. They want to prevent downward revision. The Democrats want Taft re-nominated, but in such circumstances that he will be easy of defeat. The Insurgents want him defeated for re-nomination—Success.

President Taft once admitted the Payne-Aldrich Wool Tariff was "Indefensible." Now that the revision of that schedule is "put up to him" by congress he is thinking of vetoing it because the tariff commission has not had time to send in their findings on that schedule. What were the commission's findings on the Canadian Reciprocity tariff? Has anybody heard? None? Then why did he not vetoe that? Oh, yes, only farmers' interests involved—we see. Some difference when the woolen manufacturer, doesn't like it.

It is with regret that we again call attention to the spirit of hard words and hard feelings displayed at our elections. We do not care who the offenders were, whether friend or foe politically, those who resorted to unkind words and deeds are smaller by reason of such words or deeds in our estimation than they were before. We—the people residing in this city—School District—County—State or Nation, are one family, as it were, and what is good for one can hardly be absolutely detrimental to the other. We all share in a greater or a lesser degree with each other the common prosperity or the common misfortunes. Our laws and constitutions provide for elections which in themselves pre-suppose two things, viz: 1st Different candidates to be voted for and, 2d, Those elected by the majority shall rule for a given length of time. We believe that anyone who is an American citizen has agreed to accept these conditions and hence it seems senseless for anyone to become angry or frenzied over an election since every person has the one privilege of moving out of a community if he does not agree with its practices.

PICKLES IN A "PICKLE"

Mankato Free Press: The LeSueur News says: "Governor Eberhart broke the auto-speed law the other day because he 'had to catch a train.' There is a difference between being confronted with a great emergency like this, or stealing bread because you happen to be hungry. Dates for speeches must not be trifled with."

And Pickles, the policeman, who stopped the auto in its mad career, is now in a "pickle." He is suspended from duty, all because he was performing his duty like a police officer should.

THE PRINCIPAL WINNER

By F. A. MITCHEL

When the American troops were fighting their way across Cuba, Captain Timberlake, commanding a party of flankers, noticed a coffin lying not far from the road.

That evening in camp Captain Timberlake was chatting upon the events of the day with the adjutant and the major of his regiment, talking about who had been killed, who wounded, how the Spaniards fought and how they had the advantage of the Americans in the matter of arms and smokeless powder, when Timberlake spoke of the strange sight of a coffin lying beside the road.

If men have not the curiosity of women, and the statement has been denied by the latter, they have a trait equally peculiar. Men, especially those who lead eventful lives, are prone to bet about everything which is a matter of opinion or hazard. The question came up between these officers whether there was a corpse in the coffin or whether there was not. One of the party had noticed a cemetery on the way not far from the line of march and suggested that a funeral had been interrupted by the fight, the mourners had fled and the coffin spilled out of the hearse. There was doubtless an unburied corpse in it.

Now, the outcome of this suggestion did not result, as might have been expected, in the burial of a corpse, but a bet. The major made the suggestion, and Captain Timberlake offered to bet him $10 even that the coffin was empty.

The stakes having been put up, Captain Timberlake called Pat Mulcahey, a recruit picked up just before leaving the States, and told him to go back half a mile and look out not far from a bridge over a creek for a coffin. He was to discover whether it contained a corpse or whether it was empty.

A full moon stood about an hour high and made all nearly as light as day. A desultory firing was still going on, but had nearly died out. Pat crossed the bridge and about a hundred yards beyond saw the moonlight reflected from a number of points on the brass ornaments on the coffin. Pat went on till he got near enough to see what the object was, then stopped. A coffin probably with a dead body in it at night in a lonely spot did not appeal to him. He was wondering how he could determine what he had been ordered to discover without getting any closer to the casket when the lid seemed to lift of itself, and the moon lighted up a white face.

"Howly mother!" cried Pat, crossing himself, and, turning, beat a hasty retreat. Reaching the other side of the creek, he paused for another look behind him. What he saw froze the marrow in his bones. The corpse was coming with its coffin on its shoulder.

Pat tried to run, but for a time his legs refused to carry him. It was only when the specter reached the hither side of the bridge and seemed to be coming right down on him that his terror had a different effect, and with a howl he set off like the wind for camp.

Captain Timberlake, the major and the others were sitting in a circle waiting for the decision of the bet when Pat approached. As he drew near them the soldier reasserted itself, and he slowed his steps till he came down to a walk. Approaching the group, he saluted.

"Well, Pat," said his commander, "who has won?"

"If ye plaze, sir, what's the bet?"

"The major bets the coffin has a corpse in it. I bet that it is empty."

"The corpse was in it when I wint there, and now it's out of it."

"What do you mean?"

"The corpse got out when I was lookin' at the coffin, and now he's comin' with it on his shoulder."

There was a burst of laughter.

"Oi got me pay in me pocket," pulling out a roll of bills. "Oi'll bet it all that he is."

Several men standing about, ready to take advantage of the greenhorn, covered his money 10 to 1. The bets had barely been made when a man with a coffin on his shoulder approached and asked half in Spanish and half in English where he could get a pass.

There was another burst of laughter.

The captain looked around for Pat. He was nowhere to be seen.

"I've won and Pat has won," said Timberlake. "Now we'll hear this man's story. But first let me tell you something I happen to know. The poor class of Cubans hire coffins for their dead. The body is placed in the coffin before the funeral and taken to the cemetery in it. There it is removed and buried without any covering. Since the lid is not screwed down they use hinges. This man was not going to a funeral; he was carrying the casket away from a cemetery after the corpse had been taken out of it."

"You are right," said the Cuban. "I was carrying the coffin from the cemetery when the battle began. To escape the bullets I lifted the lid and got inside. I stayed there till the firing had nearly died away, when I proceeded on my journey. But now there are soldiers everywhere, and I would like a pass to get home."

He was sent (leaving his load till his return) to headquarters, where he secured his pass.

Pat was the chief winner, all bets being decided in his favor.

PEACE PACTS BIND NATIONS

Arbitration Treaties Signed by Three Great Powers.

EVENT AN HISTORICAL ONE

United States, Great Britain and France Agree to Submit All Disputes to Arbitration.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Three of the world's greatest nations, with the United States as the central figure and moving spirit, joined hands in opening the way to the coveted goal of statesmen of modern times—universal peace. America and Great Britain, and America and France signed general arbitration treaties for the peaceful settlement of all disputes that may be locked in the mystery of the future, even though they concern the national honor interests of the signatories, subjects invariably excepted in existing arbitration treaties.

Secretary of State Knox signed both the British and French treaties, and James Bryce, British ambassador, signed the agreement with Great Britain. Ambassador Jusserand of France signed the document for that country at Paris. President Taft witnessed the [illegible] ceremonies at the White H[illegible] [illegible]neral features of the r[illegible] [illegible] internationally jus[illegible] [illegible] submitted to The [illegible] [illegible]y special agreemen[illegible] sc[illegible] [illegible]nal is created or selec[illegible]

"Before arbitration is resorted to, even in cases where both countries agree that the difference is susceptible of arbitration, the commission of inquiry shall investigate the dispute with a view of recommending a settlement without arbitration.

"The commission, at request of either government, will delay its findings one year to give an opportunity fo diplomatic settlement.

"The senate will ratify the terms of submission of each dispute to arbitration."

COURT ENDS DES MOINES STRIKE

Orders Litigants to Arbitrate Their Differences.

Des Moines, Aug. 8.—Street cars are running again, strikebreakers have disappeared and attention now centers on District Judge De Graff, who will soon hear arguments on his mandatory injunction directing the street car company to reinstate Conductor Hiatt and put the striking carmen back to work and ordering the Carmen's union to revoke its strike order and return to work.

The court's order is temporary and was issued at the request of City Solicitor Brennan, working under orders of the city council, to stop the strike.

Brennan contended that the company and the union had entered into a contract, one provision of which was an agreement to arbitrate all differences; that the company violated the contract when it discharged Hiatt without arbitrating the case as demanded by the union.

Brennan holds that the city has a right to intervene, because the company is using its streets, because it is a public service corporation upon which the public depends for necessary transportation, and because the riots caused by the strike menaced public life and property, making it the duty of the city to intervene to protect its citizens.

RECEIVED MONEY FOR VOTING

White's Opinion of Many Illinois Legislators.

Washington, Aug. 5.—To his story of how he says he was bribed to vote for Lorimer, Charles A. White, former member of the Illinois legislature, added for the benefit of the senate Lorimer committee that he believed every one of the fifty-three Democrats who voted for Lorimer did so for a money consideration. He added that he thought some of the Republicans who voted for Lorimer got money for so doing.

White declined to mention the names of any Republicans he suspected, "because it is just a matter of opinion and do not want to do an injustice to any one." He said he based his opinion about wholesale corruption on the fact that he was bribed and that others confessed they also were bribed

Whether in the main we are retrograding or improving, there is one matter in which men have been steadily growing better. That is in their treatment of women. Half a century ago among young men of the world there was not the high sense of honor in the treatment of women there is now.

In the days of palatial steamboats, as they were called, on the Mississippi Roland Storms, traveling between St. Louis and New Orleans, met on the boat Adele Southwood, a young girl seventeen years old. Storms, who was ten years Miss Southwood's senior, had considered making a "conquest" now and then one of those accomplishments that was to be expected of a young swell of the period. To him love was a game in which all was fair. If beaten at it he would have considered that nothing remained for him but to take the consequences. If he beat the girl it was her part to grin and bear it.

Miss Southwood was not only ignorant of such warfare, but was a girl of deep feeling. She and Storms would sit on the guards during the day looking out upon the ever changing panorama, now passing under some high bluff, now sailing above the surrounding lowlands on a river built up by the levees. In the evening they would go up on to the hurricane deck watching the lights on the shore go by and, when the boat stopped to "wood up," looking down on the line of deck hands in the glare of pitch pine knots transferring a wood pile to the boat for fuel.

All this was new to Miss Southwood, and what was not only new but much more fascinating to an impressible girl was having a young man in constant attendance, saying pleasant things to her one moment, talking seriously the next and finally laughing at her for being so matter of fact. In this way he kept her in a puzzled state as to whether a mature man was really falling in love with her, a chit of a girl, or whether he considered her merely a child. Storms before reaching the Crescent City talked love to her—such love as pertains to the emotions without any prosaic references to marriage. But she was too unsophisticated to consider this. To her it was spontaneous love, something she had never experienced before and the more serious features of which were still a blank to her.

At New Orleans the two parted, Miss Southwood to remain there for the winter, which was coming on, Mr. Storms going by the gulf of Mexico to Texas. The young girl considered that the event of her life had occurred, the young man that a pleasant episode had occurred to relieve the tedium of steamboat travel. This is what he considered it at the time. He did not know that a seed had been planted in his heart which was not destined to germinate for a long while. He knew that this case was in some respects different from his many other affairs, but he did not consider it any more serious.

It was four years before he met Miss Southwood again. He was walking on the principal street of Cincinnati, swinging a cane, a "beaver" on his head, a velvet collar on his frock coat, a profusion of cravat on his bosom, his tight trousers strapped down over his instep, in short, dressed for a swell of the period, when he met, incased in a diminutive bonnet of pink silk, one of the sweetest faces he had ever beheld. It belonged to a lady about twenty-one years old, and she was looking at him intently. In an instant he recognized the girl he had flirted with on the Mississippi and jilted at New Orleans.

Naturally he was embarrassed. There was no expression in Miss Southwood's face sufficiently defined for him to tell how she felt toward him. He stopped to speak to her, standing uncovered, and asked if he might walk with her. Receiving permission, he joined her, stammering things to her which she, on her part, received with composure. She had been through the agony of getting over a first love and a first jilt, and he could see no traces of suffering, of reproach or of forgiveness. All seemed to be neutralized or, rather, fused into an absolute nothingness.

Storms walked with her some ten minutes, at first trying to regain his equipoise, then to discover some indication of the young lady's feelings toward him. In the latter he failed. But since there was no indication of unfriendliness he made bold to hint that he would like to renew the acquaintance. Before parting Miss Southwood invited him to come to see her the next afternoon at 2 o'clock. He accepted, and they parted.

At the appointed hour Storms, having summoned up all his will power, courage, adroitness to win again and win to keep what he had won and thrown away, went to call on Miss Southwood. He found a number of guests present, and a few minutes after his entrance the lady stood up to be married.

This was Roland Storms' last affair of the heart. He never took any interest in another, for he never recovered from this one. He died a bachelor and an old man.

Since that day, while youth is the same and affairs of the heart are the same, what would have then been considered a feather in a fashionable young man's cap is now held to be dishonorable.

Big Poker Stakes.

Many stories of big poker games among the western cattlemen in the early days have been told, but this story of the game with probably the greatest stakes is really true. Two well known cattlemen of southwestern Kansas, one of whom is now a prominent business man in Kansas City, started to move their herds to the pastures of Wyoming. Each herd contained more than a thousand head of cattle. When they came to the crossing of the Arkansas river near Coolidge they found a flood on. They were unable to cross for two or three days. To while away the time the two men engaged in a poker game. When the flood finally subsided so that the cattle could proceed one of the cattlemen said to his son, who was helping to drive, "Just turn my herd over to our neighbor and we will go back home." He had bet and lost not only all the money he had, but all of the herd of cattle.—Kansas City Journal.

Moving Troops by Rail.

"Let us suppose it became necessary to send the entire national guard of New York out of the state, how long would it take the railroads to handle them?" was asked a railroad official in New York.

"Twenty-four hours, easy," was the instant reply. "This is under war conditions, remember, which means that everything gives way to the movement of troops and their equipment. The railroads of America can handle men and war material of all kinds, including everything from horses and men to cannon and rations, much faster than they can be assembled and delivered to us. In fact, under war conditions the railroads are prepared to do their part quicker and better, with more certainty and better speed, than any other part of the machinery, commercial or military, in America."—Railroad Man's Magazine.

Black Fridays.

In England the term Black Friday was first applied to Dec. 6, 1745, the day on which news reached London that the pretender, Charles Edward, had reached Derby. Again on May 11, 1866, when the failure of a large English discounting institution brought on a most disastrous panic, the day was called Black Friday. On the day of the suspension the Bank of England raised the rate of discount 9 per cent. Wild speculation in gold in New York and other cities culminated in a monetary crash on Sept. 16, 1875, that swept thousands of firms and individuals into financial ruin and caused a commercial depression that extended into the eighties of the last century; hence the origin of the term Black Friday in the United States.

To Make Red Ink.

Red ink is easily made by amateurs who follow this recipe: Get a one ounce bottle and see that it is perfectly clean and dry. Place in it one teaspoonful of aqua ammonia, gum arabic the size of two peas and add six grains of carmine. Fill up the bottle with clear soft water, and after standing a little while it will be fit for use.

She Thought of Him.

She—Oh, Mr. Borem, how do you do? I was talking to Mrs. Nexdore just now, and I couldn't help thinking of you. He—And was she discussing me? She—Not exactly. She was commenting on the weather and just asked me if I could imagine anything more tiresome and disagreeable.—Philadelphia Press.

One Advantage.

"So you have adopted a baby to raise," we ask of our friend. "Well, it may turn out all right, but don't you think you are taking chances?"

"Not a chance," he answers. "No matter how many bad habits the child may develop, my wife can't say he inherits any of them from my side of the house."—Life.

The Tie That Binds.

"You seem enthusiastic, Mabel."

Red Lake county is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this coming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speaK.

A DIPLOMATIC MISSION

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

"Count," said the minister of foreign affairs to a young diplomat who had entered his service, "I wish you to get ready to leave Berlin tonight. Changes have occurred in China affecting the German, French and English interests there. If we reach England before the French cabinet can send an emissary England will act with us, for we can so represent the matter that it will appear to be to her interest to do so. If France is ahead of us England's action will be reversed. Here is a suit case containing all the papers you will need. Go at once to London and, without waiting to make a toilet, thence to the foreign office in Downing street. Endeavor to make the minister commit himself before you leave him."

Count Otto von Holwig left Berlin on the evening train for Ostend, intending to cross the English channel at that point. On the same train was a lady who, on coming to one of the main stops, alighted from her car and, passing along toward the rear, looking in at the open doors, finally entered the compartment occupied by the ambassador. She took a seat and threw her head back on to the cushion with every appearance of suffering.

Besides Von Holwig there were two men and a woman in the compartment, all of whom cast glances toward and appeared to take an interest in the suffering woman. She held her handkerchief to her face so that they could not see what she looked like and now and again emitted a low groan. The other woman in the compartment asked if she could do anything for her, but the invalid without speaking repulsed her by a wave of the hand.

Presently the sufferer started up and exclaimed, "It's all gone!" The men noticed that she was beautiful, and the smile she wore was a winning change from the evidences of agony she had given vent to. "And now," she added, "I must explain to you good people. I am a sufferer from facial neuralgia. When one of the attacks leaves me I need a bracer." She took a gold mounted flask from a bag and several tiny glasses. Filling one of the glasses, she handed it to one of the men, who took it. Then, filling another glass, she handed it to the next man, who tried to beg off. But a certain winning, dominating force that was about her prevailed. The next man she offered a drink was Von Holwig. He declined, and the lady could not persuade him. She then gave a glass to her woman fellow passenger, who after a fruitless effort to put it aside accepted it.

After all who held glasses had emptied them the lady brought out a box of cigarettes, which she likewise passed around. This also the count refused. But the lady gave him a look as if to accuse him of insulting her by this second refusal, and he gave in.

When the train stopped again the lady who had facial neuralgia left the compartment, closing the door behind her. A fat old gentleman opened it to enter and paused. There were three men and a woman asleep. The compartment was full of cigarette smoke to which was attached a strange odor. The old man called the guard and pointed to the sleepers.

"There's been a robbery here," said the guard. "These people have been drugged. Ten to one all their money has been taken." He shook one of the men, who gradually opened his eyes and looked at him dazed. Then another and another was aroused, Von Holwig among the number. He awoke with a start and looked about him for his suit case.

"Lost anything, sir?" asked the guard.

Von Holwig, white as a sheet, did not reply for some time, then answered, "No." He knew that he had been tricked by a woman and did not propose to give away state secrets. He left the car, sat down on a bench and tried to recover from both the effect of the drug he had smoked and the ruin of his career as a diplomat.

On the boat at Ostend on which passengers were gathering to cross the channel to Dover a gentleman stood looking anxiously up the way that led to the steamer. Now and again he would take out his watch impatiently and note the time. But five minutes remained before the boat would start, and the gentleman had given a sigh, indicating that some one he was looking for would not come, when a cab, the driver lashing his horse, came galloping down the street. The gentleman hurried to the dock and handed out a lady, who held in her hand a suit case.

"Good," he said. "You have won, and you shall have your reward. Go to Paris and report that your mission was successful, and there is good reason to believe that upon the foundation you have laid I shall be able to bring England to our views."

The next morning before dawn M Cavier, representing the French government, drew up before the London residence of the secretary for foreign affairs, called him out of bed and announced that certain affairs in China required his immediate attention. The secretary discussed the matter in a dressing gown, and the French ambassador when he left carried with him the assurance that such orders as he desired would be issued.

How Pat Was Working When Eileen Arrived

A Labor Day Story

By NORA C. M'CARTHY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Pat," said Eileen when Pat started for America, "I hope you won't git mixed up in the labor troubles in that country. They say sometimes there's fightin', and Oi'm skeert ov yer gittin' kilt."

"Niver moind, sweetheart, Oi'll take good care o' meself ag'in yer comin' over to jine me and we'll be married and live in a nice little shanty and have a pig and a goat and live loike gintle folk."

"But they say, Pat, that in America they don't have pigs. Anyway, they don't keep 'em in the house. Oi've heard that the pigs is all kep' together and killed together—sometoimes a mather of tin or a dozen at one killin'."

"That won't mather to us. We'll have one just to remind us of home. And we'll have the shanty Oi'm tellin' ye about wid the ladder goin' up to the second story"—

"Och, Pat, they don't have ladders in America, they have stairs."

"Well, we'll have a ladder in our shanty just as we'll have the pig. And by that same token we'll have a coo for milk."

"But Oi'm told people don't keep coos of their own in that country. All the milk is put in a big tub and it's peddled out in wagons."

"But we'll have the coo for the same raison we'll have the pig and the ladder, to remoind us of our beautiful 'islant and the home one couldn't have in it, because we're too poor. But in America Oi'll git together the money for the shanty and the pig and the ladder and the coo, and we'll live like fightin' cocks."

So Pat folded the poor girl in his arms, the tears streaming down her cheeks at parting with him.

"What's the mather, darlin'?" he said, patting her fondly. "Don't be cryin'. It'll not be long before I sind ye the money to come over to me, and be the toime ye git there Oi'll have the shanty ready, so ye'll think ye're right here in ould Oir[illegible]

"Oh, Pat, Oi'm feared y[illegible] succeed!"

And so they parted, [illegible] h no more money in his poc[illegible] than to take him in the steerage across the ocean. The pair were too simple and uneducated to have formed any idea of America. Their dream of a home there was such as they might have at home had they the means to establish it, where the pig and the cow and themselves might all live together in domestic harmony.

Since Pat could not write, his letters from the new country, written by a friend, were of the simplest character. He realized that even if he could write his own letters he would never be able to convey to Eileen's simple mind the real America. He was too wise to attempt it. At first his letters began in the usual way with his class:

> I take my pen in hand to write you a few lines to say that I'm in good health, thanks be to God, hoping that you are the same at the present time.

Then followed hopes that the crops would be abundant and that different members of the family were well. One poor speller who indited a letter for Pat wrote, "This letter comes hopping that you are well as I am, thanks be to God!"

"What's that?" said Eileen. "It comes hoppin'? Oi thacht it come by a ship."

Pat remained several years in America before he sent for Eileen. When he got a start he wrote, "Darlint, Oi'm buildin' the shanty." When he made some money he wrote, "Oi've bought the pig." Then the cow followed, his shanty was ready and Pat was ready to send the passage money that was to bring his sweetheart to him in America.

Before starting Eileen wrote that she wished he could bring the shanty and the pig and the cow to Ireland, but she supposed that if he could he wouldn't be able to make the money necessary to keep up the establishment. So she made her preparation to join him.

Pat knew the day she sailed and the day the steamer was d[illegible] in New York. He wrote her that she would arrive on a holiday they kept in America called Labor day. He would be busy on that day, and he would send his friend, Mike Fogarty, to the steamer to meet her and bring her to where he was working. Eileen thought Pat must be very industrious to work on a holiday, and she was glad and proud of him.

When the ship came up to the dock Eileen saw a man on it looking as if he might be Fogarty, and he was.

"Pat tould me," he said, "to take ye where he's workin', and I will." He led Eileen to a street where great crowds were waiting for something to happen. Then came a band of music and men with sashes and scarfs on caracoling horses. Among these men in a black clawhammer coat and silk hat she saw her Pat.

Pat caught sight of her and, dismounting, joined her.

"Is this the way ye're workin'?" she asked, astonished.

"Take her to the shanty," said Pat to Fogarty, "and Oi'll be there directly."

Fogarty led the girl to a five story tenement house, where on the third floor she was ushered into a nicely furnished apartment.

"La sakes!" she exclaimed. "Did Pat earn the money for this ridin' on a horse wid a piece o' stove pipe on his head and a blue ribbon across him?"

TAFT APPEALS TO THE PEOPLE

Asks Moral Influence on Senate to Ratify Treaties.

WOULD HALT THE MOVEMENT

In Addressing Mountain Lake Park Chautauqua Chief Executive Declares Any Hesitation or Discussion of a Serious Character on British and French Arbitration Agreements Would Hinder Move Toward Peace.

Mountain Lake Park, Md., Aug. 8.—President Taft traveled 400 miles through Maryland and West Virginia by special train to appeal to the people of the United States to use their moral influence to have the senate ratify the British and French arbitration treaties and the treaties with Nicaragua and Honduras. His appeal was made direct to the Mountain Lake Park Chautauqua of the Methodist Episcopal church, but in it the president included the rest of the nation as well.

"I observe," said the president, "that there is some suggestion that by ratifying this treaty the senate may in some way abdicate its function of treaty making. I confess myself unable to perceive in the treaty any such a point. To have these treaties not ratified by the senate of the United States or to have any hesitation and discussion of a serious character in respect to them would halt the movement toward general peace, which has made substantial advance in the last ten years.

"To secure the ratification of the treaties, therefore, appeal must be made to the moral sense of the nation and, while that is not entirely in the keeping of the churches, certainly they may exert a powerful influence in the promotion of any effective instrumentality to secure permanent peace."

The president asked for the same sort of popular support of the treaties with Honduras and Nicaragua.

"There is no issue before the senate so acute in respect to the cause of peace as the confirmation of these Central American treaties," he said. "While I admit the greater importance of universal treaties of arbitration in the long run and as affecting the world at large, yet in respect to American interests, in respect of peace in this hemisphere, they are not equal in importance to the confirmation of these Central American treaties."

The president spoke of the tendency of the United States to extend its helping hand to less powerful people and instanced Mr. Roosevelt's intervention in Cuba. That tendency was evidenced also, he said, "by the wonderfully successful intervention by Theodore Roosevelt as president of the United States in securing peace between Russia and Japan."

OPPOSING COUNSEL CLASH

Personal Encounter Narrowly Averted in Lorimer Case.

Washington, Aug. 8.—What promised for a few minutes to be a personal encounter between Attorney Elbridge Hanecy, representing Senator Lorimer, and Attorney John J. Healy of counsel for the senate Lorimer committee marked the close of a long cross-examination of H. J. C. Beckemeyer, former state representative, who says he received $1,000 after voting for Lorimer for senator.

The clash between counsel occurred when Mr. Healy accused Mr. Hanecy of having "the very purpose of confusing the record and those who will read it." He was speaking of Mr. Hanecy's questions regarding testimony Beckemeyer gave Saturday concerning his statement two years ago to officials in Cook county that he knew nothing of interest to the grand jury relative to corruption in the legislature.

ADMISSION OF TWO STATES

Senate Takes Up Arizona and New Mexico Bill.

Washington, Aug. 8.—With the recall of judges provision of the Arizona constitution as the principal issue the senate took up for final action the bill for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona to statehood. By previous agreement the bill will be voted on before the close of the "legislative day," which, however, may be extended by recess for several days.

The test will come on the Nelson amendment allowing New Mexico to become a state with its constitution unchanged, while Arizona must strike out the provision by which judges can be recalled. The house bill requires the voters of Arizona to vote on the judicial recall question before the territory is admitted, while in New Mexico an effort must be made by vote to change the constitution adopted so as to make it easier of amendment.

GOMPERS FLAYS COURT DECISION

Labor Leader Criticises Judge In Des Moines Strike.

ECHO OF TRACTION TROUBLE

American Federation of Labor President Terms Court's Order Natural Development of Unnatural Use of the Injunction—Des Moines Strike Leader Disagrees and Declares Court Merely Ordered Enforcement of Contract.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in discussing the injunction which has temporarily broken the street car strike in Des Moines, Ia., said:

"The judge's order is simply the logical result of an illogical premise. It is the natural development of the unnatural abuse of the injunction. The whole policy of the species of injunction has been to tie the men of labor to their work and to make ineffectual any effort to secure improvement in the condition of the worker or to effectually protest against the deterioration in the condition of the workers.

"That has been the purpose and the policy of the judges who have issued the injunctions against workmen engaged in a dispute with employers—injunctions which never would have been issued against other citizens or even against the same workmen were they not engaged in a labor dispute with employers. The purpose and policy is to tie the workmen to their work. In other words, to bring them into a condition of slavery.

"When a man is compelled to work under conditions which are onerous to him, which he regards as unjust, say, because of insufficient compensation or return for labor performed," continued the leader, "and he is compelled by the edict of a judge to work against his will or to suffer, or to go to prison for his failure to abide by the order of the court to work, that moment slavery has been established."

DES MOINES MEN DISAGREE

Believe Gompers Not Fully Informed on the Situation.

Des Moines, Aug. 8.—The statement of Samuel Gompers that Judge Degraff's method of settling the strike by the injunction process is equivalent to a "return to slavery" is not coincided in by labor leaders here.

President J. M. Leonard of the local carmen's union stated that he believed President Gompers had not been fully informed as to the significance of the court's order. He said:

"An agreement was in force between the street car company and our union which required that disputes arising were to be arbitrated. The company refused to arbitrate the case of Conductor B. J. Hiatt, discharged on the complaint of an inspector, and the union struck. The court's order reinstates Hiatt and compels the company to arbitrate his case. We feel here that the decision was eminently fair and a victory for the striking employes.

"I believe Mr. Gompers was thinking of the general effect of injunctions when he gave out his statement."

MOTIVE FOR CRIME UNKNOWN

Faribault (Minn.) Man Kills Wife and Himself.

Faribault, Minn., Aug. 8.—Thomas K. Talbott shot his wife through the temple and neck, killing her instantly. Then, turning the gun on himself, he fired two shots, one taking effect in the temple and the other at the base of the neck, after which he took a razor and cut his throat from ear to ear.

Talbott was about fifty years old and his wife was about the same age. He had been in the land business in Iowa, but had returned and spent the past week here.

A little girl was in the room at the time of the shooting, but ran out. The man evidently intended to kill her also, as five shots were fired.

No motive for the crime is known, but it is said by the officers that Talbott had been drinking for a week.

REVENUE OFFICER'S AIM TRUE

Kalispell, Mont., Aug. 8.—United States Revenue Officer Miller shot and fatally wounded Lars Larson at Polson when Larson failed to hold up his hands when ordered to surrender under a suspicion of smuggling liquor into town.

Larson died and Miller and Revenue Officer Knutson were arrested.

Boy's Shooting Lesson Fatal.

GOVERNOR POTHIER.

Will Use the Militia If Gambling Doesn't End.

TROOPS TO STOP GAMBLING

Governor Pothier Refers to Narragansett Pier in Orders.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 6.—Governor Pothier has begun a campaign against gambling, directing his attention particularly to Narragansett Pier.

After instructing Sheriff Wilcox of Washington county to see that all gambling resorts at the Pier and elsewhere in his precinct are permanently closed and after issuing similar instructions to other county sheriffs in the state the governor said he would back his authority with the state militia if necessary.

DECLARES DEAL CHECKED PANIC

Roosevelt Defends Absorption of Tennessee Steel.

New York, Aug. 6.—Former President Theodore Roosevelt vigorously justified his action in not opposing the sale of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company to the United States Steel corporation when he appeared before the congressional committee which is investigating the so called steel trust. The ex-president had been requested to appear to tell of the part he had taken in the historic deal by means of which the steel corporation acquired possession of the immense rich ore deposits owned by the Southern company, and his testimony took the form of a written statement, in which he set forth in detail every step taken by him in sanctioning that transaction, together with his reasons for acting as he did.

He did not advise the transaction, he said, but he did not forbid it, because he believed it imperatively necessary that something should be done to check the panic which was beginning to spread throughout the country. That the action he took accomplished just what it was intended to accomplish, was a complete justification for every move he made, he contended.

CENSURE VOTE IS KILLED

London, Aug. 8.—A vote of censure of the government for having obtained from the king a pledge to create, if necessary, sufficient peers to pass the veto bill was rejected by the house of commons by a majority of 119. The motion was introduced by Arthur J. Balfour, leader of the opposition, and its defeat is regarded as having failed to improve the Unionist cause.

The gravamen of the opposition's charge against the government was that Premier Asquith had taken advantage of the king's inexperience to bring about an abuse of the royal prerogative by securing the guarantees before the last general election. Mr Asquith easily disposed of this charge by showing that the ministers had pursued a properly constitutional course.

REMSEN WILLING TO QUIT

TOGO APPRECIATES HEARTY RECEPTION

Japanese Admiral Makes First Address Since Arriving.

Washington, Aug. 8.—A brief speech, the first he has made since his arrival in this country, was made by Admiral Count Togo before the National Press club of Washington at the close of a strenuous day's program. Following his visit to the United States naval academy at Annapolis the Japanese visitor was the guest of Secretary of State Knox at a banquet at the Pan-American Union building. Later he was given a reception by the newspaper men.

The admiral spoke in Japanese, his remarks being interpreted by Lieutenant Commander Taniguchi, his naval aide, who assisted his chief in the preparation of a brief and truly diplomatic address. He said:

"Since my arrival in this country the president of this great republic has received me with the greatest honor and hospitality, your government has extended to me innumerable courtesies and your fellow citizens have given me the most hearty welcome. All these, I dare say, are more than I am entitled to and I take them as meant toward my august sovereign and for his subjects. Nothing pleases me more than to take home the most happy remembrances of my visit to the United States.

"Gentlemen, may I ask to take this opportunity to convey to your countrymen, on behalf of myself, my feeling of profound gratitude and high appreciation of the hearty welcome."

Collier's Weekly has lately devoted considerable space to conditions in Minnesota. The article discussing the situation in the northern part of the state is in accordance with what the people of this section have advocated for several years. It is well for us to get an idea of what outsiders think of the situation in the state and Collier's has sized up the matte of state development accurately, as following editorial indicates:

> Of the total area of Minnesota, approximately half is still undeveloped. A large part of this undeveloped land is in the hands of speculators. Much of the land needs draining; without drainage there can be neither roads nor market facilities, nor continuous settlement nor schools. Minnesota owns nearly three million acres of swamp and school lands. By the sale of these lands to speculators, the state is not developed but the would-be settler is exploited. Minnesota spends a large amount of money to advertise its resources. Yet when a stranger goes to Minnesota to buy a piece of land he can find out little or nothing about the character of the soil, marketing conditions, road and school facilities, or the kind of social life that may be afforded in any particular locality. The state is at present selling its Lands for about $6 to $7 per acre, and on long time. In one country alone, which contains more than 800,000 acres of swamp lands, but 5,600 acres have been sold within the past three years, and one actual settler secured.
> Minnesota should remedy this condition. A complete soil, water power, mineral and social survey should be made as the first step toward refom. Then a certain area near to a rairoad that affords access to ready markets should be mapped out. Such drainage as may be necessary could be put in—roads built—a few acres cleared. In this way this country could be opened up to settlers and taken out of the hands of speculators. Every western state that does not expect to lag behind of the great onward march of the near future must take active steps by a careful watchfulness over speculators to save its lands to actual stettlers. The states that do this are going to lead in the development of the new west.

Foolhardy Snake Keeper.

The only fatal case of snake bite on record in the London zoological gardens was directly due to the foolishness of the victim. He was in charge of the snakes and, coming in one morning with some friends, began to boast of his power over the creatures and the extent to which they would submit to be played with by one whom they knew. This led to practical experiments. The overconfident keeper took an Indian cobra from its comfortable sleeping place and, declaring he was a snake charmer, proceeded to swing it about his head and play other tricks with it. A native snake charmer would have known there was no more certain way to rouse the snake's temper than this, for the race abhors rough handling or sudden movement of any sort. The result of the exploit was that the keeper was bitten on the nose. He was hurried off to the hospital, but died in a few hours.—London Globe.

The Dreadful Looking Person.

Rodin, the world famous French sculptor, has had a wonderful career, and, like most men who have risen from obscurity to fame, he still preserves much of the simplicity of his early days. One day he was entertaining a few artists, among them a German who had never before visited the sculptor. At dinner they were waited on by a particularly plain looking woman.

"I'm surprised," remarked the German during one of the woman's absences from the room, "that you should have such a very dreadful looking person about you. Why don't you get a nice, good looking young housekeeper?"

There was a sudden ghastly silence. Then Rodin smiled.

"I don't like to be waited on at meals by servants," he explained. "The dreadful looking person is my wife."

"The Texas of Europe."

In the reminiscences of Mrs. T. P. O'Connor, "I Myself," the author tells of her first meeting with Henry James, whom she calls "a sort of Massachusetts Sir Galahad:"

The first time I met him I sat next him at a dinner. I had just come to London, and he asked me if I liked it. I said I hadn't made up my mind, and he said I would—that in London you were allowed every independence of opinion and action, only you must contribute something socially—beauty (and he bowed very courteously to me, and I bowed very prettily to him) or wit or agreeableness—and then London accepted you. I said: "History repeats itself. In Texas, where I was born, they say a man is not asked his nationality, his religion or his politics, but only if he is a good fellow." "Ah," said Mr. James, "then London is the Texas of Europe."

Jolted Mark Twain.

"Mark Twain," said a magazine editor, "brought out 'Joan of Arc' anonymously. Before he acknowledged its authorship he sometimes fished for compliments about it. One evening at a dinner he said carelessly to a senator:

"'Are you a novel reader?'

"'Yes, a great novel reader,' was the reply.

"'Indeed I am, though, every installment.'

"'What do you think of it? Is it good?'

"'That's hardly a fair question to ask me,' the senator, who knew the book's real author, replied. 'You see, I wrote "Joan of Arc" myself.'"

Not at His Best.

"I was surprised," said the Rev. Mr. Goodstern sternly, "to see you playing golf last Sabbath. I should think you'd do better"—

"Oh," replied Hardcase, "I usually do much better! I was in wretched form last Sunday."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Lying In Wait.

"I've been sent down town to buy a taboret. What's that?"

"Don't you know? It's one of those things that stand around about shin high in the dark."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Veteran's Story

A Southern Girl Tricked Him, and the Result

By JAMES D. MOREHOUSE

My meeting with my wife is a curious story in itself, and illustrates the fact that there is no rule whatever for love,

When I was in the service, with that force which was opposing Stonewall Jackson in the Shenandoah valley, I was sent down to an outpost stationed at a little town some twenty miles south of our main army with a message to the colonel commanding there. While waiting for some written communications the colonel was getting ready for me to take back a young girl came into his headquarters and asked for a pass. She was as trim a little body as I ever saw, bright red cheeks and auburn hair—something one seldom sees in the south. She struck my fancy the moment I looked at her. I was standing behind the colonel, who was writing at a pine table. The girl said she wished to go north to relatives in Harrisburg, Pa The colonel wouldn't give her a pass to do so. She was about to turn away disappointed when I tipped her a wink.

You must forget I'm an old duffer and picture me as a boy of twenty, full of the old scratch. I thought what a pleasing episode it would be for me to escort the girl north. When I winked at her it was to convey information of a plan I had conceived to help her out. Then I rushed forward and throwing my arms about her neck gave her a smack. She didn't resent it.

"Why, Mag!" I cried. "How in the world came you here?"

She caught on at once. "I came down just before the war opened, and I've been trying to get back north ever since."

"How's the folks?"

"Pretty well. Mother's in poor health."

"Why do you wish to go north?"

"To do something to make a living. A girl can't earn anything down here."

"Colonel," I said, "I wish to introduce my cousin, Maggie Allen."

Luckily she had not given any name. The colonel shook her hand and told her that since she was my cousin he would most certainly give her a pass, I vouching for her. I told him that we had been brought up together as children, and I knew that every member of her family were strong Union sympathizers. He wrote the pass and in a little while gave me the dispatches, then the girl and I started northward on a twenty mile ride on horseback.

She was the most delighted girl at the trick I had played you ever saw. Her eyes fairly danced with mischief. She couldn't talk about anything else. We rode along for a matter of ten miles, when, coming to a fork in the road, she said that if I didn't mind waiting for her she would like to go and say goodby to an aunt of hers who lived half a mile up the diverging road. I had been riding twenty miles south and still had ten miles to go on my return. So I told her that if she would excuse me I would wait for her under a big tree at the fork. She said she wouldn't be gone long and started. I dismounted, lay down at the foot of the tree, lit my pipe and pretty soon fell asleep.

When I awoke I looked into the face of "my cousin" standing in the midst of a dozen or more Confederate soldiers. She smiled at me and said:

"I'm sorry to return evil for good, but the truth is I'd been trying for some time to get up into this region with certain information I'd been gathering about your army movements for General Jackson. These gentlemen have been waiting for me near here and I just rode over to deliver my information and tell them that you were here with some more of the same kind. Please let me have your dispatches."

I never was so completely done up in my life. I couldn't do anything but give her the documents, which she handed to an officer. They debated what to do with me and finally concluded that as a prisoner I would only be an encumbrance, so after holding me for a while they let me go on.

I left them, vowing inwardly that some day I would make that girl pay for the way she had treated me. But some day didn't come till after the close of the war. I was retained in the service and in Virginia for a while in 1865, and one day, getting a leave of absence, I went over into the Shenandoah valley to hunt her up. I found her at her home on a tobacco plantation.

The most satisfactory vengeance a man can vent upon a woman is to make her love him, then jilt her. I was quite full enough of bitterness toward her to play that game on her if I could. I pretended to think her action toward me very bright and declared that instead of making me hate her it had only drawn me toward her. This had a good effect, and she seemed to feel sorry for what she had done, though it was in the line of her duty.

I played my game so well that I succeeded completely; not at once, for I made several trips to see her. Then when the pear was ripe I prepared to take my revenge. After some deliberation I concluded simply to drop her without a word of farewell.

I dropped her for four days; then rode over to see her and told her that I loved her, and if she wouldn't marry me I would blow out my brains. She consented, and for twenty years I never knew an unhappy moment. She is waiting for me and I am impatient to go to her.

TRIES TO BRIBE POLICE

Red Wing Republican.—Officer Aaron Bjork of the Red Wing police department was approached by A. D. Stephens last Thursday and offered a better position with bigger pay if he would testify against Superintendent Whittier.

Andy Stephens, Governor Eberhart's right hand man in the prosecution of Supt. Whittier, on his recent visit to Red Wing attempted to bribe Policeman Aaron Bjork to testify in the Whittier investigation by promising him a better position than he now has on the police force, if he would do so.

With contempt for such methods, Mr. Bjork gave the discarded Crookston senator to understand at once and for all time that he was not that kind of a man—not for sale for position or money—and left Eberhart's emissary almost stunned as the officer hastened to take up his duties on his beat.

"I never did anything crooked in all my life and I am not going to do it now," said Bjork sharply.

Stephens deliberately set out to find Officer Bjork at the police station Thursday evening of last week at 6 o'clock. Approaching Mr. Bjork the wily Polk county manipulator introduced himself to him and asked if he was satisfied with his job.

Mr. Bjork said he liked his job very much and had no fault to find.

"Woulden't you like a better job that would pay more money than you are getting now?" asked Stephens.

"Well, I don't know," answered Mr. Bjork, not knowing what the questioner was driving at.

"Well, if you will testify in the Whittier investigation to things that you may know at the training school you can get such a job with better pay than you are getting" continued Stephens.

"Who told you that I knew anything against Mr. Whittier?" asked Mr. Bjork.

Stephens declined to give the information.

"You take me for a wrong man," said Mr. Bjork in conclusion and left Governor Eberhart's "handmaid" wondering why he had ever made such a monumental blunder and approached an honest man.

Stephens had evidently learned that Mr. Bjork lived near the training school and thought he could be bribed into giving evidence against Whittier on being offered a position.

To get the full meaning of this attempt on Stephen's part, it should be understood that anybody wanted as a witness in the investigation against Supt. Whittier can be subpoenaed and placed on the stand to testify. If Mr. Bjork had any evidence that the prosecutors of Mr. Whittier deemed pertinent, all they had to do was to call him and have him tell the truth about anything he might know. Evidently it was not the truth Mr. Stephens was after because that he can get without offering "better jobs and bigger pay."

This incident not only shows the desperate straits of the Stephens-Eberhart-Women's Federation combination, and the vile methods they are deady to use to accomplish their end, but it also raises one or two questions which should be answered for the information of the public.

One of these questions is, What authority did Stephens have to offer Mr. Bjork or anybody else, a position under the state? He is not a member of the Board of Control, although he may expect to become one if the governor succeeds in ousting the two members on the board appointed by the late Governor Johnson which indeed, seems to be the aim of the persecution of Supt. Whittier.

Another question is, Has the governor of the State of Minnesota given Andy Stephens authority to offer positions in any institutions to people who will testify against Supt. Whittier?

The governor and Stephens have taken up this battle together and Private Secretary Wheelock, acting as the representative of the governor's office, has preferred against Mr. Whittier, charges made by Stephens. Is it to be presumed that the governor, having officially sanctioned Stephen's attack on Whittier, has knowledge of the methods that Stephens is using in order to obtain evidence?

It is up to the governor of Minnesota to explain to what extent he may be responsible for the methods which his lieutenant, Stephens is pursuing.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

THE LAW, HOW THE MOVEMENT IS STARTED. ADOPTED BY MANKATO.

The Law.

There was approved in April 1909, by the state legislature, an act authorizing the Board of Freeholders appointed to frame charters for cities under the provisions of Sections 748 to 755 inclusive, Revised Laws 1905, to incorporate in such charters provisions for a commission form of City Government, and elections for all municipal officers, and to provide for the adoption of the commission form of government by amendment of such city charters. This act is found in chapter 170 of the General Laws of 1909.

The city of Thief River Falls is at present using as a charter chapter 8 of the General Laws of 1895. But if at any time 10 per cent of the qualified electors who voted at the last general municipal election do request that a new charter be formed, then the district judges shall appoint 15 freeholders whose duty it is to formulate a new charter, and the same shall be submitted to a vote of the people. The district judges are Grindeland, of Warren, and Watts, of Crookston. A freeholder is a man who owns property in the city.

The Movement.

A movement for the enlightenment of the people on the commission form of government may be started by a few of the business men posting themselves on the commission plan, and then calling meetings to which the general public is invited. After the regular talks there is a general discussion of the subject. It is customary, also, for the city to invite men from other cities, who are posted on this form of government, to give talks. These men are usually willing to come if they're expenses are paid.

In Mankato.

The enabling act for adopting the commission plan in Minnesota was passed so recently that not many of the cities have adopted it. Mankato was the first to adopt this plan, it being first submitted to a vote in 1909 and rejected, and again submitted in 1910, after a slight change in the charter, and accepted. The commission plan gave Mankato a pleasant surprise from the start. The city is, by nature, divided into a north and a south side. Each faction was always more or less suspicious of the motives of the other, so when the commission plan was agitated the north side thot it was a scheme on the part of their southern neighbors, who had the majority of votes, to elect all the commissioners, and, hence, derive the greater benefits. At election time every thing went as was expected, except that the north end elected three commissioners and the south end elected only two. This fact immediately stopped all contention. It also made some of the skeptical ones sit up and take notice because it clearly pointed out the fact that, under the commission plan, only those men are elected whom the people as a whole really want, and not the men who would be chosen by a selected few. In Mankato the commission plan, as far as it has gone, is giving satisfaction with the majority of the people.

MINNESOTA WILL EXHIBIT

Minnesota will show from 150,000 to 200,000 people a big exhibit of her products at the land show in St. Paul December 12th, to 23d.

Governor Eberhart has received word from the officers of the Northwestern Development League that the business interests of St. Paul Minneapolis and Duluth have agreed to a deal whereby this state will be furnished exhibit space without cost at the land show. The show to be given under the auspices of the league is the only one in the country which is not a jrivate enterprise and will be managed in such a way as to furnish space for official exhibits.

At a cost of ten thousand dollars the business interests of the three Minnesota cities have bought from the league 3,500 square feet of preferred space at the show. Each of the seven states will have a space of fifty feet long and ten feet wide for their official exhibit.

The governor has been asked to confer with officers of the league in this state and secure the interest of those necessary to put in an exhibit which will be credit to the state. Under this plan no one community or city will have an advantage over others in the state. Any city, county or land company desiring to make an independent exhibit will be able to secure a limited amount of space near the state exhibit on reasonable terms, but it is the desire of the league officers for this state that the best possible exhibit be made in the name of the state as it is from such an exhibit that results are to be obtained.

The seven states which are to be thus represented, are: Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota. No other states will have exhibits and Canadian exhibits will be barred, the whole idea of the show being "an exposition by the seven states for the benefit of the seven states alone."

Minnesota officers of the league are J. H. Dight of Duluth and Chas. Patterson of St. Paul. Inquiries about the state exhibits should be addressed to George S. Welsh, immigration commissioner, St. Paul. Information about concession space may be secured from Will A. Campbell, of St. Paul.

A Close Call.

On Wednesday afternoon Alfred J. Holmgren's two boys drove out into the country to do some practicing with their 22-long rifle. The older boy, 14 years old, jumped out of the buggy and as he was about to receive the rifle from his younger brother it was discharged, the bullet passing thru three thichnesses of clothing and entering his breast just above the heart. The wound did not seem to frighten the boy very much, for instead of going home to his mother, he leisurely wended his way up to Dr. Gambel's office and said that he guessed he had been shot and he wished that doctor "would see if there was anything in there." The doctor found upon examination that the bullet had entered the left breast a short distance above the heart and then probably had skirted along the collar bone, lodging somewhere in the shoulder. The wound was dressed but no operation was performed to remove the bullet. Had the bullet struck a trifle lower it would have gone between the ribs and done serious mischief. The boy is getting along nicely and no serious results are expected.

ANOTHER HOTEL NEEDED

Every day more and more evidence is driving home the truth of the fact that Thief River Falls is badly in need of another first class hotel. The latest evidence was furnished last Tuesday evening when five reputable business men from Red Wing, who had come up here to investigate the land proposition, could not get accomodations for the night at any of the hotels or other public stopping places. When they were just about to give up in despair, a kind-hearted liveryman took pity on them and let them sleep in his livery-stable for the small consideration of 25 cents per man.

Thief River Falls is growing so fast and has such a large transient trade that, under present conditions, it is getting to be one continual fight for proper accomodations. Traveling men who should logically make their headquarters in Thief River, live with their families in neighboring towns. A great many unmarried travelers hike off to Crookston and Bemidji for over Sunday when their inclination is to stay here. They're mighty fine fellows, too, and are usually desirous, and worthy of the best that money can buy. Men who come to Thief River Falls to engage in business, have hard work finding suitable houses, even though they have the price. Any land man will furnish proof that he can not anywheres near satisfy all the people who are asking him for houses or rooms to rent. Thief River Falls is just beginning to grow now, and this same unsettled condition will continue to exist until someone puts up a modern hotel.

It has been rumored for over a year that Mr. Charles Plain, of Milton, North Dakota, is going to put up a $75,000,000 hotel on his lot at at the corner of 2d Street and La-Bree Avenue. That corner is an ideal place for an up-to-date hotel. It's location suits the convenience of the traveling public better than any other available lot in the city, and it is on the best business street in the city.

The secretary of the Commercial Club will furnish information about the hotel situation.

Socialists Aggressive.

The socialists of this city will have a full city ticket in the field on a socialist city platform at the coming election this fall. They had a convention last Monday evening at which the attendance was good and great interest was shown.

A platform drafted by a committee, was reported and carefully overhauled plank by plank, quite a number of amendments being made. But certain planks were laid over till next regular meeting to give time for fuller consideration. Adoption of the platform was thus deferred to a later date.

Nominations were then made, several for each office, and these must be passed on by a referendum vote to determine which of the nominees shall be candidates for election.

Thus, with the socialists the motto in nomination affairs is: "Slow but Sure," so that when finally they have nominated their candidates they may know already then that these are the most acceptable to a majority of their party. They seem to work on the assumption that there is nothing like knowing that every candidate has the solid support of his party behind him in the fight.

And in this instance they promise a lusty enough fight. Once their platform is adopted and their candidates nominated they will go to it hard for votes. They say they will appeal for votes on principle rather than on the general popularity of their candidates.

Announcement was also made that Prof. T. E. Lattimer of the University of Illinois, the young, gifted professor of Economics at that institution, has been secured to lecture here the latter part of August or the first part of September.

MR. TAFT.

A Washington dispatch says that president Taft has received the invitation, sent to him by the Commercial Club of Thief River Falls, to visit this city on his western trip, which he intends making as soon as his executive work at the capitol will permit. The dispatch says further that the invitation is being taken up for consideration. It is believed that the invitation will receive serious consideration, and that the president will pass thru Thief River Falls if his itinerary will possibly permit. The time is now ripe for president Taft to take a trip thru this great northwest, and explain personally, his present and ultimate aim with respect to Canadian Reciprocity. His dictatorial policy in regard to reciprocity, and the Arizona and New Mexico Statehood bills, has caused considerable adverse comment in this section.

Welcome is that visitor who appreciates the value of anothers time.

We are told that an "Irregularity" is not necessarily wrong. We ask is it ever "Right?"

The Minneapolis Journal gave this country a fine writeup in last Sunday's issue.

An education is the only asset that a man can have that is not an incumbrance.

The book of today is not as reliable as the newspaper in the day of Ben Franklin.

Few men realize their responsibility to the world and still fewer pay the debt they owe.

The farmer who takes time by the forelock and does his plowing early has the best crop insurance for next year.

If you want to gain real enjoyment in life try to do something for others without expecting to be repaid.

President Taft believes in Reciprocity but he does not believe in free wool. We do not believe in Taft.

A newspaper that does not stand for the people is of no benefit to them. One that is good Lord and good Devil to all men is as useless as a blind honey bee.—Le Sueur News.

We do not expect to please everybody with every article in this paper any more than you would expect every person you meet on the street to be exactly like every other person in the city.

Considerable pressure is being exercised upon President Taft to veto the farmers free list, the wool bill and the cotton bill. If he does, it will be the greatest mistake in an administration noted for great mistakes.—Willmar Tribune.

President Taft has hurried back form his summer vacation to Washington in order to veto the bill making Arizona a state. His reason for the veto is that the proposed state constitution provides for a recall of Judges. Really it is too bad that the big president could not be granted the privilege of appointing all judges and their term be for life and then all kinds of Alaskan coal and land fakes could be carried on and no one be convicted of doing anything wrong.

THERE WILL BE A RECALL SOME DAY.

He showed his sound knowledge of the law when Atty. A. H. Walker declined to become counsel for the gentlemen who are moving to secure the impeachment of R. W. Archbald, the federal judge who let off the wire pool men with small fines and who sentenced a poor smuggler to jail and a rich muggler to a trifling financial payment.

Judges are impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors." It is necessary to secure the action of a majority of the house of representatives and then the case is tried—often in a partisan spirit—before the senate of the United States. In the latter body the powers of special privilege are still among those present. Even when the misdemeanors of a judge are quite flagrant and his crimes quite "high", these, his judges, are not apt to be severe.

It is doubtful whether Judge Archbald has been guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors within the meaning of the constitution. There is no doubt that Judge Archbald has shown himself the kind of judge who warps the laws so that a different kind of justice is meted out to rich and poor. The rich pay a fine which is so proportioned to their means as to be no punishment at all—the poor serve terms in jail.

Archbald in this respect is typical of a majority of our federal judges. He is no worse than Grosscup, Pollock and a host of others of that stamp. If it were possible to remove Archbald by impeachment the whole federal judiciary might be rendered amenable to the public welfare.

No, impeachment is too cumbersome and inadequate a remedy. If there were a provision for the recall of federal judges Archbald would be recalled. In the absence of such a law he will go on serving special privilege, and when he takes up his new duties as a member of the commerce court to which he has just been promoted by the president, he will do the same thing there.—Daily News.

BENZOATE OF SODA

Uncle James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, says that "the defence of benzoate of soda is one of the policies of the administration." But the celerity with which President Taft denies this suggests that the benzoate of soda question and other things relating to "Doc." Wiley's work are loaded with political dynamite.

Doctor Wiley has taken radical ground against food preservatives. He has held that they permit food manufacturers to conceal dangerous changes in the constitution of their products. His theory has been to keep on the safe side, and if there is a possibility that a food preservative is dangerous, it should be avoided.

The mystery that governs the preparation of food products has no doubt led to a certain amount of public hysteria. Possibly it may be true as claimed that the magazine articles on "The poisoners of the people" have caused more indigestion than all their naughty drugs.

But on the other hand, there are statistics to back the statement that $100,000,000 a year of Adulterated foods have been worked off on the American public.

Both sides of teh benzoate controversy have had their poison squads and encyclopaedic tabulations, but it is still a matter of guess work as to just what benzoate does.

Of course there is the report of the board of scientific experts appointed by President Roosevelt, including President Remsen of Johns Hopkins, one of the world's leading chemists and Prof. Chittenden of Yale, one of the greatest physiologists, to the effect that benzoate, if used in reasonable quainties, is harmless, furthermore, that as it has little color or odor it does not conceal changes in taste and smell.

Still the Association of State and National Food and Dairy departments last year could only muster a majority of 57 to 42 favorable to this side of the controversy.

When you read that the Massachusetts board of health, out of 92 candy samples examined, found 18 colored with deadly lead chromate, you begin to wonder whether all our food manufacturers mix up their messes with the philanthropic beneficence and scientific judgment that would be used by Prof. Remsen's experts.

"CLOSED FOR REPAIRS"

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

There was a rather curious situation in school district No. 8 in the county of Greenfield. There were six widowers living there and all of them farmers, and three of the six were the school trustees. For several years men teachers had been employed and had given good satisfaction, but now they were to change to the other sex. Widower Thomas, the moderator, had suggested the change, and he hadn't looked the other two in the face as he did it. He had simply said that he thought a schoolma'am would teach the scholars manners as well as geography. Mr. Williams had agreed, but had at the same time said to himself:

"I understand his little game."

And Mr. Burt had agreed with him, but at the same time had said to himself:

"The cute old rascal! But I see through him as if he was made of glass. If anybody around here marries that schoolteacher it will be me!"

The three other widowers heard of the plan, and each one said it was a good thing and each one had his whiskers trimmed and his hair dyed and made ready for the struggle. A seminary was written to and a teacher sent on. It was for Widower Thomas to drive across the country in a horse and buggy to the railroad and meet her and bring her on.

Widower Thomas had hopes that the schoolma'am would be about twenty-two and good looking. The arriving teacher turned out to be all he had hoped for. He felt so well acquainted with her before they had driven half a mile that he began:

"Now, Miss White, you are coming among strangers, and I want to post you about them. There's old Jim Williams to begin with. He's one of the trustees and a widower with four children.

"And there's Moses Burt. He's another widower. Claims to be forty-eight years old, but will never see sixty again. Looking around for a young wife and ought to be ashamed of himself. Great hand to laugh at his own jokes, but if you laugh with him he'll sure think you are in love with him and pop the question."

"Then I shall not laugh."

"Then there's Joab Tyler. Mebbe he's only fifty next birthday, as he claims, but he's sopping on the hair dye to beat the band. Five children for a second wife to take care of."

"That's dreadful!"

"Then there is Henry Stevens," continued the moderator. "I can't say that Henry is over forty years old, and his wife only left three children, but you can judge what sort of a man he is when I tell you that he never shed a tear at the funeral. He never even sniffled. Seemed just as unconcerned as if he was hoeing taters. I wouldn't advise no woman to marry a man like that.

"Then comes Levi Schemerhorn. He was to Chicago once, and he'll brag of it to you and try to make out that he is a hero. Don't you let on that you think he's anything great or you'll be a goner."

"No, I won't," answered the girl, "but are there any more?"

"Ahem! One more, Miss White. It's me. I'm a widower with a hundred acre farm and only one child. My tater crop alone last year brought me $500. Rising of forty is my age, and I can run down a calf. Got a melodeon in the house and am willing to buy a red ingrain carpet and lace curtains for the parlor. In case I get married I shall go on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and not mind the expense."

"And are there no young men in the neighborhood?" asked Miss White.

"Jest one, and he's a hired man who don't amount to shucks—eats with his knife and fork and says that Boston is in New Jersey. If I was you I wouldn't let him get the idea that you was a kindred spirit."

"No, I won't."

Miss White was left at the house of the Widow Harkness, which was to be her first boarding place. Supper was not yet finished when the widowers began to gather, and in the course of half an hour the whole six were there. Their excuses were various, but the fact was apparent that they had come to size the schoolma'am up. Once there no one would go and leave the others behind to get some advantage. The clock had struck midnight when the widow turned them all out in a bunch. There wasn't exactly a fight outside the gate, but the six told each other what they thought of hair dye and old galoots. When they were gone the schoolma'am turned to the widow and asked:

"Don't any of those men want you for a wife?"

"Not if they can get you," was the doleful reply.

Ten minutes of confidential talk settled things. The schoolhouse was close by, and on its door was tacked the notice:

"This place closed for repairs."

At daylight next morning the widow harnessed a horse to her democrat wagon, and within two hours Miss White was landed at the spot where the moderator had found her. When the community learned that she had gone those six old widowers looked at each other and said:

"Durn your buttons, but it was your gab and your hair dye that driv her away, and you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

A Wise Provision.

Did you ever notice when a man smites his thumb with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntarily, like winking. The man cannot help it. The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt—and it doesn't take a very hard blow, almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do—by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off.

A man who possessed much land and had many younger brothers was asked why he did not go out hunting as his brothers did.

The Whistling Jugs of Peru.

The potters of ancient Peru used to manufacture an ingenious musical instrument which may very properly be called a whistling jig. In collections of antiquities it is called a silvador or silvio. Specimens are obtained from the ancient burial places of Peru. One of these consists of two vases, whose bodies are joined one to the other, with a hole or opening between them. The neck of one of these vessels is closed, with the exception of a small opening in which a clay pipe is inserted, leading to the body of the whistle. The closed neck of this double vase is modeled into a representation of a bird's head. When a liquid is poured into the open necked vase the air is compressed in the other, and in escaping through the narrow opening is forced into the whistle, the vibration producing sounds. Many of these sounds represent the notes of birds; one in the collection at the British museum imitates the notes of the robin or some other member of the thrush tribe, peculiar to Peru.—Harper's Weekly.

Ample Apology.

An Irish lawyer once addressed the court as "gentlemen" instead of "your honors." After he had concluded a brother of the bar reminded him of his error. He immediately arose and apologized thus: "May it please the court, in the heat of debate I called yer honors gentlemen. I made a mistake, yer honors." Then he sat down, and if the court was not satisfied it did not disclose the fact.—Case and Comment.

An Escape

By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Our family has occupied the same house in London for several centuries, and the upper stories are crowded with heirlooms and old papers. This continued residence is remarkable, for there has never been a political disturbance in the kingdom in which at least one of my race did not take part. In nosing over an old letter written by one of my quarrelsome ancestors to his mother I found the following story:

Heaven keep you, my dear mother, and may the joy of getting this letter and the news contained in it not be too much for you, seeing that your son is out of reach of harm in this pleasant land of France, a land that I shall always love, since its grapes or, rather, the wine made from their juice is at the bottom of my escape. Had it not been for an idea put in my head by the wine I had in the cellar of the Tower I would now be without a head. like the duke (of Monmouth) in whose stupid effort to take the throne from his uncle, King James, I was much mixed.

You know that, being a man of rank, yet not a leader in the rebellion, I was accorded the privileges usually granted to such persons, being lodged with the lieutenant of the Tower himself and as fine a fellow as ever served his sovereign. From the first I felt sure I would keep my head on my shoulders, and if I didn't I was bound to enjoy what little time was left me. The lieutenant and I were kindred spirits, and many were the cups of October ale we drank together, he always giving the toast, "May your head never roll into a basket, but may you meet the death of a nobleman, falling before a pike or a sword."

I had the wine you sent me down in the cellar under the Tower in which are the lieutenant's quarters, and one day while drinking with my jailer, we getting tired of ale, I told him that I had some fine French wine in the cellar and if he would let me send my man for it I would open a bottle. He gave the permission and the cellar key, and, calling Jacob, I gave him the key and told him to go for a bottle. I also tipped him a knowing look.

It was only a look, and I never dreamed that a look and a key would tell him what I wished to say to him, but couldn't speak for the presence of the lieutenant. But when a man is waiting to have his head lopped off he will cling to any straw of hope, and so did I. Jacob was gone a long while, but in time came to the door and instead of handing me [illegible] bottle his arm. I knew what this meant, and quick as a flash I moved the key of the door from the inside to the outside and locked it, shutting in the lieutenant.

I began at once putting on Jacob's clothes, and he began putting on mine. While he was doing so he told me why he had been so long. He had told the man on guard that he had the key to the cellar where the wine was kept and if he would come with him he might have all he wished to drink. When Jacob got the guard in the cellar he opened a bottle of the wine and told him to drink quick because I was waiting for him to come with wine and he couldn't be too long. The man drank two bottles as fast as he could pour their contents down, then fell on the floor. Jacob locked him in.

I was but a few minutes getting on Jacob's breeches and doublet and, putting on his hat, pulled it down over my face. Then, pretending to be drunk with liquor, I staggered out into the courtyard, and, passing over the spot where two of King Harry's wives were beheaded, I walked past the sentry at the postern, those I met laughing at me for a sot. I was obliged to pass over Tower hill, where stood a scaffold that had for weeks been used for beheading such rebels as I and, tottering down into the frequented streets, lost myself in the crowd.

Luck helped me, for no one saw me to know me, though I saw some I knew. I thought of going home to hide, but knew I would be sought there and pushed on, moving by the outskirts till I reached the east side of the town, when I pushed off through the country toward the coast.

But I did not go directly east, for I wished to see my sweetheart at Linkborn manor and give her a kiss before putting the sea between her and me, besides relieving her mind as to the chance of still keeping my head and body together. It was evening when I came to the manor, and Margaret was walking among the flowers. She was languid and drooping, for she had been told that I would be brought to the block in a few days. When she saw me coming in Jacob's clothes she knew his doublet and gave a cry, thinking he was bringing her news of me. Staggering toward me, she fell fainting in my arms. I kissed her back to life, and when she opened her eyes she was looking into mine.

But there was little time, for I knew they would seek me where she was, and I begged her to get me some food in a napkin while I went to the stable and got out a horse. When one was saddled I rode out, met her with the victuals, bent down and kissed her, then, giving the horse the spurs, galloped away.

And here I am in France, dear mother, ready to put my head in jeopardy again.

PEERS APPROVE VETO MEASURE

Bill Passes House of Lords by Narrow Margin.

VOTE STANDS AT 131 TO 114

Struggle Begun Two Years Ago Ends in Radical Change in Great Britain's Working Constitution.

London Aug. 11.—Premier Asquith's government, which claims to represent the democracy of Great Britain, enforced its will on the peerage by the narrow vote of 131 to 114.

By this vote the house of lords decided to accept what the Liberals contend is the will of the people and adopted Viscount Morley's motion not to insist on the lords' amendments to the parliamentary bill, which practically limits the power of the house of lords to a two-year suspensory veto and vastly increases the prerogatives of the house of commons.

The great constitutional struggle that began when the house of lords nearly two years ago rejected the budget of David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, is ended for a time at least and with the greatest change to Great Britain's working constitution since the passage of the reform bill.

The process of voting consumed nearly an hour and the result trembled in the balance until the last moment. The "die hards" mustered greater strength than was expected and the government owes its victory to the votes of between twenty and thirty Conservatives who threw in their lot with the Liberals to save their own caste from loss of prestige and the king from the necessity of exercising the royal prerogative for the creation of a large number of new peers, from which every one believes he was extremely anxious to be saved.

A resolution to pay members of the house of commons $2,000 annually for their services was carried by a vote of 256 to 159.

The resolution was moved by Chancellor Lloyd-George, who said Great Britain was the only country in the world that did not pay members for their work in parliament, which nowadays is so strenuous the members have little time to attend to anything else.

WILL VETO STATEHOOD BILL

President Taft Opposed to Judiciary Recall Feature.

Washington, Aug. 10.—President Taft will veto the New Mexico-Arizona statehood resolution as passed by the senate. Democratic leaders of both house and senate declare, however, that they could marshal enough votes to pass the measure over a veto.

The president indicated some time ago that he would take this action unless the Nelson amendment was adopted. This amendment would have required the people of Arizona, as a condition of statehood, to vote down the provision in their constitution for the recall of judges. The amendment was defeated and the senate passed the bill as it came from the house, simply requiring that a vote be taken on the recall feature.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Organized labor won a signal victory when Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell construed the last naval appropriation act to mean that "every" employe in a shipyard where government vessels are building must be given an eight-hour day.

Heretofore it had been held by the attorney general that former appropriation acts applied the eight-hour restriction only to work actually being performed on the vessel itself.

ADOPT CONFERENCE REPORT

Thirty Western Republicans Join Democrats on Wool Bill.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Thirty Western Republicans, among them seven from Minnesota, joined with the Democrats in passing the conference report on the La Follette-Underwood wool bill in the house of representatives. The measure was passed by a vote of 206 to 90.

Representative Stevens of St. Paul was the only member of the Minnesota delegation to vote against the wool bill.

DEPLORE TARIFF ACTION NOW

National Business League Would Wait Until Board Reports.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Directors of the National Business league at a meeting held here adopted resolutions deprecating congressional action looking toward any tariff revision until the tariff board has completed its investigation of the different schedules and reported to congress.

The resolution endorses the policy of President Taft in regard to tariff revision.

G. W. NORRIS.

Accuses Administration of Meddling in Nebraska Fight.

NEBRASKA SENATORIAL FIGHT

Norris Accuses Administration of Taking Sides.

Washington, Aug. 15.—An ugly situation is developing as a result of alleged interference by the administration in the senatorial situation in Nebraska. Representative George W. Norris of Nebraska, who led the revolt in the house against Speaker Cannon in February, 1910, is a candidate for the seat against Norris Brown, whose term will expire in March, 1913.

Friends of Mr. Norris insist that the administration is taking sides in the contest. It is pointed out that James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address at the Nebraska state fair in Lincoln early in September.

FRENCH STEAMER SUNK IN COLLISION

Ninety-Three Persons Perish in Disaster.

Gibraltar, Aug. 10.—The French steamer Emir foundered five miles east of Tarifa, Spain, in the Straits of Gibraltar. Ninety-three persons were drowned.

An hour later, in a dense fog, she collided with the British steamer Silverton, bound from Newport, Eng., for Taranto, Italy.

The crew of the latter rescued twenty-seven of the Emir's crew and passengers.

The Silverton later put in here with her starboard bow stove in and her forepeak full of water.

The Emir floated only a few minutes after the collision. Sixty-nine passengers and twenty-four of the crew went down with the ship. Twelve of the crew and fifteen passengers were saved. All the passengers were French.

COMMITTEE CHANGES FRONT

Will Not Compel Perkins to Answer Certain Questions.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The house steel trust investigating committee at on executive session decided not to press at this time questions of campaign contributions, in connection with which George W. Perkins of New York, a director of the United States Steel corporation, was threatened with contempt proceedings before the house of representatives.

The committee decided, however, to require the steel corporation to produce the books of subsidiary companies.

The committee's decision not to press the inquiry into campaign contributions was based on the conclusion that the house resolution did not give authority to go into those matters. It was said that Representative Littleton of New York insisted that the committee would thus transcend its power.

EMPEROR OF JAPAN PLEASED

Thanks President for Courtesy to Admiral Togo.

Washington, Aug. 10.—President Taft has received a cablegram from the emperor of Japan thanking him for his cordial welcome to Admiral Togo. The message follows:

"The splendid welcome accorded by you to Admiral Togo and the friendly sentiments expressed by you on that occasion have touched me very deeply and I pray you to accept this assurance of my most cordial thanks and appreciation."

General Gordon Dead.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 11.—General George W. Gordon, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans and United States congressman, is dead. General Gordon's illness was due to kidney trouble, which developed complications.

Value of Fat.

The popular view of the close connection between fat and good nature and weight and balance is not wholly without rational foundation. Fat, unpleasant and stodgy as it is, is one of the most valuable tissues in the human body, and any man who reduces his share of it below a certain reasonable level not only takes the smooth edge off his temper and balance off his powers of judgment, but exposes all of his higher tissues, notably the muscular, nervous and secreting, to danger of both starvation and disease. A moderate cushion of fat is one of the best buffers and bucklers against the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," whether in the form of disease germs or in strains upon endurance. The man who makes himself into a lean and hungry Cassius even with the best of intentions is very apt to get himself into a state of both mind and body where he is more fit for treason, stratagem and spoils than for comfort, wholesomeness and a long, happy life.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Outing.

A West Indian Fish Dish.

A novelty to the jaded palate and a delightful luncheon or supper dish is made of equal quantities of potatoes and fish, halibut or cod preferred. Butter well a deep baking dish and first put in a layer of breadcrumbs, then a layer of sliced onions, then a layer of the fish. Cut in fairly small pieces and entirely free from skin and bones. Season well and repeat until the dish is nearly filled. Sprinkle each layer with small bits of butter. Now pour over it all a pint of tomato ketchup and finish with a layer of buttered breadcrumbs. A layer of sliced tomatoes may be put in and will improve the flavor. Bake in a very slow oven for at least four hours and baste three or four times with a mixture of vinegar, flour and water, watching it carefully to prevent scorching. This dish has an unpronounceable and decidedly unspellable name, but it is very good and decidedly out of the ordinary.—Philadelphia Press.

The Absolute Zero.

What is the absolute zero of temperature? The zero of thermometers is purely conventional. The inventor of the centigrade simply took for zero the coldest temperature known in his day, while Fahrenheit had even less ground for his selection. Absolute zero is a point fixed by nature and may be arrived at in a variety of ways. All gases expand or contract equal amounts for every degree of heat. The amount of 1-273 of their volume for each degree centigrade. If, then, a gas is cooled down continuously it must reach a point at which further contraction is impossible. If a gas loses 1-273 of its volume at each downward degree of centigrade then in 273 degrees it would exhaust this power and become a solid; hence (minus) 273 C. is the absolute zero of temperature. This answers to 461 F.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Belief In Ghosts.

In most of the Oriental countries, notably in China and in many quarters in Europe, the belief in ghosts is still active, quite as much so as it was a thousand years ago. The peasantry of Russia, and especially of Siberia, are in constant dread of ghosts, and much of their time is taken up with devising ways and means of safeguarding themselves against their visitations. Not even in the United States of America is the ancient superstition defunct. The negroes are notorious believers in ghosts, and thousands of white people, remote from the center of intelligence, are still the victims of the old idea.—New York American.

Able, but Not Willing.

"Come, now," persisted the lawyer, "are you not able to say of your own knowledge that the defendant was in the room at the time and objected to the whole proceeding?"

"Yes, sir," savagely replied the witness. "I am able to say it, I reckon, but I'd be telling the biggest lie you ever heard of if I did."

Sensitive.

"Ah," he protested, "my love for you is the greatest thing in the world. It is larger than the world. It is wider than the sea. Let me pour it into your ears."

"Sir," ejaculated the fair maid, "do you mean to insinuate anything about the size or shape of my ears?"

An Old Superstition.

It was a common superstition in ancient Italy that if a woman were found spinning on a highroad the crops would be ruined for that year. In most sections of Italy a woman was forbidden by law thus to spin or even to carry an uncovered spindle on the highway.

Some Sacrifice.

Jenny—Jack, you ought to make some sacrifice to prove that you love me. What will you give up when we are married? Jack—I'll—I'll give up being a bachelor.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Transparent.

Teacher—Now, remember, Nellie, that anything you can see through is transparent. Can you name something that is transparent? Small Nellie—Yes, ma'am; a keyhole.

Strenuous Action.

Tailor—Has Mr. Owens taken any action on that bill of his yet? Collector—Yes; he kicked me out the last time I called to collect it.—Boston Transcript.

BLOODY RIOTING AT LIVERPOOL

Strikers and Police in Frequent Clashes.

MARTIAL LAW IS PROBABLE

Authorities Are Determined to Quell Disorders and Will Use Powder and Ball if Necessar.

Liverpool, Aug. 15.—Rioting was resumed after a night filled with violence and bloodshed.

Mob spirit ruled everywhere. With the police and soldiery wearied after the all night struggle the mob began in the early morning to loot barrooms and provision shops.

A score of shops were entered after the doors and windows had been smashed. Liquor increased the anger of the mob.

The police and soldiers, by frequent charges, with clubs swinging and bayonets fixed, finally cleared the streets and restored a semblance of order.

Many were injured in the charges and more than 100 arrested.

The authorities sent out word that the entire city will be placed under martial law and order restored with powder and ball if necessary.

At daylight all manner of vehicles were impressed into service to remove the wounded, many of whom lay on the pavements in pools of blood. One hundred and seventy-five, of whom twenty were policemen, were treated at hospitals for serious injuries.

One policeman is dead and scores of strikers are suffering from fractured skulls.

Worst in History of Country.

The rioting was the worst clash between workers and civil authorities in the history of the country.

Driven from one stronghold the mobs reformed in the narrow streets and it was impossible for the police to drive them out. Wearied with fighting the troops the mobs turned their attention to the destruction of property. While some looted shops others set fire to two houses in Girard street. The mob cheered as they burned and refused to allow firemen or police to extinguish the flames. The "Hooligan" element led the mobs and the frantic appeals of the strike leaders were futile.

Further troops from the Yorkshire regiment and the Warwickshire Yeomanry arrived in the city shortly after daylight and were at once rushed into the streets.

The outbreak followed a trivial action of the police in maintaining order during the demonstration of 100,000 strikers at St. George's hall.

An unusual scene was presented in police court when 100 men and women rioters, arrested during the clashes, were arraigned. Many had their heads bandaged and their clothes torn to shreds. Nearly all were sentenced to jail terms, some getting as long as three months.

POPE SUFFERS A SLIGHT RELAPSE

Physicians Hurriedly Summoned to His Bedside.

Rome, Aug. 13.—Pope Pius suffered a slight relapse during the night and his physicians were hurriedly summoned to the bedside by Dr. Amici, who kept vigil in the sick chamber.

Dr. Petacci at once administered an injection of caffeine, which strengthened the heart action and removed any immediate danger.

After the injection his holiness rested more easily, but took very little nourishment.

Doctors Petacci and Machiafava, while making no statement, showed their disappointment and anxiety because the pope had not made the improvement they had expected.

As a result they have ordered that the pope hold no audiences of any kind and all church matters are held in abeyance.

MUNICIPAL CAR MEN STRIKE

Glasgow, Scotland, Aug. 13.—The corporation street car men went on strike and disorganized the whole service. Attempts to send out cars in charge of the corporation's inspectors were prevented by force. The strikers, in large bodies, attacked and wrecked the cars.

WILEY READY TO TAKE THE STAND

Pure Food Expert Will Testify in His Own Behalf.

INQUIRY HEARING ITS CLOSE

Committee Investigating Affairs in the Agricultural Department Expects to Complete Its Work Before the Adjournment of Congress and May Make a Report to the House This Session.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The house committee investigating affairs in the agricultural department and the facts surrounding the threatened reprimand or removal of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, expects to finish its investigation before the adjournment of congress and if possible make a report to the house at this session. Dr. Wiley was ready to take the witness stand, but Chairman Moss put on other witnesses.

Dr. Baldwin, assistant chief of the bureau of chemistry, who was also slated for removal in the case involving the agreement with Dr. H. H. Rusby of New York, completed his testimony and sought to show the agreement with Dr. Rusby was modeled upon that previously made between Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and members of the Remsen pure food referee board, employed on a similar basis of pay.

Dr. Baldwin declared that portion of his correspondence which would show this to be a fact had been omitted by the personnel board of the agricultural department when that body made up the charges upon which he was recommended for removal.

Miss Carrie M. Davis, stenographer to Dr. Kebler, chief of the drug division of the bureau of chemistry, testified to the severe examination to which she had been subjected by Solicitor McCabe and a special agent in the effort to discover whether Dr. Kebler had relations with drug manufacturing companies.

Questioned for Two Hours.

She said she was questioned in a private room of the department in the presence of Mr. McCabe, W. P. Walsh, a special agent, and a stenographer. In compliance with Mr. McCabe's instructions the door was locked, she said, and she was kept before the inquisition for two hours. Previous to this interview, Miss Davis said, she had been escorted by Mr. Walsh from Mr. McCabe's office to that of Secretary Wilson.

"I have brought Miss Davis in here for you to assure her that no matter what the result of this inquiry her position will not be jeoparded," Walsh said, according to Miss Davis.

"Not in the least, Miss Davis," was Secretary Wilson's reply; "the truth is what we want. You can rest assured you will not be molested."

Dr. W. D. Bigelow testified the personnel committee in charging that an arrangement had been entered into with Dr. Rusby whereby the latter was to work part of the time, but draw an annual salary, suppressed the correspondence showing Dr. Bigelow was proceeding on the precedent set by Secretary Wilson in appointing members of the referee board.

Dr. Bigelow characterized as unjust certain criticisms by Solicitor McCabe.

"His criticisms have been so severe and so unjust that when he thought we had been giving out information he issued orders that no one in the bureau of chemistry should tell anything to United States attorneys who are prosecuting pure food cases,' said Dr. Bigelow. "The restriction greatly hampers work at the district laboratories, where United States attorneys often want to talk over a case with the chief of the local laboratory."

AMUSEMENT PARK IS BURNED

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—Fire thought to have originated from a pan of grease in the kitchen of the clubhouse at Chester park, an amusement resort on the northern boundary of the city, destroyed many amusement buildings and spread rapidly to two lumber yards adjoining. Three hours after the flames were discovered the loss was estimated at $175,000, a lack of water pressure making the task of the firemen difficult.

The bathing beach lockers were next threatened and men and women fled from the water in bathing costumes, got their clothing from the lockers and dressed on the street.

Six stations visited were declared to be unsanitary and unfit for use, while several of the new buildings were found to be in good condition.

FLAX STRAW

To Farmers and whom it may concern:

Having established at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, a Flax Tow Mill, I hereby take pleasure of communicating this fact to the public. This mill will purchase all goods, sound flax straw of 1911 crop only offered and brought to the mill grounds by the farmers themselves, or shipped to the mill in bales from nearby stations located on the railroad, and immediate cash will be paid for.

The longer the straw the more valuable for making tow, and I therefore respectfully request and advise the farming community to cut the straw as low down as possible, for it is the length of the fibre in the tow which makes it of a desirable quality.

I own four mose flax tows mills in Dakota and own mills or am financially interested in several others located in the states of Minnesota and Iowa.

Mr. Lewis Kunipf, my general foreman, and Mr. George Thompson both of whom are at present time at Red Lake Falls will give you all further information should you call on them personally or write to them, and I am sure you will find them both absolutely honest and fair gentleman.

My great desire is to be fair myself with all mankind and the farmers especially, and those who treat me fair in their dealings will always find me honest and square in dealing with them.

Trusting that our relations may be at all times harmonious and to the interest of both of us, I remain,

Yours faithfully,
V. R. Blendon.

Sir Walter and the Royal Glass.

In 1820 George IV. conferred a baronetcy upon Walter Scott. Two years later the king of England went to pay a visit to his Scotch subjects. He was received with indescribable enthusiasm, and Scott led the manifestations organized in his honor.

"You are the one Scotchman I have chiefly desired to see," said the sovereign. The two men then drank one another's health, and Scott begged George IV. to give him the glass which he had just put to his lips. The favor was granted, and the poet put the glass in his pocket.

Unfortunately when he got home he forgot to place the relic in safety, sat down upon it and broke it into a thousand pieces.—From De Monvel's "Beau Brummel."

The Romans Dressed For Dinner.

A sartorial authority says that the custom of dressing for dinner began with the Romans. It was a simpler procedure than at present. A loose robe of fine material was donned for the evening meal, preferably at home, but in cases where guests came from a distance at the home of the host, who kept a supply of dinner clothes on hand for the use of his guests who came unprovided.—Springfield Republican.

ACCUSED OF STEALING.

E. E. Chamberlain, of Clinton, Me. boldly accuses Bucklen's Arnica Salve of stealing—the sting from burns or scalds—the pain from sores of all kinds—the distress from boils or piles. I have been a man of many occupations, though I have had more to do with the sea than with the land. Once I was owner of a schooner that I used for pearl diving, my divers being north African Bedouins.

My working ground was off the coast of Tripolitania. Pearl diving is a hard life, and only those who are desperate engage in it. The boss is obliged to be very severe with his workmen or they will take possession of him, his ship and everything in it. I had one man named Hamed, a little muscular African, black as the ace of spades, who undertook to master me. There was trouble, after which I had him arrested and taken into the town of Tripoli, and he received a full dose of bastinado.

It was not long after this that one night, the weather being very hot, I preferred to sleep on deck. I put down a mattress, but I was cooler in a chair. All I had on was a pair of thin pajamas and low shoes. I lay a few hours in sleep, awaking about midnight. The men were asleep below, and I was alone on deck. For an hour I caught cat naps from time to time, not losing myself for more than ten minutes at once. At one of these intervals between sleep I saw a round black ball on the gunwale on the port bow, I being starboard amidships.

Now, to a half awake sailorman, a black ball on the gunwale of his ship is a curious object. I wondered why it didn't roll along the incline. Instead of doing so it rose, looking now like the round top of a fencepost, spreading out below. By this time I was sufficiently awake to realize that the object was a black head and shoulders, blacker for a full moon that shone behind it.

From this point my faculties came to me like lightning. I have often since wondered that what for want of a better name I will call an automatic reasoning should have made me prepare for that which I had not thought out. Had I taken the steps to lead up to that preparation they would have been as follows: "That is a Bedouin thief, who will kill me to enable him to carry off some trifle." In a twinkling my pajamas were lying on the deck, I standing naked in my shoes. I knew that the thief would not be incumbered with clothing, and I must not give him this advantage over me. I knew that he had swum to the ship; therefore it was not likely he would have any firearms with him. The struggle would be muscular.

I should have cried out and aroused those below. Strange to say, this did not occur to me as quickly as the other points, and when it did I was too late. A black naked figure jumped over the gunwale and darted like lightning toward me. When he reached me the moonlight flashed on a steel blade with which he struck at me. I caught his forearm with my fist; but, the arm being oiled, it slipped through my clutch to the shoulder. I saved myself from being stabbed by holding my enemy off from me with my hand under his arm at the shoulder. The man, wriggling, was liable at any moment to free himself. With my other hand I grasped his throat. It, too, was oiled, but I clinched it long enough to make the man drop his knife.

At this moment the rascal's face was to the moon, and I recognized Hamed. He had not come for plunder; he had come for revenge. My life now depended on my preventing his getting the knife. I placed myself between him and it and clinched with him. His body was oiled all over, and he slipped through my arms like an eel and made a lunge for the knife by darting between my legs. I caught an ankle and held him extended to his full length, his arms stretched and within a few inches of the knife. He jerked his ankle so that, oiled as it was, I could not count on holding it long and must do something else to thwart his purpose. With one hand I made a quick grasp for his shoulder, then with the other let go his ankle and grasped the other shoulder, falling on him at the same time.

Here were two of us reaching for the knife. I slid over his oiled surface and attempted to clutch the weapon, but just as I was getting my fingers on it he seized my wrist and knocked it farther away.

I had the advantage of him, holding him between me and the deck. He could not easily slide on the latter having me on his back; but he was so slippery that I found it difficult to maintain my position on him. Nevertheless he endeavored to wriggle toward the knife. He gained some inches and was about to grasp it when I knocked it farther away.

I now determined to risk all on one quick move. Putting a hand on each of his shoulders for leverage, I gave a tremendous pull, shooting my head and shoulders beyond the glittering blade. Feeling it under my chest, I grasped it, and the victory was mine.

In an instant my enemy slipped from under my legs, arose and ran like a deer for the ship's side. I followed him, but before I reached the gunwale heard a splash and knew that he had escaped me.

Not fearing that he would return, I lay down and sank into a slumber.

I sent the Tripolitan police after the villain, but they did not find him.

CHANGES IN GAME LAWS

LAWS PASSED IN 1911 ARE MAKING THE HUNTERS GUESS SOME.

Every resident hunting chickens or other small game must have a license costing $1, obtained from the county auditor of the county in which that resident resides, provided that this shall not apply to the resident hunting in his own county. This license is issued separate and distinct from the big game license. For hunting big game any resident must procure a license costing $1, obtained from the county auditor of the county in which that resident resides, but such a license is not issued until three days before the season opens, Nov 10th. The chicken season opens Sept. 7th, and license may be obtained now.

Section 33 of Chapter 93 of the 7th, provides that one deer may be General Laws, 1911, approved April killed while section 2 of Chapter 373 of the General Laws, 1911, approved April 20, limits the number of deer to one. In such a case the law last approved is effective and, therefore, but one deer may be killed, according to a report made by Assistant Attorney General, Clifford, L. Hilton.

Chapter 286 of the General Laws, 1911, approved April 19, is puzzling some hunters. The law provides that pointer or setter dogs may be run on the fields, frequented by game birds, from the fifteenth day of August to the first day of December. And also provides that, "From the fifteenth day of August to the first day of September each year it shall be unlawful to run or train pointer or setter dogs in the said fields or upon the said lands in case any shot gun, rifle or other firearms is in the possession of or available for use by the owner or person in possession," etc. The question arises, is there a mistake in the law, or was it intended that a hunter should have the privilege of shooting over his dog from Sept. 1st to Sept. 7th, provided he did not shoot chickens, or what was meant by it?

RETURNS FROM THE WEST

Mr. H. H. Finrow returns From an Extended Trip.

H. H. Finrow, the genial proprietor of the Scotland Hotel, returned to this village Thursday evening, after having spent a two weeks round about tour thru the Dakotas and Montana.

Leaving here he went to Fargo via Aberdeen S. D., and from there journeyed on the Chicago Milwaukee road to various points in Montana. Mr. Finrow says the crops in South Dakota and the southern part of North Dakota are very poor, but as he approached Montana, prospects looked a great deal better. His destination however was at Lewistown Montana and says wheat being threshed in that vicinity averaged 50 to 60 bushels to the acre, and other grains likewise.

Mr. Finrow is well pleased with Montana, but still has the idea Minnesota will paddle her own canoe in just as angry water as Montana. He with his family will remove to that state sometime in the near future to make it his home. Mr. Finrow made the remark that coffee cost only 10 cents per cup, but of course, as may be expected, was of good quality.

He reports the travelling by rail road from the east to the western states was without limit, and hotels everywhere were filled to their capacity. Mr. Finrow in a cross country drive reports of coming into a small ranch town, and not being able to procure a room had the experience of sleeping in a buggy, but the monotonous howling of the coyotes all night it made a rather unrestful night's lodging.

AN ENJOYABLE TRIP

One of the most interesting trips of modern times, in modern methods was indulged in from Thief River Falls to the drainage district 55 miles northeast of that city on Saturday and Sunday last. The travel was by means of six automobiles chaufferured by some of the gallants from Warren and Thief River Falls.

The trip was made via Germantown, Grygla, and Carmel, to a point where the Northwestern Drainage Company's farthermost dredge was throwing dirt out of Judicial Ditch No. 11 about 55 miles miles northeast of this city.

The Party.

The parties that went on this trip were: Senator Elwell of Minneapolis The Great Apostle of the Good Road Movement and a member of the present Legislature; L. P. Green, Advertising Agent of the Soo Road; L. J. Boughner, City Editor of the Minneapolis Tribune; Judge A. Grindeland of Warren, known through the entire northwestern part of the State as the Father of the drainage movement; and William J. Brown, also of Warren and of whom it was said that he was the uncle; and last but not least of the active spirits that have moved in bringing about great strides of progress, was that of the noble son, A. M. Arpin, who by his untiring efforts has made possible the building of almost every system under his charge to the entire satisfaction of the officials and the people of the surrounding country, and best of all has had the work completed on contract time; engineers in charge of the system, W. R. Hoag and O. L. Hamry. Others of the party who were there, merely as interested spectators were the Hon. L. C. Simons of St. Paul, Dr. G. S. Wattam, Ed. Lundgren, C. P. Lundquist, and John P. Mattson of Warren, Matt Barzen, the jovial miller of Thief River Falls, ever ready with his witty "Dutch". The other parties from Thief River Falls accompanying were Prof. Hay, Atty. E. M. Stanton, Register of Deeds, E. L. Quist, C. L. Hanson, K. A. Sundahl, A. N. Lundgren, H. E. Mussey and M. W. Eastman.

Enjoyed The Trip.

From the very first it was apparent that the entire bunch was out, not only to learn of the great achievements of the drainage work and posibilities of the country stretching out before them, but they were also out to have a good time, and it certainly was their own fault if any returned without having realized the latter aim as the weather was ideal and the roads in fairly good condition, and all the farmers along the road seemed anxious to make the trip most enjoyable.

What They Saw.

Traveling east from Thief River Falls on a direct line for thirteen miles, they saw on either side of the road well improved farms, and either golden wheat fields or stubble dotted with shocks so close that they seemed almost like a dream; thence north on a direct line for seven miles, passing through the prosperous little Village of Germantown with its large Co-operative store, and Co-operative Creamery, hotel, blacksmithshop, livery barn, etc., showing signs of the stable and prosperous condition of the country. Turning east and going along Marshall County Ditch No. 20 on one of the highest and best roads in our state to-day for a distance of just 13 miles, on either hand almost as far as the eye could see the fertile prairie dotted here and there with a farm home and a few stacks of grain or a field covered with shocks reminded one of the immense fertility of the soil. The most conspicuous sight seen on this part of the drive was a corn field covering about 16 acres, owned by John Lamporter in the town of Moylan, and standing more than a foot above a man's head. The question has often been raised, "Can corn be matured in this country?" This field answered the question. It did not only give promise of becoming one but the greater part was ripe already, and by the end of another ten days the entire field will be ready to go in the bin. The next was a run to the north of six miles when there loomed up before the eyes of the spectator the prosperous Village of Grygla.

Grygla.

To most of the party Grygla was either a dot on the map or a small country postoffice and country store. This they soon learned was a mistaken idea. Grygla has a large Co-operative general merchandise store, a first class blacksmith shop, hotel, creamery, restaurant, land office, bank, drug store, postoffice, newspaper, and an extensive outlay of offices, barns, and supply houses for the Northwestern Drainage Company, and the progressive spirit is now erecting a fine school house for the younger element.

Floating Dredge.

Just one-half mile below Grygla on the course of Mud River, one of the large floating dredges was at work shoveling earth at the rate of about three cubic yards per minute. This huge monster, propelled by a 100 H. P. Steam Engine, forcing its own way down the stream, making the path for the water to flow in at the same time, appears like a huge live elephant, with the subtlety of thought and the might of a giant, each time it sent its huge trunk down, its steel nozzle brought up and threw upon the bank a yard and a half of solid clay, and each time that it returned it seemed to know just where to take the next dipper full with as much accuracy as though brain and nerves had penetrated its system.

The Walking Dredge.

Fifteen miles Northeast of Grygla the party was treated with the opportunity of inspecting the most modern dredge at work to-day, a walking or turtle dredge. This machine is operated, by a 50 H. P. Gasoline Engine and shovels the dirt in a manner very similar to that of the floating dredge, but as the place of work is on dry land, its method of locomotion must necessarily be of an entirely different character. It has on either side and far enough apart to stand astride of a twelve foot ditch, three huge turtle feet. These feet are constructed somewhat like a toboggan sleigh in shape, but very much different in their size and weight, being about ten feet long, and five feet blank, and we presume that it would dredges and seven walking dredges are at work night and day to do this work. How well they are succeeding is certainly a marvel. The ditches are dug to the breadth and depth according to specifications, and completed in one third of the time that such systems were ever completed under the old system of drainage work. One sometimes has an idea that he sees a large ditch that has been dug with spades, but if you compare the work done by these eleven dredges making ditches varying in size from four feet deep with an 8 foot top and 4 foot bottom, to an 18 foot depth with a 60 foot top and 40 foot bottom the work can only be compared to that of the digging of the Panama Canal. In fact it has been calculated that these eleven dredges handle more dirt every 24 hours than is done in the same space of time in the construction of the Panama.

wide, and made of six inch solid oak be about as easy for one of these manster turtles to walk across the ordinary railroad track and ditches as it would be for that feat to be performed by the ordinary mud turtle. Its power is immense, and stumps, stones or trees are thrown out of the way, apparently without any special effort. A yard of dirt or a yard of rock in this huge scoop seemed to be thrown with equal ease.

SOME BALL GAME.

Last Sunday afternoon, at the fair grounds, the Thief River Traveling Men defeated Newfolden, 9 to 7, in one of the most interesting games played on the local grounds this year. From a scientific standpoint the game could have been better, but for downright fun and heart-throbbing suspenses, the game had everything backed off the boards that ever appeared in Thief River. Both teams were exceedingly generous, and each succeeded in handling the other several useful presents. But owing to the superior ability of the Travelers to hit when hits meant runs, the Wheat Carriers of the north were destined for defeat from the very beginning.

At the end of the sixth inning the score stood 3 to 2 in favor of the locals. The first of the seventh, while Hess and his support were taking a nap, the visitors amassed 5 runs before their worthy opponents awoke, making the score 7 to 3. After their short rest the Travelers came back with a vengeance, and during the seventh and eighth innings got 6 good ones, making the score 9 to 7 and winning the game.

The most spectacular plays were pulled off by "Andy" Anderson in the vicinity of second base. He almost invariably caught the ball when thrown to him at second base, and hardly ever let a grounder get away from him. His work at the bat was fine, too. That smile of his seemed to have the pitcher hypnotized. Mr. Andersons pose follows as seen by the Press cartoonist.

The game was clean and free from janrgling thruout. Nothwithstanding the fact that the Newfolden players carried their paraphernalia in a wheat sack, they proved themselves to be very gentlemanly fellows and worthy of an A-1 recommendation. They put up a class of ball that rarely issues from a village the size of Newfolden. Flynn gave perfect satisfaction as umpire.

Travelers Vs. St. Hilaire.

Next Sunday, at the fair grounds, the same team of Travelers which played last Sunday, will meet the St. Hilaire baseball team. It only costs a quarter of a dollar to see this game, but it is safe to say that anyone who does see it will, after the game, importune manager Bakke to accept an additional quarter, on account of the high class entertainment that was afforded.

There is a disposition to take too seriously the crop reports issued by the government and private agencies. The investigation a few years ago of the methods of collecting the cotton reports showed that 85,000 individual estimates have to be compiled and digested.

The Duluth Herald in an editorial on "Flin-flamming the People" seems to intimate that the insurgents were largely to blame for the failure of the Direct election of Senators bill, because Senator Bristow, an insurgent proposed the amendment to which the House conferers afterwards would not agree, thereby sidetracking the entire measure. It were better to put the blame where it belongs, i. e., upon those who propose a departure from the manner of electing other congressional members. That was plainly done with some ulterior motive and there must rest the blame. We are of the opinion that the national government should have control of these elections. It seems logical and proper.

"THE SMART SET."

It is made up of those born to money, those whom money married to title and those whose money enabled them to climb up, in a society sense, upon the sacrifice of every humane sentiment which the Almighty implants in man or woman.

It has no morals. Its men trade wives when the law allows. Its women abhor motherhood. Its children know not their own parents. It sells its girls. It condemns its aged.

It holds no worthy aims. It accomplishes no sensible purpose. Love, generosity, helpfulness it knows not, but it is ruled by envy, jealousy, covetousness, selfishness, and its ambition and effect are to promote these evil traits in others.

It believes not in God, but Mammon. It has its kept ministers and churches for the display of robes and millinery, the airing of its pomp and vanity. Its idol is the disguised Moloch of the ancient Ammonites and its distination is hell on earth.

It produces little save drones, drunkards and degenerates.

It means nothing that lasts, that helps, or that satisfies.

And it is smart only in that it makes you and me feather its nest and supply its maw.—Daily News.

THE HOT WAVE AND THE WORKERS.

The burning weather of the past week, generally admitted to be the most severe recorded by our Weather Bureau, has tested one's good nature to the limit.

The worse rigors of this temperature have hardly been known here. It is in the great cities, where streets become canyons, where a stream of human exhalations attack one's most vital fiber, where the rays of the sun are reflected from unbroken surfaces of pavement and confined in a fiery furnace by high buildings, that these conditions become a vital menace to health.

Unfortunately modern civilization makes city dwelling imperative for many of us, and a host of people suffer from ill ventilated tenements and factories.

AUGUST.

In many ways August is the crowning month of the year. It is a period of fruitions. And yet there is not that approach of the cooler weather of September that brings haunting reminders of the decline of the year. August is the high tide of nature's life, the full rounded consummation of her toils and her joys, and as yet there is no hint of the inevitable ebb.

To most people August is an unpopular section of the revolving year. The sun has gone a considerable distance southward, but little relief has as yet come to the heat. There are days of intense humidity when an air surfeited with abnormal moisture lays its oppressive and clammy hand on human physique.

Most nature lovers would perhaps say that June is the high tide of the year, that glorious period of nature's adolescence, when all her greenery is untainted by the tan of the sun and the soil of flying dust, when all is hope and expectation.

And yet, just as there are few people of middle life who would care to live all through the struggles and questionings of their youth, even though that youth was gay with song and dance, so June at its best is a time of immaturity. The seed has been cast into the ground, but it has been left to the chances and changes of a fate beyond the power and ken of man. The future is a fog bank, and no one knows whether his toil is to bring a prize or a blank.

In August the harvest of the products of the earth fills the air with sweet odors, the skimmer of the glossy corn is the visible sign of the wealth of nutriment which a loving nature has placed out of sight in the black soil. The golden apples are reddening in the tree tops, and the air is harmonious with the hum of insect voices.

The work of the fields has so far progressed that the toiler at the worst has faced his losses and has little fear of futre decline, and under usual conditions he is sure of ample reward.

September and October have a higher pitched chord of color and sound, and a riper and more abundant harvest. But in the frosts that set aflame the tree tops there is the cold forbidding touch of death.

CANADIAN ANNEXATION

The possibility of annexation of Canada to the United States is figuring largely in the hot electoral campaign over reciprocity now under way over the line. In view of the intense hostility to that idea invariably manifested by Canadian people, one wonders that anyone can discuss it seriously.

On this side of the line there are a good many people favorable to the idea, though the majority would doubtless vote No.

As a test of Canadian sentiment, a writer for the World's Work in 1905 addressed 300 letters to the most prominent men in the dominion. These letters asked the question whether, if such an annexation could be brought about peaceably, without friction with England, Canada being simply merged and becoming one section of our country, just as the East, South, or the Pacific Slope is one section, whether the person addressed would favor it.

Out of these 300 people, only one man wrote favoring annexation, and he failed to sign his name. Most of the rest wrote in opposition.

The Canadians based their objection on such ideas as the following: That their people are more regardful of law than Americans, that we have too many race problems, that wealth is more evenly divided with them, that the trusts are less powerful, and on their personal affection and sentiment for the British flag.

Curiously enough, some of these Canadians seemed more or less seriously to entertain the idea that the United States might be annexed to Canada. Half in joke, yet with some serious intent, Bennett Rosamond, member of parliament, wrote that at the start Canada might take in one or two states at a time, and as our people become trained to have respect for law, they could take in more until at least the larger part of our states were absorbed.

Just as every American would feel that such a suggestion was absolutely preposterous, so the Canadians cling with equal vehemence to their present political relations.

The recent enormous growth of the Canadian Northwest points to a future for Canada exceeding in prosperity and importance anything ever dreamed for it a decade ago.

DEVELOPMENT LEAGUE ANNOUNCES MEETINGS.

An outline of the work which the Northwestern Development League expects to do is given out from the office of the secretary. The executive committee, composed of representatives from the seven northwestern states, has been called to meet in Spokane Oct. 3d, by President Penwell to approve plans.

The Land Products Show of the League has already been announced to be held in St. Paul December 12, to 23d.

Following this show the League plans to establish permanent exhibits in St. Paul and Chicago, showing the products and giving out information about the states in the league. The officers in connection with the exhibits will send daily or semi-weekly, names of those who visit the state exhibits, to immigration officials of the states, commercial clubs and railroad land departments.

Next June the Northwestern Development Congress, or annual meeting of the League will be held in Seattle. The dates have just been announced by Rufus Wilson, the representative of the league in Seattle, the big meeting occupying five days from June 6, to June 10th.

Several publications are being prepared for the league by the secretary's office which will give uniform information about the seven states in the league and a number of maps showing irrigated districts, dry farming sections, forests, mountains and also public lands and tracts available for settlement. Large quantities of these booklets will be distributed and the inquiries received sent to the states belonging to the league.

Every State Accepts Space.

Seven states and Alaska have accepted the space tendered them at the Northwest Land Show to be held in St. Paul December 12, to 23d, under the auspices of the Northwestern Development League.

A week ago word was sent to the governor of the states advising that space had been bought by Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth business men to be apportioned to the states in the League. Every governor has replied that the space would be accepted and filled with products.

Among the most interesting exhibits will be that from Alaska, which will show not only the mineral, fur and fish products, but also demonstrate that Alaska is a good country for gardening and will produce more wheat and barley than Norway and Sweden combined.

Land Companies Asked to Exhibit

Since this state has been given a large amount of space at the land show to be held in St. Paul Dec. 12, to 23d, the management of the show is now asking the land companies of the state to interest themeslves and take advantage of the showing to be made by the state. When the state as a whole makes a good showing, the land companies have an opportunity to make a special exhibit from the tracts of land in which they are interested. A small amount of space is offered for sale to such companies at reasonable rates.

SOMETHING TO YOU.

(By Request.)

"Tis nothing to me the beauty said,
With a careless toss of her pretty head;
"The man is weak if he can't refrain,
From the cup you say, is frought with pain,"
It was something, in after-years,
Her eyes were drenched with burning
tears,
And she watched in lonely grief
and dread.
And startled to hear a staggering
tread.
"This nothing to me" the mother
said,
"I have no fear that my boy will
tread
In the downward path of sin and shame,
And crush my heart and darken his name."
It was something to her when her only son
From the path of right was early won,
And madly cast in the flowing bowl,
A ruined body, a sin wrecked soul.
"Tis nothing to me" the merchant
said,
As over his ledger he bent his head,
"I am busy to-day with tare and tret,
I have no time for fume and fret.
"It was something to him when over the wire,
A message came from a funeral pyre;
A drunken conductor had wrecked
a train,
And his wife and child were among the slain.
"Tis nothing to me" the voter
said,
"The party's loss is my only dread,
Then he gave his vote to the liquor trade,
Though hearts were crushed and drunkards made.
"It was something to him in after life,
His daughter became a drunkards
wife,
And her hungry children cried for bread,
And trembled to hear their father's tread.
"It is something for us to idly
sleep,
While cohorts of death their vigils
keep,
To gather the young and thoughtless in,
And grind in our midst a grist of sin.

Do We Sleep Too Much?

Perhaps, on account of popular opinion and personal habit, we waste much time in a jellyfish condition that could be more profitably spent in active pursuit of our ambitions. The answer, of course, depends upon the nature of our occupation. If there is much muscular effort involved, with a corresponding large amount of waste in the cells and blood, eight hours or more are probably necessary. But if our work is of a sedentary nature and mainly of the brain there is naturally a smaller quantity of accumulated waste, and less time is required for its removal. Many are the instances of great men, past and present, who have lived healthfully and worked unceasingly and strenuously on only four or five hours of sleep, or half the laborer's portion. Surely we are not to suppose that those men were or are physically different from others, but rather that by inclination or necessity they have developed a habit of sleeping intensely for a short period instead of lightly for a longer period, with resulting gain of time and efficiency.—Atlantic Monthly.

Kings Are Useful.

A king is a hand embroidered gentleman trimmed with metals, faced with whiskers and thatched with a metal roof that would never keep off the rain. Nominally he is the head of the nation; actually he is a figurehead, and that is figuratively speaking only, for he is generally too fat to claim a figure and seldom has much of a head—except on the morning after a celebration.

Once upon a time the king was the big tuba of the band. Now he is merely an oboe—until there is a revolution, and then he becomes a real live hobo.

However, a king has his place, although he is yearly finding it more difficult to stay in it.

Kings are found to be very useful in poker games, and by society ladies who wish to be presented to somebody they can brag of having met when they get back home to their long left loved ones.—Detroit Free Press.

Light and Sound Waves.

With reference to our ability to tell the direction from which sound proceeds, attention may be called to an interesting difference between the eyes and the ears in relation to the size of the waves that strike them. The average wave length of light is about one ten-thousandth of the diameter of the pupil of the eye. On the other hand, according to Rayleigh, the waves of sound proceeding from a man's mouth are about eight feet long, whereas the diameter of the passage of the ear is quite small and could not well have been made a large multiple of eight feet. One consequence of the minuteness of light waves in comparison with the size of the eyes is that the lenses of the eyes are able to concentrate rays of light upon the retina with great efficiency.—Scientific American.

According to Orders.

In employing men to work at his Palo Alto farm in California the late Senator Stanford gave strict orders that they were never to strike, kick or whip a horse. On one occasion, while at dinner, one of the drivers insisted that he must see the senator. He was ushered in, with blood over his face, which was badly cut. "John knocked me down," explained the man, referring to one of the trainers. "What did you do?" asked the senator. "Nothing," replied the man. "But you must have done something. I want the truth," persisted the senator. "Well, I only kicked a horse," growled the man, "and John knocked me down." "Those were John's instructions," said the senator emphatically, "and he did just right."

Gallant.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt once told of a gallant to whom she had been introduced. "His compliments," she said, "were so glowing that at last I cried out:

"'But, monsieur, remember, I am sixty-four years old!'

"'Madam,' he replied, 'to me you are just thirty-two, for I, seared as I have been by scandal, am too charitable ever to believe more than half of what I hear.'"

Some Squeeze.

A judge was questioning an old Irishman.

"He took you by the throat and choked you, did he?" asked the judge.

"He did, sor," said Pat. "Sure, sor, he squazed me throat till I thought he would make cider out o' me Adam's apple."—London Telegraph.

The Green Kind.

A naval officer who has seen considerable service in South American waters once brought home two parrots, one of which he gave to the housemaid and the other to the cook.

For a long time there ensued animated discussions as to the merits of their respective birds. Finally the housemaid said:

"Your parrot may be a better talker than mine, though I don't believe it.' Then, with an air of presenting the final clinching argument in her favor, she added, "Besides, you'll have to admit that mine has the most beautiful foliage."—Lippincott's.

Honored the Old Men.

A unique festival occurred in Paris in 1797 in honor of the old men. The idea was the encouragement of the family circle, and the old man who was a happy grandfather was held up to the younger generations to follow in his footsteps. "A gracious Hebe crowned their white locks with garlands of roses, while the soldiers of France presented arms in their honor."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "the only trouble about the Ten Commandments arises from the amendments people try to tack to them."—Washington Star.

HOUSE FAILS TO OVERRIDE VETO

Meets Defeat in Effort to Pass Wool and Free List Bills.

SERIES OF DRAMATIC EVENTS

Motion to Pass Measures Over the President's Disapproval Fails to Secure Necessary Votes.

Washington, Aug. 19.—In a succession of dramatic events the Democratic house of representatives met defeat in its supreme effort to pass the wool bill and free list bills over the president's vetoes and virtually fixed upon adjournment of congress early next week.

The Democratic house majority, with a great demonstration of enthusiasm, marshaled its forces for the great battle to override the president, but went down with flying colors, failing to muster adequate progressive Republican support to pass the tariff legislation over the president's head.

Failure of the attempt of the Democratic house to override the vetoes came during a day filled with stirring incidents. The close of the debate on the motion of Mr. Underwood to pass the wool bill over the veto found Champ Clark, the speaker of the house and an aspirant for the presidency, pleading the cause of his fellow Democrats upon the floor, surrounded by a throng of his colleagues, who cheered him vigorously. The speaker, as he concluded, was given a demonstration that for several minutes delayed the roll call.

On the motion to pass the measure over the wool veto there were 227 affirmative votes, twenty-two of them progressive Republicans and one independent Republican, while the negative votes were 129. The motion to override the veto on the free list failed of a two-thirds majority also, the vote being 226 to 127.

During the three hours of debate on the wool bill the corridors of the Capitol reverberated time and again with shouts of approval and derision from the floor. Spirited discussions between members were frequent.

AWAIT TARIFF BOARD REPORT

President's Reason for Vetoing Wool Revision Bill.

Washington, Aug. 18.—President Taft carried out his threat to veto the wool tariff bill. In a special message to the house of representatives he characterized the measure a blend of an avowed tariff for revenue and a protection measure with a professed protection bill.

In explanation of his course President Taft said the bill was not in harmony with the platform on which he was elected. Furthermore, he declared that the American people are deeply impressed with the conviction that the interest of the consuming public can be properly guarded only by revising the tariff one schedule at a time and then upon "accurate and scientifically acquired information."

That there is a widespread belief that many of the rates in the wool schedule are too high and in excess of any needed protection for the wool growers and manufacturers is admitted by President Taft and he says he shares this belief.

Asserting that December was the time fixed by both the Republican and Democratic parties in the last congress for the submission of adequate information upon schedule K with a view to its amendments the president says there is no public exigency requiring revision in August without adequate information.

After promising that the tariff board will be ready to report in December the president argues that failure of the present bill should not be regarded, therefore, as taking away the only chance for reduction by this congress.

PEACE TREATIES GO OVER

Senate Takes No Action on Arbitration Agreements.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The treaties of arbitration with Great Britain and France were defended in minority reports filed in the senate in executive session by Senators Cullom, Root and Burton of the senate committee on foreign relations.

When the reports were presented to the senate the question of the discussion of the treaties in public by senators was raised. There was general agreement that public policy would not be violated by such a course, inasmuch as the ban of secrecy had been removed from the documents.

No action on the conventions was taken and they go over for further consideration at the regular session.

Brothers Burned to Death.

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—Two brothers, Anthony and Edwin Braun, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the home of the former. When the firemen arrived the building was a mass of flames and it was with difficulty they were able to save the wife of Anthony Braun and her children.

BRITISH STRIKE SUDDENLY ENDS

Railway Managers and Men Agree on Settlement Plan.

DOCK STRIKE MAY END SOON

Trains Are Again Moving, but It Will Take Several Days to Restore Normal Conditions.

London, Aug. 21.—The railway men throughout the kingdom are returning to work and it is hoped within a few days to have the big transit systems working under normal conditions.

Following the announcement that the railway managers and their employes had agreed to permit a commission to settle their differences came the reassuring news that there was great hope of ending the dockers' strike at Liverpool and that the workers there shortly would resume work.

The railway workers held meetings throughout the country to celebrate what they claimed to be a victory over the railway companies. With the exception of 4,000 men of the Northeastern Railway company, which was not a party to the strike settlement agreement, and 3,000 Manchester men, all the stations passed resolutions in favor of a resumption of work. The Northeastern company's employes demand an eight-hour day and a two shilling weekday advance in wages, with a minimum weekday wage of 22 shillings, about $5.50.

Although the services on the other lines have not yet been completely restored the men in most cases presented themselves for duty and a start was made toward remedying the dislocation caused by the strike. Some progress was made in clearing the lines of freight trains, but it will be some days before normal conditions are restored.

A meeting of 40,000 trades unionists of London was held at Hyde park. Labor leaders congratulated the railway men on their victory and a resolution which was put from numerous platforms pointed out that for the first time in history the companies had recognized the principle of collective bargaining, thereby conceding what always had been a vital principle of the trade unionists. While not accepting the terms of the agreement between the employers and the men as a final settlement of the latter's demands the resolution concluded that the men had decided to return to work and trust to the companies to give effect to the spirit and letter of the agreement.

LIVERPOOL STRIKE SETTLED

Dockmen Return to Their Work Following Conference.

Liverpool, Aug. 22.—The local dock troubles were settled at conference between the shipowners and representatives of the striking dockmen at the Cunard line offices. The carters and coalheavers will return to work with the dockmen. More than fifty vessels are in the harbor, many of which have been here with their cargoes aboard for ten days. All now will be unloaded. The transatlantic liners will leave port as fast as they can be coaled and provisioned.

A hitch over the men returning to work occurred when the dockers refused to resume their duties until the tramway and electric light employes are reinstated.

This new phase of the trouble, however, is considered only temporary and the dockers are expected shortly to return to work.

PUBLICITY BILL IS A LAW

President Signs Measure Limiting Campaign Expenses.

Washington, Aug. 20.—President Taft has signed the campaign publicity bill, making the measure a law.

The new statute provides for complete publicity of campaign expenditures of candidates for the house and senate before election and limits the amount that each can spend in a single campaign to $5,000 for a candidate for the house and $10,000 for a candidate for the senate.

Boston, Aug. 22.—The battleship Rivadavia of the Argentine republic will be launched at Quincy next Saturday. The vessel will be christened by Mrs. de Naon, wife of the Argentine minister to the United States. The Rivadavia is of the dreadnought type, closely resembling the Arkansas and Wyoming, now being built for the United States.

COTTON MEASURE PASSES HOUSE

Rule Limits Debate to Four Hours and Bars Amendments.

MINORITY ENTERS PROTEST

Progressive and Regular Republicans Join in Denouncing the Demands for "Gag Rule" Methods—Mr. Underwood Declares Republican Leaders Had Sanctioned the Rule Before It Was Brought In.

Washington, Aug. 22.—After a perfunctory debate of four hours the house concurred, 180 to 107, in the senate amendments to the Underwood cotton tariff revision bill and sent that measure to President Taft.

The bill cut the cotton tariff on an average of 21 per cent ad valorem and bore schedules, tacked on by the senate, reducing duties on iron and steel, cotton machinery and chemicals and providing reciprocal free admission of bituminous coal across the Canadian border.

The vote was along strict party lines except that eight Republican progressives joined the Democrats. Most of the progressives who have been voting with the majority of tariff measures stood with the regulars, asserting that the senate amendments had not been considered by a committee of either house.

The amended bill was considered under a rule limiting debate to four hours and barring amendments. This rule, reported after unanimous consent had been refused for a resolution to the same effect, was the target for forensic broadsides from Republicans, progressives and regulars.

Accused of Using Gag Rule.

The Democrats were accused of returning to "gag rule," which they vigorously denounced when in the minority. Democratic Leader Underwood replied to these attacks by declaring that he had made the arrangement after a conference with Republican Leader Mann and Representative Payne, ranking Republican member of the ways and means committee, who had said that it would be entirely satisfactory.

The debate was not confined to the cotton bill or its amendments. The tariff generally and various other things were touched upon. Messrs. Underwood and Payne closed the discussion.

Mr. Underwood said the amended bill was not just what the majority wanted, but it was the best that could be secured under the circumstances. He said it was absurd to ask that representatives of the people "wait on the clerks and hirelings of the president (the tariff board) before enacting tariff legislation."

The Republican progressives voting for the bill were: Davis, Lindbergh, Volstead and Steenerson of Minnesota; Hanna and Helgeson of North Dakota; Norris of Nebraska and Lafferty of Oregon.

MEN TAKING STRIKE VOTE

Illinois Central Shop Employes May Cease Work.

Paducah, Ky., Aug. 22.—Two-thirds of the members of the Federation of Railway Employes of the Illinois Central and allied systems have voted to date on the proposition to strike, according to an officer of the federation, who declared here that the vote stands in favor of the strike. This vote follows the refusal of the railroads to treat with the federation's representatives on the contention that they are concerned only with the separate contracts with individual unions.

Friday of this week is the date for the announcement of the result of the voting, which, it is said, is being participated in by the 18,000 members of the federation.

CARROLL SAYS EDITOR LIES

Iowa Governor Makes Bitter Answer to Charges.

Des Moines, Aug. 22.—Terming them a mass of lies Governor Carroll came back with a bitter answer to the charges which have been made and reiterated in the last several months by Editor Dave Brant of the Iowa City Republican. The governor declares that Editor Brant's latest attack, which was made Saturday in an editorial, contains scarcely a word of truth.

In the article of last Saturday Mr. Brant charges that Leonard W. Haley, who has been making charges against Warden J. C. Sanders and who is a prisoner in the penitentiary at Fort Madison, has been kept in solitary confinement for weeks.

Jump in Lake Together.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 22.—Clasping hands and jumping from a boat Earl Deeter and his wife ended their lives in New lake. A man on shore, who saw the two row out on the lake and leap overboard, summoned help and the bodies were recovered. Deeter was twenty-six years old and his wife twenty-seven. Both were of prosperous families, but they had been in ill health and despondent.

With it was a letter of commendation from President Taft, which was read to the assemblage.

ONLY THREE KILLED IN SEVERE STORM

Property Damage in North Dakota Is Very Heavy.

Grand Forks, N. D. Aug. 22.—One dead at Sherwood, one dead at Souris and one at McCluskey, coupled with the serious injury of twelve persons and the minor injury of eighteen more, constitute the toll taken by a series of tornadoes that invaded Northern Bottineau and Northern Renville counties Sunday.

One tornado started at Sherwood, passed in a westerly direction, skirting the international boundary line almost the entire distance and at some points lapping over into Canada. The other occurred at McCluskey.

The dead are: John Patterson, Jr., aged sixteen, Souris; Margaret Carlson, aged three, daughter of Elmer Carlson, Sherwood; Olaf Lee, farmer, McCluskey.

The property loss is exceptionally heavy, scores of barns and residences throughout the affected district being demolished and in many instances being carried hundreds of feet from their former sites, only to be dashed to the ground and smashed into kindling wood.

The territory covered is over fifty miles in length and the width varies from two to five miles.

FLEET TO USE AERO GUN

New Weapon Will Have Test in September Maneuvers.

Washington, Aug. 22.—When the fleet begins its spectacular mimic naval battle off the Virginia capes next month to repel combined surface, submarine and overhead attack it will use a new navy aeroplane gun, invented by the navy bureau of ordnance.

Plans for the new gun have been worked out by Rear Admiral Nathan C. Twining, chief of the bureau, and his assistants. It will be the first of this type of armament ever carried by an American war vessel.

The gun is a one pounder, with a special mount that permits it to be elevated at any angle and a sighting apparatus that permits range finding and accurate sighting when firing overhead.

SAY COMPANIES ARE NOT KEEPING FAITH

English Railroad Employes May Renew Strike.

London, Aug. 22.—Threatening a general renewal of the railway strike at once unless the companies put into effect the promises they made in the agreement Saturday, W. H. Thomas, M. P., second secretary of the Railway Employes' federation, announced that the companies were not keeping faith. Thomas said that some of the strikers were discriminated against.

It is believed that pressure by the government will force the companies to carry out the letter and spirit of their agreement.

The employes, confident as to the result of their short strike, in which they completely tied up the country's traffic, are said to be ready to obey a call for a second walkout.

It is expected the sweeping victories of the unions will encourage men in other industries to make farreaching demands. Everywhere the men are filled with confidence. In London the street car men are secretly voting on a strike proposal.

Thousands of railway employes have returned to work. More than 40,000 in the London district reported for work and within forty-eight hours the companies expect to have cleaned up the freight and passenger congestion of last week.

SOLDIERS FIGHTING FLAMES

Forest Fires Raging in Vicinity of Yellowstone Park.

Livingston, Mont., Aug. 22.—A forest fire broke out on Pole creek, near Jardine, on the edge of Yellowstone park. The fire is spreading rapidly and has already done a large amount of damage. The section where the flames are raging is in a wilderness and information is meager.

Several hundreds of acres of pine have already been destroyed, according to records.

A small forest fire in Yellowstone park was also reported and soldiers from Fort Yellowstone are fighting the flames.

Aviation Meet Short $55,000.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—When the nine days' international aviation meet closed the management estimated that 3,000,000 people witnessed the flights. The executive committee has not figured exactly how much the gate receipts ran behind expenses, but a rough estimate placed the total receipts at $140,000. The expenses are estimated at $195,000, which means that the meet has not come within $55,000 of paying expenses.

End of Monetary Commission.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The national monetary commission will close its work on March 31 next. The senate has accepted the house amendments to the senate measure and the bill is ready for the president's signature.

HENRY C. BEATTIE, JR.

BEATTIE PLACED ON TRIAL

Young Virginian Pleads Not Guilty to Wife Murder.

Chesterfield, Va., Aug. 22.—Standing by the side of his father, Henry Clay Beattie of Richmond entered a plea of not guilty here when arraigned in the circuit court on an indictment charging him with the murder of his young wife in a motor car on a turnpike near Richmond a month ago. He did not flinch as the clerk read the indictment, but stood with eyes lowered. The father sat with bowed head.

Counsel for the defense argued to have the arraignment postponed until Monday next, but the court denied the motion, together with a perfunctory motion to quash the indictment.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the task of selecting a jury was begun.

SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS ENDS

Both Houses Agree Upon Hour of Adjournment.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The extra session of congress passed into history at 3 o'clock p. m. The Democratic caucus of the house at a meeting agreed to the Penrose resolution, which passed the senate, prescribing that hour as the date of final adjournment. This action, carried out through a resolution passed by the house, put into effect an understanding reached between party leaders in both houses.

The resolution, which carried unanimously in the house, directed the appointment of three members of the house to join with three members of the senate to notify the president that congress was ready to adjourn.

Congress easily could have adjourned Monday, but the adjournment understanding was designed especially to accord to the president the courtesy of an opportunity to present his veto of the cotton bill before the curtain was rung down on a session replete with tariff revision activities.

WILEY INQUIRY COMPLETED

Secretary Wilson Proves an Interesting Witness.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The congressional investigation into the attempt to oust Dr. H. W. Wiley from his position as head of the bureau of chemistry in the department of agriculture was closed with the testimony of Secretary Wilson. The committee will hold an executive meeting to consider its report.

Many times in his testimony Secretary Wilson condemned Dr. Wiley's demeanor, charging that he was oversensitive because his findings on pure food and drugs were not accepted as final, but were sometimes referred to the referee board, of which Dr. Ira Remsen is chairman.

He spoke a good word for Dr. Wiley's humor. As he was leaving the stand Secretary Wilson declared he would prefer to resign his job to going through another "bureau row."

Gomez Expels Havana Editors.

Havana, Aug. 22.—Enemies of the government are pushing their fight against President Gomez as the result of the executive's order banishing Jose Maria Villaverde, managing editor of the newspaper Cuba, and Manuel Villaverde, his nephew, of the same paper. The Cuba had carried on a campaign of editorial assault on Gomez.

There are two varieties of gas plant. One is a manufacturing establishment where coal is converted into gas for illuminating and heating purposes. The other variety is a real growing plant called the fraxinella. Few know why the fraxinella is called the "gas plant." This is because at certain times it releases a volatile oil that actually ignites if allowed to come in contact with a lighted match. The fraxinella is also noted for its fragrance and longevity if not disturbed. One plant in a New England garden is doing its best to outlive a third generation, and elsewhere a clump is still flourishing after no less than thirty-seven years on a grave—one of the most difficult of places for a perennial to keep up a long struggle for existence, let alone a normal life.—New York World.

Gifted.

"I don't know what I'm ever going to make of that son of mine," complained a prominent Cleveland business man the other day. The old chap is self made, a graduate of the university of hard knocks and all that, and it naturally grieves him to have a son who is not aggressive.

"Maybe your son hasn't found himself yet," we consoled. "Isn't he gifted in any way?"

"Gifted! I should say he is! He ain't got a darned thing that wasn't given to him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Big William Penn.

The statue of William Penn at the city hall in Philadelphia weighs thirty tons and is thirty-seven feet high. Some other dimensions are: Hat rim, twenty-three feet in circumference; nose, thirteen inches long; eyes, twelve inches long and four inches wide; hair, four feet long; arms, twelve feet six inches long; waist, twenty-four feet in circumference; legs, from ankle to knee, ten feet; calf, eight feet eight inches in circumference.

Beats a Good Wife.

An orator holding forth in favor of woman—dear, divine woman—concluded thus:

"Oh, my friends, depend upon it, nothing beats a good wife."

"I beg your pardon," replied a woman. "Sure, a bad husband always does."—London Telegraph.

Early Rising.

The difference between rising in the morning at 5 and 7 o'clock in the space of forty years—supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night—is nearly equivalent to the addition of ten years to a life of threescore years and ten.

My Brother

By HUDSON C. EASTON

Gregory and I had been separated for seven years at an age when persons change very considerably. When we parted my brother was fourteen years old, I twelve. Now Gregory was twenty-one, I eighteen. Disagreements between our parents was the cause of our separation, I having lived with my mother abroad and Gregory with my father in America. Father died while we were in France, and within six months mother died also. There was nothing for Gregory and I to do but to get together. So it was decided that I should come to America.

I had a vague remembrance of my brother as a boy, but as I had never seen him as a man I had no idea what he looked like. I wrote him to meet me on my arrival and as the ship was being pushed into the dock I looked for him among the crowd awaiting friends. Presently I saw a young man waving at me. I couldn't see any resemblance to the boy I had parted with years before, but he was looking straight at me and smiling. I threw him a kiss and waited impatiently for the ship to be docked. Next I saw him hastening by me.

"Here I am," I said.

He turned and surprised me by not appearing to know me. "I have some friends aboard I am looking for," he said hurriedly yet looking puzzled.

"Will you join me after seeing them?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied.

In ten minutes he returned. The puzzled look had given place to a winning smile—the same with which he had greeted me from the dock.

"You're Gregory, aren't you?"

"Gregory? And who may you be?"

"I'm Fanny. I don't wonder you are not quite sure of me since you haven't seen me for seven years."

"Are you sure of me?"

"I wouldn't have known you if you hadn't recognized me first."

"How is that?"

"Why, when you waved to me from the docks."

He took my belongings and carried them to the dock. Fortunately we had no trouble in getting my baggage examined, and Gregory and I soon found ourselves sitting side by side in a carriage rolling along over the thoroughfares of the city.

"This is a funny meeting between brother and sister," I said.

"How funny?"

"Why, we haven't even kissed."

"So we haven't," he said. "That was because we weren't certain of each other, I suppose." And he drew me toward him and kissed me. I noticed that there was a good deal more zest to it than is usual in brotherly kisses, but thought very little of it at the time.

"You're boarding at the same place, I suppose," I said.

"Where was I when you"— He stopped and looked at me inquiringly.

"At 45 Union street, where your letters"—

"Certainly. That's where I am now."

"Didn't you tell the driver where to go?"

"Yes, but to be certain I'll tell him again."

He called to the driver, giving him the street and number. The driver said "Aye, aye," and, turning a corner, got on to another avenue.

"You and I will have to live together now, Greg," I said, laying my hand affectionately on his.

"Nothing would suit me better."

"I won't marry. Neither must you."

He looked at me kind o' funny when I said this, but made no reply.

"It can't be," I said, much disturbed, "that you are engaged?"

"No," he said, "but I'd like to be."

"Oh, I'm so sorry. I hoped that you and I might be inseparable. But if you love some one"—

"I didn't say that some one loved me."

"How long have you known her?"

"About an hour."

I was puzzled. I turned and looked at him. He seemed very much amused at something.

"What in the world do you mean?" I asked.

He laughed. A sudden surprise struck me. Could it be that I had made a mistake? The hot blood rushed to my cheeks.

"This has gone as far as it should go," he said, "though I am loath to stop it. I am not your brother. When I appeared to be waving at you from the dock I was waving at some friends on the deck above you. Forgive me for permitting you to continue in your mistake."

I was naturally too much shocked to treat the matter as a joke. I was riding in a carriage in a city I was not familiar with. He had kissed me.

"Where are you taking me?" I asked, frightened.

"To your brother. You gave me the address."

"After your dishonorable"— I was beginning when he interposed.

"Calm yourself. I admit I have done wrong not to undeceive you at once. But I simply couldn't. To have a lovely girl claim me as you have done was too great a temptation."

He continued to speak in a very complimentary way, and—well, I was mollified. When we reached my brother I found that he had missed me at the steamer, not recognizing me.

My husband says that of all the kisses I have ever given him that first one was the sweetest.

FLAX STRAW

Having established, at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, a Flax Tow Mill, I hereby take pleasure of communicating this fact to the public. This mill will purchase all goods, sound flax straw of 1911 crop only, offered and brought to the mill grounds by the farmers themselves, or shipped to the mill in bales from nearby stations located on the railroad, and immediate cash will be paid for.

The longer the straw the more valuable for making tow, and I therefore respectfully request and advise the farming community to cut the straw as low down as possible, for it is the length of the fibre in the tow which makes it of a desirable quality.

I own four mose flax tows mills in Dakota and own mills or am financially interested in several others located in the states of Minnesota and Iowa.

Mr. Lewis Kunipf, my general foreman, and Mr. George Thompson both of whom are at present time at Red Lake Falls. will give you all further information should you call on them personally or write to them, and I am sure you will find them both absolutely honest and fair gentleman.

My great desire is to be fair myself with all mankind and the farmers especially, and those who treat me fair in their dealings will always find me honest and square in dealing with them.

Trusting that our relations may be at all times harmonious and to the interest of both of us, I remain,

Yours faithfully,
V. R. Blendon.

THIRTY YEARS TOGETHER.

Thirty years of association—think of it. How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worthlessness of a bad one. So there's no guesswork in this evidence of Thos. Ariss, Concord, Mich., who writes: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery for 30 years, and its the best cough and cold cure I ever used." Once it finds entrance in a home you can't pry it out. Many families have used it forty years. It's the most infallible throat and lung medicine on earth. Unequaled for lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever, croup, quinsy or sore lungs. Price 50c, $1.00. An Unconscious Slave

By ELIZABETH WEED

William Remington left the farm when he was seventeen years old and went to the city. He had but one idea—to get rich, go back to the country and give his old father and mother every comfort.

Remington was a natural hustler, a man of remarkable concentration. For the first few years of his business life it was work, work, work, and save, save, save. He wrote regularly to his parents. Occasionally he would ask them if they needed a little money. The reply was that they were doing well enough; he was not to worry about them, but get himself established. He would then write back that he was straining every nerve, saving every cent, to get together some capital. As soon as he could use capital himself he could help them much better than now.

They wrote him every summer to make them a visit, but he replied that he never took a vacation; he was too busy. But he was forging ahead, being promoted rapidly. One day he received a letter from his mother asking if there was anything the matter with him—they had not heard from him for two months. Remington was astonished. He had not written for two months. He had been so busy that he had forgotten to write. He wrote at once, and very penitently, explaining that all his time was required to open a new field in the business and it had absorbed all his attention. He promised that it should not occur again.

When Remington was twenty-five he had succeeded on two lines. He had saved money and made himself valuable. He was worth more than his money. The concern he was with offered to pay him each year five times the amount of his savings. He accepted and remained with it.

Remington sent his parents remittances from this time forward. But he never went to see them. He was too busy. At first he mailed the checks himself with an affectionate letter, but finally, having turned over his private matters to his clerk, they were always mailed by him on the first of the month with no letter at all.

The members of the firm were dying off, and Remington after awhile became managing partner. He was now so busy that he had no time whatever to write to his parents and never did so. But his clerk sent the remittances regularly. One day a man asked him something about his mother. He looked at the questioner, dazed. For an instant he did not seem quite sure he had a mother. The next moment a pained expression passed over his face. But three men were waiting to ask instructions on some point pertaining to the business, and his attention was diverted.

Remington would not permit any one except himself to decide any question of great or small importance. It was not long before the other partners—they were now all juniors—discovered that his health was breaking down under the strain of too much work.

"What's the matter with him?" asked one of them of a doctor.

"He's a slave to detail, same as some one to liquor or drugs."

They remonstrated with the managing partner, but he would not listen to them. Something must be done.

One Sunday morning in early spring when Remington couldn't very well go to business one of his junior partners prevailed upon him to kill time till he might recommence the week's drive by going for a sail on a yacht.

Remington did not get off that yacht for six weeks. He had been kidnaped. He swore, he fumed, he threatened, all to no purpose. The yacht was headed for the island of Madeira, and he couldn't get ashore. Finally he gave himself up to the pleasant, lazy surroundings, and the nervous furor that had been driving him on began to wear off when he reached Madeira and went into its tropical gardens filled with perfume exhaling plants. There he luxuriated in a sort of convalescence. He was ready to listen to reason. He signed a bond with $100,000 forfeit, agreeing to divide the business into departments, appointing a manager for each and solemnly pledging his word of honor not to interfere with any manager in any particular.

There was nothing to do in arranging the business in accordance with the new plan, for it was so arranged already. What was necessary was for Remington to leave each department to its manager. Therefore on his return, finding the business going on just as well as it had been under his personal supervision, he started to visit his father and mother.

He found two old people who did not recognize him when he entered. Nor did he recognize them. His mother was very feeble. Remington put his arms about her and said:

"Mother, I'm Will. I've come back to take you to the city and give you every comfort—a fine house, horses and carriages, automobiles—anything, everything you want."

"And take me away from home?" whimpered the old lady. "I don't want any of those things, nor does pa."

"Thirty years lost in slavery," said Remington to himself.

GRAIN COMING IN

This week saw the first wheat and barley hauled from the surrounding country to the local elevators. All grades of wheat are being received. The early wheat is uniformly good and most of the late wheat is good, tho sometimes of a lower grade due to the fact that rust struck it before it had matured. A great deal of barley is being brought in and farmers are especially fortunate who have some, because of the unusually high price of a $1 a bushel. It is as easy to raise barley as oats, but the price is not usually so very attractive. As soon as threshing gets well under way and if the price of wheat stays where it is now, it is estimated that grain will be handled here to the extent of 10,000 bushels a day.

A NEW LAW.

Our last legislature passed a very stringent act against selling or giving away, so called "malt liquors" whether intoxicating or not, which went into effect July 1st and which law-abiding citizens will do well to bear in mind. It reads in part as follows:

Chapter 131, General Laws, 1911.

"An act to prohibit the keeping for sale, selling, giving away or disposing of malt and liquors whether intoxicating or not, except in licensed saloons, and providing punishment therefor."

The punishment for violation of ths law is a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than 100 dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than ninety days.

SMALL GAME LICENSES

On August 31st seven small game licenses had been issued to Pennington county sportsmen, preparatory to the opening of the hunting season Sept. 7. No license is required for a resident to hunt in his own county except for big game, and these are not procurable before November 7th. To date licenses have been issued to the following in the order named: John Myrland, O. A. Westin, Paul Carson, Guy R. Marcoe, Arthur J. Marcoe, John B. Conner and Fay W. Kenyon. In addition to paying $1 for the license, each man gave his age, height, weight, color of hair, color of eyes, descriptive marks and address. This data is probably given so that a man can not safely loan his license.

CITY ELECTION APPROACHING

The biennial city election will be held this fall on Tuesday November 7th. This time will soon be here and certain candidates realizing this have already signified their intention to come before the public for their approval.

William Smith, dispatcher on the Soo Line, has interviewed several of his friends as to his candidacy for Mayor and seems to be meeting with considerable encouragement. Lars Backe says, that he has been called upon by several of his friends who wish him to enter the field for mayor. Mr. Backe has not refused to enter the field and in all probability he will become an active candidate before the close of the race. Mr. Backe is one of the oldest residents of the city and having served as City Clerk for many years he is thoroughly familiar with city affairs and thus he has this strong recommendation that the newer man lacks.

The Socialist Party have drafted a platform for the city campaign, and by the way this is the first platform ever drafted by any party for a city campaign in this city, and on this platform they will nominate some man for Mayor and, they say they are going to be in the game this time.

N. W. Terrant formerly Judge of Probate of Red Lake County says he will be a candidate for the Municipal Judgeship, and it is also rumored that Milton Forder has aspirations for these honors, while J. M. Bishop the present incumbent is somewhat reluctant and may not enter the race at all.

Aldermanic candidacies of the various wards and at large are too hazy, as yet, to take on any particular form.

LABOR BUREAU EXHIBIT.

The Minnesota Bureau of Labor, Industries and Commerce will have a most interesting and instructive exhibit at the State Fair. Its booth will be in the south wing of the "Manufacturer's Building." The five branches of the Department-Factory Inspection, Statistics, Women and Children, Child Labor, Free Employment Bureaus, will be represented by typical exhibits.

The display of safety appliances and photographs which has been gathered by the Bureau at a considerable expense will be an especial feature of the exhibit.

Every person who attends the Fair will find something of interest in the Bureau of Labor booth.

The University Farm Press News prints the following paragraph about the Agricultural schools. The Crookston School has a fine equipment at the Northwest Experiment Station and offers splendid advantages to students from this part of the state. The article follows:

"The Minnesota School of Agriculture, at St. Anthony Park, was at the last term fairly swamped by the number of students seeking its advantages. The legislature voted a sum of money for additional buildings, but they will not be available for use during the ensuing term; therefore the conditions of overcrowding, and overwork for instructors, seem likely to be repeated.

It is earnstly urged that all intending students, to whom the new schools at Crookston and Morris are geographically more convenient, should register at those schools. Whatever seeming advantages the St. Anthony Park school may have from its location and its connection with the State Experiment Station, are probably more than offset by the greater amount of individual attention from instructors which students will enjoy at the smaller schools. Whatever difference in expense may exist is probably in favor of Crookston and Morris.

The necessary expense of a six month's term at Crookston, aside from traveling expense and the cost of a military uniform do not exceed $100. The next term opens Monday, October 2d."

TARIFF TOMFOOLERY.

Pres. Taft is against any revision on manufactured articles until he hears from his three statisticians. His bowels of compassion are unmoved at the sight of the American farmer with his products on the free list and everything he buys taxed. The consumer shall get no relief until it may be given to him "scientifically."

Sen. Cummins said that there was no need whatever to wait for a report from the tariff board, as he could "prove by evidence far superior to any tariff board or any outside investigating body" that the reduction which congress proposed to make in the steel schedule were warranted. For he would have no difficulty in proving out of Andrew Carnegie's own mouth that all of the iron and steel duties could be wiped out without causing a single mine or mill to close down, and without creating any disturbance whatever save to the industry of stock watering.

Yet in face of all this—in face of his own denunciation of indefensible duties—Mr. Taft tells the American people that they can have no relief until three men shall gather together a mass of statistics for the guidance of congress. Then when the figures have been added and subtracted and divided, the people may know the measure of relief that may be granted to them without causing annoyance to those who profit from their distress. This tomfoolery—for it is nothing less, in that the tariff board has no information at its command which is not available to congress—has been invoked to deny simple justice to the consuming public. Surely Mr. Taft is piling up wrath against the day of reckoning.—St. Paul Daily News.

President Taft virtually opened his presidential campaign last Saturday and in doing so assailed with all might certain "enemies of the Republic," as he considers them.

It seems to us he might have made a better beginning. The enemies that he picked out for attack were Speaker Clark, Chairman, Underwood of the House, Senator LaFollette, and the "Progressives" in general. These have earnestly endeavored to relieve the tariff burdens of the people and at the same time had an eye to justice in so doing. They have done what they could to loosen the grip of the "special interests" on the throat of the consuming public and might have had much to show for their efforts in this direction but for the refusal of this same Taft to stand by his campaign promises to "revise the Dingley tariff downward." He has had a number of opportunities when with a stroke of the pen he might have saved our consuming public many millions of dollars. Instead he said in effect: Let the people suffer another year lest we cause the greedy monopolies inconvenience by an "unscientific" tariff. Better let the people suffer—they're used to it.

This same Taft was an ardent supporter of the Roosevelt conservation policies, but he no sooner took his oath of office than he weeded out of his cabinet the leading conservationists of the Roosevelt administration and through Ballinger, his own choice began a game of "give away" with the "big interests," the stake being water power sites, coal lands, etc., on government lands. Could this policy have been carried forth till now, untrammeled by aroused public opinion, nothing would now be left to conserve.

This same Taft last June 22d openly endorsed the Aldrich-Morgan credit controling monopoly. This is the proposed new currency reform concocted by a lot of lame ducks "who have put their heads together and with the advice and consent" of the big money powers propose so to centralize the wealth and credit of the country as to make them perpetual masters.

And now this same Taft has the gall to step forth and begin to warn us of "enemies" of the Public, when he himself is one of the most dangerous ones, because he cloaks himself in seeming righteousness and respectability. If we want more fetters instead of more freedom we will listen to his siren voice.

SUPPORTS CONGRESSMAN LINDBERGH'S RESOLUTION TO INVESTIGATE THE MONEY TRUST.

To the Editor of the News Tribune:

Early last month Representative Charles A. Lindbergh of the Sixth Minnesota district placed before congress a resolution calling for the appointment of a special committee to investigate the banking trust of this country. The resolution is now before the house committee on rules, and that committee, according to the Associated Press, has decided to report it favorable, and probably to recommend that the subject be turned over to the committee especially created.

This resolution goes to the very heart of the whole trust evil, and has more importance to the country at large than any other proposal or proceeding now before the government, yet it has had practically no attention. The purpose back of it profoundly affects the whole body of our population in their most intimate daily affairs, because the trust it brings into question is back of all the trusts now being investigated. No correction of the trust evils will mean much while this central and dominant trust remains. No restraint of trade can equal the restraint directly and indirectly exercised by the banking power of New York and its allied interests, community funds are diverted from the needs of the community themselves, and made to furnish lifeblood to Wall street speculation.

As Representative Lindbergh pointed out in offering his resolution, over 80 per cent of the country's money is controlled by about 3,000 individuals and institutions, and kept away from the channels of development and exchanges through which the lifeblood of the country's legitimate industries must be derived. The banking trust is none the less central in power for its being intangible and having no formed organization. Its acts and their effects are easily traceable through the performance of its agents, high and low, and clearly show a conspiracy far more dangerous than any organized trust of any kind. That power, arbitrarily controlled by a few men whose offices are within three or four blocks of Broad and Walls streets actually holds the producers and legitimate merchants of the west and middle west in a condition of serfdom, from which they can be emancipated only by forcible action on the part of the government, and to force such an action is the object Mr. Lindbergh has in view.

Without public pressure the house committee may be expected to do what all committees heretofore have done—bow to the orders from New York. If it refers the resolution to the monetary commission, or any other creature of the Aldrich plan it will die a lingering death. The Aldrich plan itself is specially designed to confirm the hold of the banking trusts upon the country's money, and goes to such lengths as would practically give the banks control of the United States treasury with power to drain our money into foreign lands in any time of stress, or whenever it liked. The disaster it would impose would crack the very bones of the nation.

A Real Gas Plant.

There are two varieties of gas plant. One is a manufacturing establishment where coal is converted into gas for illuminating and heating purposes. The other variety is a real growing plant called the fraxinella. Few know why the fraxinella is called the "gas plant." This is because at certain times it releases a volatile oil that actually ignites if allowed to come in contact with a lighted match. The fraxinella is also noted for its fragrance and longevity if not disturbed. One plant in a New England garden is doing its best to outlive a third generation, and elsewhere a clump is still flourishing after no less than thirty-seven years on a grave—one of the most difficult of places for a perennial to keep up a long struggle for existence, let alone a normal life.—New York World.

Gifted.

"I don't know what I'm ever going to make of that son of mine," complained a prominent Cleveland business man the other day. "The old chap is self made, a graduate of the university of hard knocks and all that, and it naturally grieves him to have a son who is not aggressive.

"Maybe your son hasn't found himself yet," we consoled. "Isn't he gifted in any way?"

"Gifted! I should say he is! He ain't got a darned thing that wasn't given to him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Big William Penn.

The statue of William Penn at the city hall in Philadelphia weighs thirty tons and is thirty-seven feet high. Some other dimensions are: Hat rim, twenty-three feet in circumference; nose, thirteen inches long; eyes, twelve inches long and four inches wide; hair, four feet long; arms, twelve feet six inches long; waist, twenty-four feet in circumference; legs, from ankle to knee, ten feet; calf, eight feet eight inches in circumference.

Beats a Good Wife.

An orator holding forth in favor of woman—dear, divine woman—concluded thus:

"Oh, my friends, depend upon it, nothing beats a good wife."

Early Rising.

The difference between rising in the morning at 5 and 7 o'clock in the space of forty years—supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night—is nearly equivalent to the addition of ten years to a life of threescore years and ten.

The Blushing Octopus.

The octopus frequently changes in color like a marine chameleon. It would appear, from studies of this creature, that the colored pigment whereby this change in color is effected is contained in envelopes in its skin, in the tissue of which are muscular fibers actuated by nerves. Should these fibers become relaxed a dark pigment appears. The phenomenon is said to be analogous to blushing.—Harper's Weekly.

Antoine Chabelier, private in the One Hundred and Forty-seventh regiment of the line, to the manner born, twenty years of age, defender of France from the Germans, who were marching over the borders, at the battle of Gravelotte, received two wounds, one in the leg and one in the arm. The wounds were made with bullets, which were cut out by the surgeon. They were shown to the wounded man, who asked for them, and they were given to him.

Then a brilliant idea struck the young soldier. Being a good deal of a butterfly in the matter of his loves, before marching from Paris he had tearfully bid adieu to two young ladies, each one of whom had wept on his shoulder. "I will send Lucile one of these bullets," he said, "and Clochette the other, a very pretty compliment, the bullets having wounded me on the field of battle. I can see nothing dishonorable in the matter since if either takes it as a proposal of marriage it will be her own fault."

So he wrote a letter to Lucile, telling her that he was sending her the bullet with which he had been wounded in the late battle, and wrote a duplicate to Clochette. When he next saw these young ladies the second empire had fallen and the republic was restored. Antoine lived in one of the swell quarters of Paris, on a street midway between his two charmers. They had fled from the commune, but when tranquillity was restored had returned and again settled in their homes. The war had cost France much of its best blood, and Lucile, one of the young ladies who possessed "the bullet with which Antoine had been wounded," having lost an uncle, had fallen heir to a large fortune.

Antoine, like most young men of social rank, having heard of this accession of wealth, not averse to marrying a fortune, congratulated himself on having favored the heiress with the bullet that had wounded him, but felt ill at ease for fear the other "bullet with which he had been wounded" would ruin him. His first meeting with Lucile was very tender. She did not weep tears of joy on his shoulder at his return, but there were various reasons for this. In the first pl France was a great sufferer; second, mademoiselle was now in the matrimonial market an not be expected to give herself as readily as before. These w reasons Antoine gave himself want of demonstrativeness on the part such as she had shown at his parture for the war.

It was some time after his return that he called upon Clochette, who possessed the other bullet with which he had been wounded. She received him with the same demonstrations of affection as before, permitting him to embrace her, though Antoine thought that there was not the same genuine feeling she had shown before. She was much interested to know where he had been struck, and Antoine turned up his trousers and showed her a scar in the calf of his leg. The wound in his arm he was keeping for Lucile.

There was one weak spot in this little farce for its hero. The two young ladies were acquainted. Antoine felt hopeful that the one would not learn of the other's souvenir since high bred ladies were not likely to tell one another of their love affairs. However, he was in a hurry to wed Lucile, for once married there might be half a dozen bullet souvenirs in the hands of as many young ladies and no great harm done. Lucile put him off on the plea that she was not assured of his love for her, but declared that once convinced she would yield.

One day when Antoine called on Lucile he was concerned to find Clochette there drinking English afternoon tea. Clochette was surprised to see him, but the three drank tea together very sociably. Antoine was called upon to give some account of his war service, and both girls naturally manifested an interest in his wound. Finally Lucile said:

"M. Chabelier, show mademoiselle the place in your arm where you were wounded."

The bomb was about to burst. Nevertheless Antoine was a man of courage. He did not flinch.

"In the leg, you mean," said Clochette.

"He told me it was in the arm; indeed, he showed me the scar."

"I think I should know," said the other, "since I possess the bullet that wounded him."

"Indeed," rejoined Lucile, with hauteur, "I supposed I possessed that bullet. Is it not so, monsieur?"

"It is."

"And do not I possess the bullet that wounded you?" asked Clochette, with spirit.

Antoine saw that it was all up with him. He surrendered, but to neither.

"Young ladies," he said, "I sent one of you a bullet that wounded me in the arm, the other one that wounded me in the leg. I sent a third bullet to another girl."

"Where did that one strike you?" asked Clochette.

"In the heart."

Both girls burst into a laugh. Lucile finally forgave him, and he is now making ducks and drakes of her fortune. Nevertheless his wife is not fond of having him tell the story, which he does whenever he entertains a select party of intimate friends.

The Pure Bred Stallion Creates Improvement

By D. O. THOMPSON,

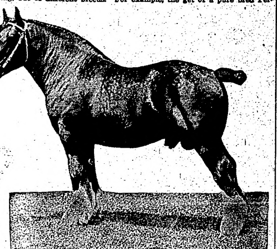
Animal Husbandry Department, Purdue University Experiment Station

III.

THE terms descriptive of the breeding of horses are more or less well understood, nevertheless an exact understanding of their meaning is essential to an intelligent discussion of the horse breeding situation in the state.

The term "pure bred" is applied to the horse having sire and dam of the same breed and both eligible to registry in the books of the standard record or registry association. The horse thus bred is himself eligible to registry in the standard book.

The term "crossbred" is applied to a horse having sire and dam of pure breeding, but of different breeds. For example, the get of a pure bred Percheron stallion mated with a pure bred Shire mare is a crossbred and is not eligible to registry in either of the associations in which its sire and dam may be registered.



A PURE BRED STALLION.—The result of a century of pure breeding. He has all the qualifications of a valuable sire.

The term "grade" is applied to the get of a pure bred stallion mated with a mare of impure breeding. The filly produced from the mating of a mare of common or nondescript breeding with a pure bred stallion is a half blood; if she is mated in turn with a stallion of the same breed as her sire the offspring is a three-quarters blood. If this foal be a filly and she be mated with a pure bred stallion of the same breed as her sire the offspring is a seven-eighths blood. The result of the next top cross is a fifteenth-sixteenths blood, etc. Although at the end of a series of years of top crossing the progeny will show many of the characters of the pure bred and carry but a trace of the blood of the common mare in the remote ancestry, nevertheless they are not eligible to registry in the books of the standard record associations in the United States, and the colts are not desirable for the stud because it is highly probable that if they were retained for service in the stud the foals sired by them will revert in some degree to the characters of the common mare in the ancestry.

The terms "mongrel" and "scrub" are used interchangeably to designate the breeding of the get of a stallion of impure breeding. When applied to the individuality of the animal they designate inferiority. Either of these terms also applies to the offspring of a pure bred mare got by a stallion of impure breeding. Mating a pure bred mare with anything but a pure bred stallion is not up grading; it is rather a step in the opposite direction, away from progress and improvement.

Standard Record Associations.

In times past and to some extent at present there have been companies and associations organized that supply pedigree registry certificates for animals not eligible to registry in the standard associations. They can do business because their identity is not known to the great majority of farmers who breed mares and to many of whom a certificate from one association means as much as that from another. Prior to January 1, 1911, the department of agriculture gave official recognition to certain associations, but due to a new interpretation of the law this recognition was withdrawn on that date. On Jan. 3, 1911, the National Society of Record Associations, in which membership is limited to standard associations, was organized, and this association gives official recognition to the following horse registry associations, clubs and companies: Arabian Horse Club of America, Newburg, N. Y.; American Association of Importers and Breeders of Belgian Draft Horses, Wabash, Ind.; Cleveland Bay Society of America, Oconomowoc, Wis.; American Clydesdale association, Chicago, Ill.; French Coach Horse Society of America, Oak Park, Ill.; German, Hanoverian and Oldenburg Coach Horse Association of America, Lafayette, Ind.; American Hackney Horse society, New York; Percheron Society of America, Chicago, Ill.; American Shetland Pony club, Lafayette, Ind.; American Shire Horse association, Wenona, Ill.; American Suffolk Horse association, De Kalb, Ill.; National French Draft Horse association, Fairfield, Ia.; the Jockey club, New York; the Welsh Pony and Cob Society of America, Aurora, Ill.; American Trotting Register association, Chicago, Ill.; American Morgan Register association, Middlebury, Vt.; American Saddle Horse Breeders' association, Louisville, Ky., and American Breeders' Association of Jacks and Jennets, Columbia, Tenn.

A GRADE GELDING.—The result of a dozen years of top crossing, a compliment to the pure bred stallion that sired him. Fortunately one of the few as good as himself not kept for the stud. Had he been retained as a stallion it is highly probable that the majority of his foals would receive from him some of the inferior characters of the common mare in his not very remote ancestry.

The pedigree registry certificate shown as proof of the purity of breeding of any stallion should bear the exact name and seal of the association, club or company recognized by the National Association of Record Associations.

Improved Breeding Increases Selling Price.

The get of pure bred stallions sell much more readily and at a higher price than the get of crossbred, grade or scrub stallions. About 95 per cent of 300 farmers in one state (Indiana) replied to a question on this point that the get of a pure bred stallion sold for much better prices than the foals sired by a grade. Investigations in other states in which exhaustive data have been gathered on this subject substantiate this belief. The pure bred stallion, owing to his stronger, more firmly established blood lines, is more prepotent than the stallion of impure breeding.

CANNOT CONCEDE MEN'S DEMANDS

Vice President of Harriman Lines Gives Reasons.

GOES DEEPLY INTO DETAILS

Julius Kruttschnitt Declares That to Concede to Shop Employes the Points Desired Would Mean Chaos and Diminish the Ability of the Corporations to Fulfill the Duties Imposed Upon Them by Law.

San Francisco, Aug. 29.—That to grant the demands of the Federation of Shop Employes of the Harriman lines would mean chaos, and that it would diminish the ability of the corporations to fulfill the duties imposed upon them by law, was the statement made by Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president and director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman roads.

Mr. Kruttschnitt took up in detail the reasons for refusing the demands of the federated shopmen, saying:

"These are the reasons why we decline to surrender to an irresponsible committee of federated employes, representing a very small portion of the public, trusts confided to us by the entire public and why we will not concede to such a committee the right to dictate whether we shall or shall not fulfill for twenty millions of people in seventeen states the duties clearly prescribed by law. The employes' demands are substantially as follows:

"First—Recognition of the shop employes' federation.

"Heretofore issues arising with a machinist, boilermaker, blacksmith or sheet metal worker were taken up with his associates of that craft. When not successfully adjusted strikes of that craft have followed, but they were not serious enough to prevent the roads performing their public services, for which they were created. Under the change proposed an issue of a small road of the system in Louisiana might stop all shop work throughout the system by requiring members to strike in California, Oregon, Washington or Nebraska.

"Second—All present or future employes will join the federated association within thirty days.

"This means the discharge of all employes who will not join, or an absolute closed shop.

"Third—That the company agree that the final settlement of differences shall rest with a federated committee representing all five crafts.

Encourage Unreasonable Demands.

"This would place the employes of all crafts behind a demand made by any one craft and would encourage unreasonable demands not likely to be made by individual crafts.

"Fourth—The restriction of the number of apprentices.

"This would deny to American boys the opportunity to learn trades.

"Fifth—A flat increase of 7 cents per hour for all mechanics, apprentices and helpers, an average for the entire shop forces of 23 cents and a reduction of hours and other demands averaging 13 per cent additional.

"The Southern Pacific is now paying higher wages than any other railroad in the United States and has increased the pay of all shop crafts 12½ per cent in the last five years.

"Sixth—The abolishing of piece, premium or bonus systems, shop foremanship to be filled by promotion from federation employes. This is in direct conflict with the public opinion, recently expressed, that increased expenses of carriers should be met with increased efficiency of operation and not by increase of freight rates.

"Seventh—That no form of physical examination or personal record shall be required.

"This denies to the company the right of every citizen to require of persons offering their services evidences of competency, good character and health and deprives the companies of all protection under the fellow servant laws of many states.

"Eighth—That, if forces are reduced, employes are to indicate who should be laid off.

"This would embarrass the company in efforts to increase efficiency by ridding the service of inefficient employes.

"Ninth—That no employe belonging to the federation be discharged without consent from the employes' committee.

"This would require the company involved to meet a committee representing all its craftsmen, which committee would owe allegiance to a general committee composed of allied craftsmen of all lines of the Harriman system."

An Unconscious Slave

By ELIZABETH WEED

William Remington left the farm when he was seventeen years old and went to the city. He had but one idea—to get rich, go back to the country and give his old father and mother every comfort.

Remington was a natural hustler, a man of remarkable concentration. For the first few years of his business life it was work, work, work, and save, save, save. He wrote regularly to his parents. Occasionally he would ask them if they needed a little money. The reply was that they were doing well enough; he was not to worry about them, but get himself established. He would then write back that he was straining every nerve, saving every cent, to get together some capital. As soon as he could use capital himself he could help them much better than now.

They wrote him every summer to make them a visit, but he replied that he never took a vacation; he was too busy. But he was forging ahead, being promoted rapidly. One day he received a letter from his mother asking if there was anything the matter with him—they had not heard from him for two months. Remington was astonished. He had not written for two months. He had been so busy that he had forgotten to write. He wrote at once, and very penitently, explaining that all his time was required to open a new field in the business and it had absorbed all his attention. He promised that it should not occur again.

When Remington was twenty-five he had succeeded on two lines. He had saved money and made himself valuable. He was worth more than his money. The concern he was with offered to pay him each year five times the amount of his savings. He accepted and remained with it.

Remington sent his parents remittances from this time forward. But he never went to see them. He was too busy. At first he mailed the checks himself with an affectionate letter, but finally, having turned over his private matters to his clerk, they were always mailed by him on the first of the month with no letter at all.

The members of the firm were dying off, and Remington after awhile became managing partner. He was now so busy that he had no time whatever to write to his parents and never did so. But his clerk sent the remittances regularly. One day a man asked him something about his mother. He looked at the questioner, dazed. For an instant he did not seem quite sure he had a mother. The next moment a pained expression passed over his face. But three men were waiting to ask instructions on some point pertaining to the business, and his attention was diverted.

Remington would not permit any one except himself to decide any question of great or small importance. It was not long before the other partners—they were now all juniors—discovered that his health was breaking down under the strain of too much work.

"What's the matter with him?" asked one of them of a doctor.

"He's a slave to detail, same as some one to liquor or drugs."

They remonstrated with the managing partner, but he would not listen to them. Something must be done.

One Sunday morning in early spring when Remington couldn't very well go to business one of his junior partners prevailed upon him to kill time till he might recommence the week's drive by going for a sail on a yacht.

Remington did not get off that yacht for six weeks. He had been kidnaped. He swore, he fumed, he threatened, all to no purpose. The yacht was headed for the island of Madeira, and he couldn't get ashore. Finally he gave himself up to the pleasant, lazy surroundings, and the nervous furor that had been driving him on began to wear off when he reached Madeira and went into its tropical gardens filled with perfume exhaling plants. There he luxuriated in a sort of convalescence. He was ready to listen to reason. He signed a bond with $100,000 forfeit, agreeing to divide the business into departments, appointing a manager for each and solemnly pledging his word of honor not to interfere with any manager in any particular.

There was nothing to do in arranging the business in accordance with the new plan, for it was so arranged already. What was necessary was for Remington to leave each department to its manager. Therefore on his return, finding the business going on just as well as it had been under his personal supervision, he started to visit his father and mother.

He found two old people who did not recognize him when he entered. Nor did he recognize them. His mother was very feeble. Remington put his arms about her and said:

"Mother, I'm Will. I've come back to take you to the city and give you every comfort—a fine house, horses and carriages, automobiles—anything, everything you want."

"And take me away from home?" whispered the old lady. "I don't want any of those things, nor does pa."

"Thirty years lost in slavery," said Remington to himself.

TARIFF WILL BE MAIN QUESTION

PREPARING HIS ADDRESSES

While Taft Will Speak on Many Subjects During His Coming Western Trip the Tariff Problem Will Receive Most of His Attention—Intends to Fight Progressives on Their Native Heath.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 29.—So far as President Taft himself is concerned the tariff will be the main issue of the 1912 campaign. While the president will speak on many subjects on his Western trip it is certain now that tariff revision will receive most of his attention.

Following his speech to the Essex County Republican club at Hamilton on Saturday the president began to prepare other speeches on the tariff. He secured copies of his veto message on the wool, farmers' free list and cotton bills and at once set to work upon addresses which he expects to deliver later, backing up those vetoes.

Mr. Taft is said to realize that he must not merely defend himself for having rejected these bills, but that he must attack the Democrats and progressive Republicans who put them through congress.

The attack upon the Democrats the president can make almost anywhere. It is understood the fight upon the progressives will be confined largely to their own territory. The president will carry the war West into the "enemy's country."

Attack Clearly Defined.

The nature of attack is pretty clearly defined already—it will be, in substance, that the progressives who voted for a tariff board should have been willing to wait for its report; that the revision bills the Democrats and progressives drew at the special session were "ill considered" and "badly drawn," and that great industries of the country should not be put in jeopardy by such legislation when revision, if recommended by the tariff board, might be expected anyway a few months later.

It is also probable that the president will promise tariff reform so far as he can bring it about at the next session of congress.

It is quite possible that the progressives will be under fire from the president also on the subject of reciprocity. The president has heard enough from Western congressmen to know that reciprocity is not popular in some states west of the Mississippi.

Of the other main topics already selected currency reform is admitted to be of great interest because of the idea that the proposed legislation may foreshadow a central bank. The president may talk extensively on this subject.

President Taft to Visit Twenty-four States.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 29.—Twenty-four states of the Union will be visited by President Taft on the swing around the circuit, according to a schedule partially completed at the executive offices. The president will start Sept. 15 and, with the exception of five states and Arizona and New Mexico, he will pass through every commonwealth west of the Mississippi.

Included in the twenty-four are Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Maryland.

BIG "SLUSH" FUND ALLEGED

Canadian Paper Offers Reward for Names of Contributors.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 29.—Under black headlines, "Canadian Election Campaign Fund," the Montreal Star, which is opposing reciprocity, published the following:

"The Montreal Star hereby offers $25,000 reward for information, placed in the hands of three judges of the supreme court of Canada and three judges of the superior court, three Conservatives and three Liberals, that will, in the opinion of these judges, enable the court to trace to its source the enormous campaign fund sent from the United States to Canada to be used in influencing the judgment of the Canadian people in deciding what is to be a national question of supreme importance."

Recall Election In Wichita.

Wichita, Kan., Aug. 29.—Wichita will hold a recall election, probably on Oct. 3, to decide whether Mayor J. H. Graham and City Commissioners E. M. Leach and Robert B. Campbell are to retain their offices. The mayor and commissioners met and voted to call the election as petitioned for by about 2,500 persons who desire the removal of these city officials.

COLONEL JOHN M'ELROY.

COLONEL M'ELROY DROPS OUT

Judge Trimble Chosen Commander of the Grand Army.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Judge Harvey M. Trimble of Illinois was unanimously elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic when Colonel John McElroy of Washington, his opponent, ended a bitter contest by withdrawing from the race. On motion of Colonel McElroy the adjutant general cast one vote for Judge Trimble. The Sherman pension bill was endorsed.

Colonel Nicholas Day of New York city was elected senior vice commander. The election and installation of the officers and the selection of Los Angeles for the next encampment closed the encampment.

THEATER HORROR IN PENNSYLVANIA TOWN

Twenty-six Persons Killed and Many Injured in Panic.

Canonsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—Crushed and mangled in a panic caused by the explosion of a moving picture film, twenty-six persons, chiefly boys and girls, were killed and sixty-eight injured in the Morgan Opera House here tonight.

A flash of flame, a cry of fire, a mad rush, in which men and women fought with each other and trampled down children—it was all over in a few minutes, leaving its awful toll of death and injury.

The moving picture cage was in the second gallery and the stairs were all inside, leading from the second to the first balcony and from that to the main floor. All of the occupants of the crowded house dashed for these stairs and instantly the jam at the main exit was solid. Those who had presence of mind enough to seek the fire escapes were not injured, but the majority joined in the wild rush for the stairs.

When the first rescuers made their way into the main entrance they confronted a solid wall of humanity, many of them dead, others terribly wounded. The cries of the women and children were awful to hear and half the men who started to their rescue were sickened by the horror. All the ambulances and vehicles within call were summoned to carry the dead and injured to an improvised morgue or to the hospitals. The fire caused no damage, being confined to the moving picture cage.

PINCHOT IS FOR LA FOLLETTE

Prefers Wisconsin Man to Taft for the Presidency.

St. Paul, Aug. 29.—Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester in the department of agriculture, who stopped off in St. Paul on his way to Alaska, where he purposes to get first hand knowledge of that country's resources, declared that the development of that territory was going to be one of the two big questions before the next session of congress. Mr. Pinchot also came out in words of strong praise for Senator La Follette and made it plain that he favors the Wisconsin man for president in preference to Mr. Taft.

SIX MEN PERISH IN DISASTER

Four Other Miners at Point of Death From Injuries.

Ely, Nev., Aug. 25.—Of ten men who were working at the 1,400-foot level of the new five-compartment shaft of the Giroux Consolidated mines when it caught fire six are dead and four lie at the point of death after passing through the flames to reach the surface. The dead are Daniel Dres, secretary of the local miners' union; T. J. Gilmore, shift boss; John Wilhelm, Thomas O. Bolovich, Edward Welsh, John McNulty.

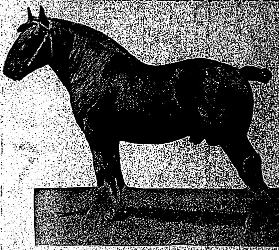
III.

THE terms descriptive of the breeding of horses are more or less well understood, nevertheless an exact understanding of their meaning is essential to an intelligent discussion of the horse breeding situation in the state.

The term "pure bred" is applied to the horse having sire and dam of the same breed and both eligible to registry in the books of the standard record or registry association. The horse thus bred is himself eligible to registry in the standard book.

The term "crossbred" is applied to a horse having sire and dam of pure breeding, but of different breeds. For example, the get of a pure bred Percheron stallion mated with a pure bred Shire mare is a crossbred and is not eligible to registry in either of the associations in which its sire and dam may be registered.



A PURE BRED STALLION.—The result of a century of pure breeding. He has all the qualifications of a valuable sire.

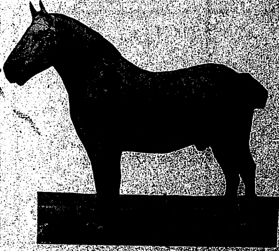
The term "grade" is applied to the get of a pure bred stallion mated with a mare of impure breeding. The filly produced from the mating of a mare of common or nondescript breeding with a pure bred stallion is a half blood; if she is mated in turn with a stallion of the same breed as her sire the offspring is a three-quarters blood. If this foal be a filly and she be mated with a pure bred stallion of the same breed as her sire the offspring is a seven-eighths blood. The result of the next top cross is a fifteenth-sixteenths blood, etc. Although at the end of a series of years of top crossing the progeny will show many of the characters of the pure bred and carry but a trace of the blood of the common mare in the remote ancestry, nevertheless they are not eligible to registry in the books of the standard record associations in the United States, and the colts are not desirable for the stud because it is highly probable that if they were retained for service in the stud the foals sired by them will revert in some degree to the characters of the common mare in the ancestry.

The terms "mongrel" and "scrub" are used interchangeably to designate the breeding of the get of a stallion of impure breeding. When applied to the individuality of the animal they designate inferiority. Either of these terms also applies to the offspring of a pure bred mare got by a stallion of impure breeding. Mating a pure bred mare with anything but a pure bred stallion is not up grading; it is rather a step in the opposite direction, away from progress and improvement.

Standard Record Associations.

In times past and to some extent at present there have been companies and associations organized that supply pedigree registry certificates for animals not eligible to registry in the standard associations. They can do business because their identity is not known to the great majority of farmers who breed mares and to many of whom a certificate from one association means as much as that from another. Prior to January 1, 1911, the department of agriculture gave official recognition to certain associations, but due to a new interpretation of the law this recognition was withdrawn on that date. On Jan. 3, 1911, the National Society of Record Associations, in which membership is limited to standard associations, was organized, and this association gives official recognition to the following horse registry associations, clubs and companies: Arabian Horse Club of America, Newburg, N. Y.; American Association of Importers and Breeders of Belgian Draft Horses, Wabash, Ind.; Cleveland Bay Society of America, Oconomowoc, Wis.; American Clydesdale association, Chicago, Ill.; French Coach Horse Society of America, Oak Park, Ill.; German, Hanoverian and Oldenburg Coach Horse Association of America, Lafayette, Ind.; American Hackney Horse society, New York; Percheron Society of America, Chicago, Ill.; American Shetland Pony club, [illegible] Ind.; American Shire Horse association, Wenona, Ill.; American Suffolk Horse association, De Kalb, Ill.; National French Draft Horse association, [illegible] Ia.; the Jockey club, New York; the Welsh Pony and Cob Society [illegible] Aurora, Ill.; American Trotting Register association, [illegible] Morgan Register association, Middlebury, Vt.; American Saddle Horse Breeders' association, Louisville, Ky., and American Breeders' Association of Jacks and Jennets, Columbia, Tenn.

The pedigree registry certificate shown [illegible] of any stallion should bear the exact name [illegible] or company recognized by the National Association [illegible]



A GRADE GELDING.—The result of a dozen years of top crossing, a compliment to the pure bred stallion that sired him. Fortunately one of the few as good as himself not kept for the stud. Had he been retained as a stallion it is highly probable that the majority of his foals would receive from him some of the inferior characters of the common mare in his not very remote ancestry.

GOES DEEPLY INTO DETAILS

Julius Kruttschnitt Declares That to Consent to Demands of Employes [illegible] Would Mean Chaos and Diminish the Ability of the Corporations to Fulfill the Duties Imposed Upon Them by Law.

San Francisco, Aug. 29.—That to grant the demands of the Federation of Shop Employes of the Harriman lines would mean chaos, and that it would diminish the ability of the corporations to fulfill the duties imposed upon them by law was the statement made by Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president and director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman roads.

Mr. Kruttschnitt took up in detail the reasons for refusing the demands of the federated shopmen, saying:

"These are the reasons why we decline to surrender to an irresponsible committee of federated employes, representing a very small portion of the public trusts confided to us by the entire public and why we will not concede to such a committee the right to dictate whether we shall or shall not fulfill for twenty millions of people in seventeen states the duties clearly prescribed by law. The employes' demands are substantially as follows:

"First—Recognition of the shop employes federation.

"Heretofore issues arising with a machinist, boilermaker, blacksmith or sheet metal worker were taken up with his associates of that craft. When not successfully adjusted strikes of that craft have followed, but they were not serious enough to prevent the roads performing their public services, for which they were created. Under the change proposed an issue of a small road of the system in Louisiana might stop all shop work throughout the system by requiring members to strike in California, Oregon, Washington or Nebraska.

"Second—All present or future employes will join the federated association within thirty days.

"This means the discharge of all employes who will not join, or an absolute closed shop.

"Third—That the company agree that the final settlement of differences shall rest with a federated committee representing all five crafts.

Encourage Unreasonable Demands.

"This would place the employes of all crafts behind a demand made by any one craft and would encourage unreasonable demands not likely to be made by individual crafts.

"Fourth—The restriction of the number of apprentices.

"This would deny to American boys the opportunity to learn trades.

"Fifth—A flat increase of 7 cents per hour for all mechanics, apprentices and helpers, an average for the entire shop forces of 25 cents and a reduction of hours and other demands averaging 15 per cent additional.

"The Southern Pacific is now paying higher wages than any other railroad in the United States and has increased the pay of all shop crafts 12½ per cent in the last five years.

"Sixth—The abolishing of piece, premium or bonus systems, shop foremanship to be filled by promotion from federation employes. This is in direct conflict with the public opinion recently expressed that increased expenses of carriers should be met with increased efficiency of operation and not by increase of freight rates.

"Seventh—That no form of physical examination or personal record shall be required.

"This denies to the company the right of every citizen to require of persons offering their services evidences of competency, good character and health and deprives the companies of all protection under the fellow servant laws of many states.

"Eighth—That if forces are reduced, employes are to indicate who should be laid off.

"This would embarrass the company in efforts to increase efficiency by ridding the service of incompetent employes.

"Ninth—That no employe belonging to the federation be discharged without the consent of the employes' committee.

"This would require the company [illegible] committee [illegible]

[illegible] left the farm [illegible] years old and [illegible] to the city. He had but one idea [illegible] the country [illegible] father and mother [illegible]

Remington was a natural hustler, a man of remarkable concentration. For the first few years of his business life he did nothing but work, work, and save, save. He wrote regularly to his parents. Occasionally he would ask them if they needed a little money. The reply was that they were doing well enough; he was not to worry about them, but get himself established. He would then write back that he was straining every nerve, saving every cent, to get together some capital. As soon as he could use capital himself he could help them much better than now.

They wrote him every summer to make them a visit, but he replied that he never took a vacation; he was too busy. But he was forging ahead, being promoted rapidly. One day he received a letter from his mother asking if there was anything the matter with him—they had not heard from him for two months. Remington was astonished. He had not written for two months. He had been so busy that he had forgotten to write. He wrote at once and very penitently, explaining that all his time was required to open a new field in the business and it had absorbed all his attention. He promised that it should not occur again.

When Remington was twenty-five he had succeeded on two lines. He had saved money and made himself valuable. He was worth more than his money. The concern he was with offered to pay him each year five times the amount of his savings. He accepted and remained with it.

Remington sent his parents remittances from this time forward. But he never went to see them. He was too busy. At first he mailed the checks himself with an affectionate letter, but finally, having turned over his private matters to his clerk, they were always mailed by him on the first of the month with no letter at all.

The members of the firm were dying off, and Remington after awhile became managing partner. He was now so busy that he had no time whatever to write to his parents and never did so. But his clerk sent the remittances regularly. One day a man asked him something about his mother. He looked at the questioner dazed. For an instant he did not seem quite sure he had a mother. The next moment a pained expression passed over his face. But three men were waiting to ask instructions on some point pertaining to the business, and his attention was diverted.

Remington would not permit any one except himself to decide any question of great or small importance. It was not long before the other partners—they were now all juniors—discovered that his health was breaking down under the strain of too much work.

"What's the matter with him?" asked one of them of a doctor.

"He's a slave to detail, same as some one to liquor or drugs."

They remonstrated with the managing partner, but he would not listen to them. Something must be done.

One Sunday morning in early spring when Remington couldn't very well go to business one of his junior partners prevailed upon him to kill time till he might recommence the week's drive by going for a sail on a yacht.

Remington did not get off that yacht for six weeks. He had been kidnaped. He swore, he fumed, he threatened, all to no purpose. The yacht was headed for the island of Madeira, and he couldn't get ashore. Finally he gave himself up to the pleasant lazy surroundings, and the nervous furor that had been driving him on began to wear off when he reached Madeira and went into its tropical gardens filled with perfume exhaling plants. There he luxuriated in a sort of convalescence. He was ready to listen to reason. He signed a bond with $100,000 forfeit agreeing to divide the business into departments, appointing a manager for each, and solemnly pledging his word of honor not to interfere with any manager in any particular.

There was nothing to do in arranging the business in accordance with the agreement, for it was so arranged already. What was necessary was for Remington to leave each department to its manager. Therefore, on [illegible] the business going [illegible] as well as it had been under his personal supervision, he started to [illegible] people who did [illegible] when he [illegible] Remington [illegible]

TARIFF WILL BE MAIN QUESTION

PREPARING HIS ADDRESSES

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 29.—So far as President Taft himself is concerned the tariff will be the main issue of the 1912 campaign. While the president will speak on many subjects on his Western trip it is certain now that tariff revision will receive most of his attention.

Following his speech to the Essex County Republican club at Hamilton on Saturday the president began to prepare other speeches on the tariff. He secured copies of his veto message on the wool, farmers' free list and cotton bills and at once set to work upon addresses which he expects to deliver later, backing up those vetoes.

Mr. Taft is said to realize that he must not merely defend himself for having rejected these bills, but that he must attack the Democrats and progressive Republicans who put them through congress.

The attack upon the Democrats the president can make almost anywhere. It is understood the fight upon the progressives will be confined largely to their own territory. The president will carry the war West into the "enemy's country."

Attack Clearly Defined.

The nature of attack is pretty clearly defined already—it will be, in substance, that the progressives who voted for a tariff board should have been willing to wait for its report; that the revision bills the Democrats and progressives drew at the special session were "ill considered" and "badly drawn," and that great industries of the country should not be put in jeopardy by such legislation when revision, if recommended by the tariff board, might be expected anyway a few months later.

It is also probable that the president will promise tariff reform so far as he can bring it about at the next session of congress.

It is quite possible that the progressives will be under fire from the president also on the subject of reciprocity. The president has heard enough from Western congressmen to know that reciprocity is not popular in some states west of the Mississippi.

Of the other main topics already selected currency reform is admitted to be of great interest because of the idea that the proposed legislation may foreshadow a central bank. The president may talk extensively on this subject.

President Taft to Visit Twenty-four States.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 29.—Twenty-four states of the Union will be visited by President Taft on the swing around the circuit, according to a schedule partially completed at the executive offices. The president will start Sept. 15 and, with the exception of five states and Arizona and New Mexico, he will pass through every commonwealth west of the Mississippi.

Included in the twenty-four are Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Maryland.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Judge Harvey M. Trimble of Illinois was unanimously elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic when Colonel John McElroy of Washington, his opponent, ended a bitter contest by withdrawing from the race. On motion of Colonel McElroy the adjutant general cast one vote for Judge Trimble. The Sherman pension bill was endorsed.

Colonel Nicholas Day of New York city was elected senior vice commander. The election and installation of the officers and the selection of Los Angeles for the next encampment closed the encampment.

THEATER HORROR IN PENNSYLVANIA TOWN

Twenty-six Persons Killed and Many Injured in Panic.

Canonsburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—Crushed and mangled in a panic caused by the explosion of a moving picture film, twenty-six persons, chiefly boys and girls, were killed and sixty-eight injured in the Morgan Opera House here tonight.

A flash of flame, a cry of fire, a mad rush, in which men and women fought with each other and trampled down children—it was all over in a few minutes, leaving its awful toll of death and injury.

The moving picture cage was in the second gallery and the stairs were all inside, leading from the second to the first balcony and from that to the main floor. All of the occupants of the crowded house dashed for these stairs and instantly the jam at the main exit was solid. Those who had presence of mind enough to seek the fire escapes were not injured, but the majority joined in the wild rush for the stairs.

When the first rescuers made their way into the main entrance they confronted a solid wall of humanity, many of them dead, others terribly wounded. The cries of the women and children were awful to hear and half the men who started to their rescue were sickened by the horror. All the ambulances and vehicles within call were summoned to carry the dead and injured to an improvised morgue or to the hospitals. The fire caused no damage, being confined to the moving picture cage.

St. Paul, Aug. 29.—Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester in the department of agriculture, who stopped off in St. Paul on his way to Alaska, where he purposes to get first hand knowledge of that country's resources, declared that the development of that territory was going to be one of the two big questions before the next session of congress. Mr. Pinchot also came out in words of strong praise for Senator La Follette and made it plain that he favors the Wisconsin man for president in preference to Mr. Taft.

Let Dr. King's New Discovery cure you at home. "It cured me of lung trouble," writes W. R. Nelson, of Calamine, Ark., "when all else failed and I gained 47 pounds in weight. Foolhardy Snake Keeper.

The only fatal case of snake bite on record in the London zoological gardens was directly due to the foolishness of the victim. He was in charge of the snakes and, coming in one morning with some friends, began to boast of his power over the creatures and the extent to which they would submit to be played with by one whom they knew. This led to practical experiments. The overconfident keeper took an Indian cobra from its comfortable sleeping place and, declaring he was a snake charmer, proceeded to swing it about his head and play other tricks with it. A native snake charmer would have known there was no more certain way to rouse the snake's temper than this, for the race abhors rough handling or sudden movement of any sort. The result of the exploit was that the keeper was bitten on the nose. He was hurried off to the hospital, but died in a few hours.—London Globe.

The Dreadful Looking Person.

Rodin, the world famous French sculptor, has had a wonderful career, and, like most men who have risen from obscurity to fame, he still preserves much of the simplicity of his early days. One day he was entertaining a few artists, among them a German who had never before visited the sculptor. At dinner they were waited on by a particularly plain looking woman.

"I'm surprised," remarked the German during one of the woman's absences from the room, "that you should have such a very dreadful looking person about you. Why don't you get a nice, good looking young housekeeper?"

There was a sudden ghastly silence. Then Rodin smiled.

"I don't like to be waited on at meals by servants," he explained. "The dreadful looking person is my wife."

PLAYING A NEAR-SIGHTED MAN

By VERNON ARNOLD.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Major Ringold, commanding a three company post in the west at a time when the United States army consisted of 30,000 men and fought Indians, was a stickler for military precision. An officer in those days seldom rose to the rank of major before arriving at the age of forty, and Major Ringold was forty-five. Indeed, he was the father of a daughter aged twenty. Florence Ringold was, much to her father's chagrin, in love with a young lieutenant, Horace Tourtelotte, whose pay and commutation for fuel and quarters barely exceeded $1,300 a year, and that was all he had in the world to live on. Ringold, or, rather, his wife, was well off, and their daughter could afford to marry a poor man. But the girls who usually marry poor men are those who can't afford the luxury. Major Ringold was decidedly opposed to the match between his daughter and Lieutenant Tourtelotte. The consequence was that he hated the young man and was constantly on the watch for opportunities to put him in disgrace.

Lieutenant Tisdale of Company B resembled Tourtelotte, and the two were occasionally mistaken for each other. One day Tourtelotte, for some reason or other, found it essential to be absent from the post and applied for leave. It was his turn to be officer of the day, and this application was denied. He told Tisdale of his dilemma, who offered to act in his place. But the major refused to permit the adjutant to make the substitution.

"Go anyway," said Tisdale. "Old Ringold will never know the difference between you and me, and no one will report you."

The very next day Tisdale was walking across the parade ground, uniformed for officer of the day, when he saw the major coming. Tisdale diverged in his course; so did the major. The latter felt for his nearsighted glasses, but they were not in their accustomed place. Tisdale saw the motion and resolved to play a bold game. When the major came near him he saluted and was passing on, but the major stopped, stared at him and said:

"Mr. Tisdale, why are you acting as officer of the day? Mr. Tourtelotte was detailed."

"Why, major," said Tisdale, "what's the matter with your eyes?"

"My eyes! My eyes are all right, sir. What do you mean?"

"You're mistaken, major. But I'm often mistaken for Tisdale. Better eyes than yours have failed to recognize me for myself."

"Umph!" said the major, not being sure whether he was talking to Tisdale or Tourtelotte, and he passed on without another word.

The commandant was walking from his quarters while Tisdale was walking toward him. Tisdale hurried on and on the porch of the Ringold family quarters saw Florence.

"Miss Ringold," he said, "Tourtelotte is away without leave, and I'm doing his turn as officer of the day. I've just met your father and tried to make him believe I was Tourtelotte. Do you know where he keeps his glasses? If you do get hold of them and don't give them up."

"I'll hunt for them," said the girl and, going upstairs, saw the glasses on her father's dresser. She took them to her room and locked them in her jewel box.

She had scarcely done so when Ringold came back and began a hunt for his glasses. Not finding them, he called on every member of the family to help him. Miss Florence was assiduous in the search, but notwithstanding her efforts the glasses were not found.

"Go tell my orderly to send the officer of the day here," he said to his daughter.

The order was given, and in due time Tisdale appeared. Florence met him at the door and gave him confidence by telling him that the glasses were under lock and key. She stood chatting with him in the hall before he entered the mayor's presence, addressing him as Mr. Tourtelotte.

"Lieutenant," said the major, "I've sent for you to say that I'll go the grand rounds tonight."

"Yes, sir."

"I'll start at midnight. Keep the matter a secret. Report here at five minutes of 12 precisely."

"Yes, sir."

The major, who had really sent for the officer with a view of discovering if he were Tourtelotte, was staring at him while giving his instructions.

"The resemblance between you and Tisdale is remarkable," he said. "Flo, come in here."

Florence entered. A quick glance passed between her and Tisdale. It was an anxious glance.

"I'll bet you can't tell who that is, Flo," said her father.

"Who who is?"

"The officer of the day."

"What's the matter with you, father? Is your nearsightedness getting so bad that you can't distinguish Mr. Tourtelotte?"

"Oh, I only wished to test my eyesight. It's worrying me a good deal lately. That'll do, lieutenant. On second thoughts I won't go grand rounds tonight."

The major never knew how he had been deceived till his daughter had married Tourtelotte. Then he was told how she had stolen his glasses and the man she loved was saved from a court martial.

GOODBY

By FRED L. YOUNG

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When I was fourteen my mother took a little girl to live with us. She was a demure creature with flaxen hair and blue eyes. Her mother had been a bosom friend of my mother's and on her deathbed had begged mother to look out for her child. Violet—her name was Violet—was twelve years old when she came to our home, and she and I grew up together.

When I was seventeen I went to college. I was to remain there till the summer vacation. At the time of my departure Violet and I were on the eve of a change from childhood to youth. I no longer carried her in my arms over the brook nor put my cheek close to hers when we were reading out of the same book. On my departure for college I was at a loss what to do about the goodby. The day I left mother was not at home. She had been called to see a sick friend and had not returned.

"Violet," I said, "it's too bad mother is not here that I may say goodby to her. Mother never likes me to go anywhere without a kiss."

"Oh, but you can't give her a kiss if she's not here!"

"I might leave one for her."

"How could you leave her a kiss?"

"Why, I might kiss some one and that some one might give it to mother."

"You could do that, I suppose."

She stood looking at me perfectly innocent of what was coming.

"The next thing to decide," I went on, "is to whom shall I give the kiss for transmission?"

"I don't know anybody who would do."

"Except yourself."

The only reply to this was the dropping of two soft eyes to the floor.

"There's the carriage coming," I exclaimed. "Goodby."

I put one hand on her waist and, with the other under her dimpled chin, raised her face slightly and kissed her red lips. Then, going out to the carriage, I was driven away.

At the end of my first year I went home. Violet was not quite such a stripling as when I went away, but she was as innocent and modest as ever. Instead of looking me in the face she looked anywhere else. But I knew she was glad to see me.

"Violet," I said, "do you remember something I left with you for mother when I went to college?"

"Yes," she said in a very low voice.

"Did you give it to her?"

"No."

"What did you do with it?"

"Nothing."

"Do you think it honorable to keep anything left in your charge for another?"

I feigned to be so serious about it that the poor child more than half took me to be in earnest. Her lip began to tremble a little.

"The only thing you can do to redeem yourself," I added, "is to return it to me."

I bent over her and waited. She looked in my eyes to learn if I was in earnest and, not seeing anything there to the contrary, put up her lips, and I did the rest.

When I went away again in the autumn I told Violet that I wished to give her a chance to redeem herself for her last year's failure and in this way made a convenient excuse to kiss her goodby. I kept up the pretense that I was very much in earnest about it, and she was not sure enough of my not being in earnest to poohpooh the whole thing. So, leaving a special extra kiss for my mother, I went away again.

When I returned for the middle vacation of my college course I had a mustache, and, Violet, who had grown considerably, had her dresses pretty near down to the floor. An enormous rope of hair reached almost to her heels. She was getting too far advanced in the ways of the world for me to work the mother's kiss racket any longer, and I thought I must invent something else.

"I haven't given mother the kiss this year either," she said, smiling.

"You haven't!"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Why, you kissed her before you left."

"But the one I left with you was an extra."

"I know, but that made two for mother."

"Well?"

"Where did I come in?"

She looked at me archly, and I knew that the innocent period between childhood and youth had gone. She was a woman.

We played battledore and shuttlecock with the kiss during my vacation, and just before I returned to college I asked her if she would marry me when I had finished my college course. She replied that I had two more years in the academic department and since I was to study a profession three years must be added to that. Doubtless before that time had elapsed I should have been engaged several times. I protested that I would be true for a dozen or a hundred years for that matter, but she would promise nothing. However, she consented to take another kiss from me to my mother.

And so every year when I came back she said she had failed to give mother the kiss, and every time I went away I gave her another for the same purpose, and, when seven kisses had accumulated she consented.

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case."

A. L. Wilson, Sparta, Ill.

Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles'

are different from others. Many kinds of liver pills are "impossible" after one trial on account of their harshness. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills do not act by sheer force but in an easy, natural way, without griping or undue irritation. They are not habit forming.

If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return the price. Ask him.

SOCIALISM

Principles, Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only with these assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing or shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land alone does not satisfy human needs. Human labor creates machinery and applies it to the land for the production of raw materials and food. Whoever has control of land and machinery controls human labor, and with it human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man, its owner cannot dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wide circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

In proportion as the number of such owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

As the economic power of the ruling class grows it becomes less useful in the life of the nation. All the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the class whose only property is its manual and mental labor power—the wage worker—or of the class who have little land and little effective machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class on the one hand and the exploited propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order at the hands of the dominant class.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They suffer most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a few capitalists are permitted to control all the country's industrial resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of life the object of competitive private enterprise and speculation is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly used up, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climax of this system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

The capitalist class, in its mad race for profits, is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Captialism keeps the masses of workingmen in poverty, destitution, physicial exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

To maintain their rule over their fellow men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominant parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select the executives, bribe the legislature and corrupt the courts of justice. They own and censor the press. They dominate the educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has now become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage-working class, therefore, has the most direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society. The small farmer, who is to-day exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the allconquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage-workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective for private ownership of the land and means of production uesd for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within present capitalist society. The factory system, with its complex machinery and minute division of labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process. The great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have organized the work and management of the principal industries on a national scale, and have fitted them for collective use and operation.

There can be no absolute private title to land. All private titles, whether called fee simple or otherwise, are and must be subordinate to the public title. The Socialist Party strives to prevent land from being used for the purpose of exploitation and speculation. It demands the collective possession, control of management of land to whatever extent may be necessary to attain that end. It is not opposed to the occupation and possession of land by those using it in a useful and bona fide manner without exploitation.

The Socialist Party is primarily an economic and political movement. It is not concerned with matters of religious belief.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of all modern workers are identical. The struggle is not only national but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of all other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist Party. In this battle for freedom the Socialist Party does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist class rule, but by working class victory, to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

Platform.

The above are the principles of the National Socialist Party platform, adopted in May 1908, and it expresses perfectly the principles and aim of the Socialist Party.

It is, of course, impossible for us the Public Ownership Party of Thief River Falls, to attain a full realization of these ultimate aims in this city. But we nevertheless, pledge ourselves to work for all measures, calculated to strengthen the working class in their fight, for the realization of the co-operative Commonwealth, and to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression.

We pledge ourselves to work for:

First. Honesty, economy and efficency in the administration of the city's affairs.

Second. Eight hour working day, at ten hours pay for all workers engaged directly on municipal work.

Third. The abolition of the contract system on all municipal work.

Fourth. That the city extend the municipal ownership as much as practical and to this end we will work for, to establish publically owned coal and wood yards and also ice house to furnish these necessaries to the citizens at cost. Alsa the preseravtion of all municipal owned buildings, industries and resources.

Fifth. The establishment of a free employment agency, to be conducted by the police department.

Sixth. To give the city a more modern charter, insuring democracy in government, including direct legislation through the initiative and referendum, and the recall of officers by their constituents.

Seventh. In view of the fact that the liquor traffic has been more subjected to state and municipal regulations than any other capitalis institution, but is almost as unregulated as ever, and the clamor is for more regulations, without knowing, the simple truth that society can not regulate what it does not own. The Public Ownership Party maintains: That the profits derived from the liquor traffic is the cause of the evils of that traffic, and therefore, the only solution of the problem will be for society to own the distilliries, breweries and places where it is disposed off and to sell it to the public at cost, and then society will not be hindered by private interest in the regulations of that traffic. The masses will still have to learn that the escence of regulation is ownership, and when that is acquired, then the temperance work will be crowned with success. But this is a state issue more than a local one. Locally we pledge ourselves to work for the enforcement of the present laws—if such a thing be possible under our high license system.

Eight. Realizing that to preserve the health of the people of Thief River Falls, is of the utmost importance, we pledge ourselves to work for the establishment of all sanitary measures possible. To this end we will first; do away with the present method of disposing of the refuse of the city and establish more modern methods. Second, to co-operate with the citizens for beautifying the city. Third, to secure efficient hospital accommodation.

Ninth. We pledge every candidate that runs for office on the Public Ownership ticket to sign his resignation from office before election, dated blank and to be placed in the hands of the Public Ownership Party.

Tenth. It is not claimed that by winning an issolated victory in a city like Thief River Falls, we can have the collective ownership of production and distribution, i. e. Socialism. But such a victory would be a step forward, a milestone on the way of human progress.

HAS NEW OFFICE

C. W. McDaniel, the real estate man who moved here this spring from Osakis and had his office temporarlly with Bakke Bros., on Third St. has now rented the building at 217½ LaBree Ave., formerly occupied by the Huseth barber shop, and will soon move into and use it as a real estate office. The office is now being papered and painted, so as to make itone of the neatest and most pleasant offices in the city. Mr. McDaniel has been with us but a short time, but during this time he has shown that he intends to stay, is here for business, is getting the business, and is trying all the time to get what we most need—actual settlers for our vast farming country.

NEWS FROM STATE FAIR

Press Representative tells How Farmers League Was organized.

The persistent rainy weather has made it impossible to carry out the race track program. Large crowds have attended the fair and have examined the different exhibits all the more carefully because of the rather inclement weather. The different exhibit buildings are none too large when the weather turns rainy and all at the grounds instinctively turn to the buildings, thinking to examine their contents while the weather is so wet. Yet it must be written that the state fair is very much better housed now than it was some eight years ago, when the writer last visited it. New, replaced, and enlarged buildings have transformed the entire grounds—all for the better. The fair itself is becoming more and more educative in its nature and to get full benefit of the exhibits one needs the better part of a week, to say the least. No one can see the fair of Minnesota any more in one day, no matter how assiduously he may work. He can only see some particular line in which he may be interested.

To-day (Wednesday) was farmers' day and they held out in Institute Hall, where they met to consider organization for political purposes, pursuant to a call by P. V. Collins of the Northwestern Agriculturist.

A large crowd was there in answer to the call and their meeting was the main feature of the day. Many of those present had come to the fair because of this meeting.

The meeting, after being called to order by P. V. Collins, opened with the singing of America, Band music by the Warren band and finally the singing of the State song.

Mr. Collins then spoke at some length on the purpose of the meeting and the need of organization among farmers. He said both the large parties in congress had "sold the farmers" and that it was therefore necessary for them to organize and introduce "team-work." He said the farmers were only asking for "rights inherent in citizenship" when they demanded a fair and square deal. He said he had been warned not to array farmers against the cities; class against class; but he denied that he had done so, saying it was the representation of the cities and of the big interests that had done so by their attitude toward the farmer.

Mr. Wilkinson was chosen temporary chairman, with Mr. Collins as secretary.

In his acceptance speech Mr. Wilkinson scored President Taft for his inconsistencies in demanding expert tariff sanction to the wool list and farmers free-list bills when he had considered no such thing necessary in drawing the Canadian Reciprocity agreement. Nay, in doing this latter he had not even consulted a single farmer—though their interests were most largely to be affected by the proposed agreement.

Other speakers heard were: Mr. Meehan of Farmers' Alliance fame; Gov. A. O. Eberhart, Congressman S. M. Anderson, Henry Feig and others.

After some debate it was decided to perfect organization at this meeting. The temporary organizations were made permanent, a constitution and by-laws were drawn up by a committee consisting of Feig, Morle and Spencer. This was gone thru article by article and after some amendments accepted by almost unanimous votes on every article as amended.

The name adopted for the organization was: The Farmers' League of Minnesota. It is to be non-partizan and yet political. The farmers henceforth will support only such for office as will see to it that they get a square deal.

The annual meetings of the league will be held in connection with the state fair every year. County and township organizations are to be effected thruout the state, and every congressional district will have a member on the executive committee, of which committee the officers are ex-officio members.

The initiation fee is $1.00 with an annual fee of $1.00.

This is the answer the Northwestern farmer gives to Taft's brand of reciprocity. Much enthusiasm and great determination was manifested. It was plainly to be seen that the Governor need not look long for anti-Taft sentiment in that bunch. Great unanimity of sentiment prevailed throughout the meeting and the esteem Mr. Collins has won among the farmers by his courageous fight against reciprocity was almost marvelous.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

James A. Edgerton compares the old plan of city government with the new system of city government by commission thus:

The Old Plan

Each officer has power to block the other officers. They call it "checks and balances." Each officer blames the next if you complain.

Needs a "boss" to hold the ramshackle together.

Citizenship is a learned profession.

Government by politicians instead of government by the people—oligarchy instead of democracy.

Good officials getting no credit.

The New Plan

Nobody they can blame but themselves if you complain.

No lost motion—no pulling and hauling.

Conspicuous responsibility.

A short ballot.

Every citizen easily masters his job on election day, makes up his own ticket and knows what he is doing.

Politicians out of business—no need for them.

No confusion, no obscurity, no chance for rascals to slip through at election time without detection.

Nonpartisan ballot.

Nominations all by petition.

The people without any moral revolution or sacrifice of earning power, sitting comfortably in the boss' chair.

Officials give good government because that's the way to keep popular.

Initiative, referendum and recall for emergencies.

Making It Easy.

Doctor—Take this medicine after each meal. Patient—But my meals come unreg'lar, doc. Doctor—Well, take it before each meal.—Toledo Blade.

Eight. Realizing that to preserve the health of the people of Thief River Falls, is of the utmost importance, we pledge ourselves to work for the establishment of all sanitary measures possible. To this end we will first; do away with the present method of disposing of the refuse of the city and establish more modern methods. Second, to co-operate with the citizens for beautifying the city. Third, to secure efficient hospital accommodation.

Ninth. We pledge every candidate that runs for office on the Public Ownership ticket to sign his resignation from office before election, dated blank and to be placed in the hands of the Public Ownership Party.

Tenth. It is not claimed that by winning an issolated victory in a city like Thief River Falls, we can have the collective ownership of production and distribution, i. e. Socialism. But such a victory would be a step forward, a milestone on the way of human progress.

HAS NEW OFFICE

C. W. McDaniel, the real estate men who moved here this spring from Osakis and had his office temporarily with Bakke Bros., on Third St. has now rented the building at 217½ LaBree Ave., formerly occupied by the Huseth barber shop, and will soon move into and use it as a real estate office. The office is now being papered and painted, so as to make itone of the neatest and most pleasant offices in the city. Mr. McDaniel has been with us but a short time, but during this time he has shown that he intends to stay, is here for business, is getting the business, and is trying all the time to get what we most need—actual settlers for our vast farming country.

Press Representative tells How Farmers League Was organized.

The persistent rainy weather has made it impossible to carry out the race track program. Large crowds have attended the fair and have examined the different exhibits all the more carefully because of the rather inclement weather. The different exhibit buildings are none too large when the weather turns rainy and all at the grounds instinctively turn to the buildings, thinking to examine their contents while the weather is so wet. Yet it must be written that the state fair is very much better housed now than it was some eight years ago, when the writer last visited it. New, replaced, and enlarged buildings have transformed the entire grounds—all for the better. The fair itself is becoming more and more educative in its nature and to get full benefit of the exhibits one needs the better part of a week, to say the least. No one can see the fair of Minnesota any more in one day, no matter how assiduously he may work. He can only see some particular line in which he may be interested.

To-day (Wednesday) was farmers' day and they held out in Institute Hall, where they met to consider organization for political purposes, pursuant to a call by P. V. Collins of the Northwestern Agriculturist.

A large crowd was there in answer to the call and their meeting was the main feature of the day. Many of those present had come to the fair because of this meeting.

The meeting, after being called to order by P. V. Collins, opened with the singing of America, Band music by the Warren band and finally the singing of the State song.

Mr. Collins then spoke at some length on the purpose of the meeting and the need of organization among farmers. He said both the large parties in congress had "sold the farmers" and that it was therefore necessary for them to organize and introduce "team-work." He said the farmers were only asking for "rights inherent in citizenship" when they demanded a fair and square deal. He said he had been warned not to array farmers against the cities; class against class; but he denied that he had done so, saying it was the represenation of the cities and of the big interests that had done so by their attitude toward the farmer.

Mr. Wilkinson was chosen temporary chairman, with Mr. Collins as secretary.

In his acceptance speech Mr. Wilkinson scored President Taft for his inconsistencies in demanding expert tariff sanction to the wool list and farmers free-list bills when he had considered no such thing necessary in drawing the Canadian Reciprocity agreement. Nay, in doing this latter he had not even consulted a single farmer—though their interests were most largely to be affected by the proposed agreement.

After some debate it was decided to perfect organization at this meeting. The temporary organizations were made permanent, a constitution and by-laws were drawn up by a committee consisting of Feig, Morken and Spencer. This was gone thru article by article and after some amendments accepted by almost unanimous votes on every article as amended.

The name adopted for the organization was: The Farmers' League of Minnesota. It is to be non-partizan and yet political. The farmers henceforth will support only such for office as will see to it that they get a square deal.

The annual meetings of the league will be held in connection with the state fair every year. County and township organizations are to be effected thruout the state, and every congressional district will have a member on the executive committee, of which committee the officers are ex-officio members.

The initiation fee is $1.00 with an annual fee of $1.00.

This is the answer the Northwestern farmer gives to Taft's brand of reciprocity. Much enthusiasm and great determination was manifested. It was plainly to be seen that the Governor need not look long for anti-Taft sentiment in that bunch. Great unanimity of sentiment prevailed throughout the meeting and the esteem Mr. Collins has won among the farmers by his courageous fight against reciprocity was almost marvelous.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

James A. Edg[illegible] compares the old plan of city government with the new system of city government by commission thus:

The Old Plan

Each officer has power to block the other officers. They call it "checks and balances." Each officer blames the next if you complain.

Needs a "boss" to hold the ramshackle together.

Citizenship is a learned profession.

Government by politicians instead of government by the people—oligarchy instead of democracy.

Good officials getting no credit.

The New Plan

Nobody they can blame but themselves if you complain.

No lost motion—no pulling and hauling.

Conspicuous responsibility.

A short ballot.

Every citizen easily masters his job on election day, makes up his own ticket and knows what he is doing.

Politicians out of business—no need for them.

No confusion, no obscurity, no chance for rascals to slip through at election time without detection.

Nonpartisan ballot.

Nominations all by petition.

The people without any moral revolution or sacrifice of earning power, sitting comfortably in the boss' chair.

Officials give good government because that's the way to keep popular.

Initiative, referendum and recall for emergencies.

Making It Easy.

SOCIALISM

Principles. Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only with these assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing or shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land alone does not satisfy human needs. Human labor creates machinery and applies it to the land for the production of raw materials and food. Whoever has control of land and machinery controls human labor, and with it human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man, its owner cannot dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wide circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

In proportion as the number of such owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

As the economic power of the ruling class grows it becomes less useful in the life of the nation. All the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the class whose only property is its manual and mental labor power—the wage worker—or of the class who have little land and little effective machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class on the one hand and the exploited propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order at the hands of the dominant class.

The wage workers [illegible]

[illegible] most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They suffer most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a few capitalists are permitted to control all the country's industrial resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of life the object of competitive private enterprise and speculation is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly used up, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climax of this system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

The capitalist class, in its mad race for profits, is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Capitalism keeps the masses of workingmen in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

[illegible] vital issue before the American people. The wage working class, therefore, has the most direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society. The small farmer, who is to-day exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer, the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the allconquering power of concentrated capital, and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built, political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage-workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective for private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within present capitalist society. The factory system, with its complex machinery and minute division of labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process. The great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have organized the work and management of the principal industries on a national scale, and have fitted them for collective use and operation [illegible]

[illegible] rule but by working class victory, to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

Platform.

The above are the principles of the National Socialist Party platform, adopted in May 1908, and it expresses perfectly the principles and aim of the Socialist Party.

It is of course impossible for us the Public Ownership Party of Thief River Falls, to attain a full realization of these ultimate aims in this city. But we nevertheless, pledge ourselves to work for all measures, calculated to strengthen the working class in their fight, for the realization of the co-operative Commonwealth, and to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression.

We pledge ourselves to work for:

First. Honesty, economy and efficiency in the administration of the city affairs.

Second. Eight hour working day at ten hours pay for all workers engaged directly on municipal work.

Third. The abolition of the contract system on all municipal work.

Fourth. That the city extend the municipal ownership as much as practical and to this end we will work for, to establish publically owned coal and wood yards and also ice house to furnish these necessaries to the citizens at cost. Alsa the preservation of all municipal owned buildings, industries and resources.

Sixth. To give the city a more modern charter, insuring democracy in government, including direct legislation through the initiative and referendum, and the recall of officers by their constituents.

Seventh. In view of the fact that the liquor traffic has been more subjected to state and municipal regulations than any other capitalis institution but is almost as unregulated as ever, and the clamor is for more regulations, without knowing the simple truth that society can not regulate what it does not own. The Public Ownership Party maintains [illegible]

[illegible] first, do away with the present method of disposing of the refuse of the city and establish more modern methods. Second, to co-operate with the citizens for beautifying the city. Third, to secure efficient hospital accommodation [illegible]

THE UNEMPLOYED

The annual convention of the Unemployed, booked next week for Washington, will provoke the contemptuous sneer from the prosperous citizen that all these men could find work if they wanted it.

One thousand members, it is announced, are to walk from Baltimore to Washington to attend.

The fake side of unemployment is suggested by the recent remark credited to the manager of the leading employment house in Chicago; "No able bodied man need want work more than a short time. Every day in the year I have applications for men that simply go to waste because I can't fill them. Ninety per cent of the unemployed don't want to work."

B. C. Marsh, secretary of the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children, recently studied 112 "unemployed men." He found that 106 had given up one or more jobs in six months. Employment was secured for 31, but only six of these men stuck to their work. Forty five men, when they learned that work was being sought for them, suddenly disappeared. Mr. Marsh put on old clothes one day, and tramped the streets looking for work. He was offered 16 jobs.

The starting of public enterprises for the purpose of furnishing employment is not wholly a success. An English report on such an institution states that men would give up jobs paying 20 shillings per week to take public jobs for the unemployed paying 5 to 7 shillings a week for part time.

The above, however, is not the whole picture. The number of people who have been physically enfeebled by child labor is far greater than we suppose. A host of men 25 to 30 years old find all their vitality sapped by the strain of toil at an age when they should have been at school and vegetating in the open air. Who can blame them if their blood flows cold and pale, if they have no heart for the industry that cheers the normal man.

The Light of Crystals.

All diamonds do not shine in the dark after exposure to sunlight or electric light, but some do to a remarkable degree. A diamond rubbed with a woolen cloth or against a hard surface will sometimes shine brilliantly. The emission of light is a property belonging to many if not all kinds of crystals.

A variety of white marble found at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., gives out a flame colored glow when pounded and bright flashes when scratched with steel. In northern New York is found a kind of stone known locally as "hell fire rock," which exhibits bright sulphur colored streaks when scratched in the dark. Pieces of rose quartz rubbed together exhibit brilliant flashes, sometimes bright enough to illuminate the hands of the person holding them. Smoked quartz and other varieties sometimes show a similar phenomenon. — Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Lively.

Anna Maria Wilhelmina Pickering, in her memoirs, edited by her son, tells a Yorkshire incident which contains a great deal of human nature. Variety spices life. The plan is monotonous until its extent entitles it to the name of prairie or desert and it gains interest through vastness.

There was an old couple in the village whom I used often to go to see. One day when I found them sitting, one on each side of the fire, the old man said to me:

"Well, t'missis and me, we've been married nigh on fifty years, and we've never had one quarrel."

The old woman looked at me with a twinkle in her eye and said:

"It war varie conscientious, but varie dool."

The Bloody Hand.

The noted English family of the Holtes has for its badge a bloody hand, and this sinister badge commemorates a wager that ended in a crime. Sir Thomas Holte one day in 1612 was hunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once. When he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together with his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into the kitchen, seized a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

An Eskimo's Dwelling.

We do not look for any great amount of inventive genius among the Eskimos, but for years they have employed a rather complete respirator, used in the preparation and taking of a vapor bath, as a means of protection from the dense smoke. This Eskimo respirator is a little basket woven of twisted strands of fine grass. It is placed with its shallow side against the mouth, and a wooden peg, which arises from the center of the basket, is held between the teeth. For this purpose water is evaporated over a big fire in a very low hut, which is tightly closed to keep in the heat. In this stifling atmosphere the employment of a respirator is absolutely necessary.—London [illegible]

Wild Parrots Are Fighters.

Parrots when in their native wilds live in flocks and guard themselves by a complete police system which enables them to marshal their collective force quickly when any animal or bird attacks one of their number. They seem to be disciplined and trained in fighting together, and all other birds and animals are afraid to attack a parrot unless the bird can be caught alone. Even then a shrill call summons the parrot army to the rescue. It is said that in the forests all parrots die of old age and that none is ever killed by birds of prey or other wild animals.

St. Martin and the Dictionary.

St. Martin when he divided his cape with a naked beggar at the gate of Amiens gave also two words to the English language. The oratory in which this torn cape was preserved as a sacred banner acquired the name of "chapelle" (from the French "chape"), the custodian being termed "chaplain," and thus our English words "chapel" and "chaplain" are derived.—Westminster Gazette.

Good Elderberry Wine

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

One summer's day in the long ago, when you could meet a lightning rod outfit at every five miles on the highway, one of the craft drove into the town of Plainfield. In showing off his fine horses he ran over a hog, and the hog limped squealing away. It was nothing to make a fuss over, and none would have been made if the hog hadn't belonged to Elder Carpenter.

The elder was a solemn, severe man. He happened to be passing at the time the animal was run over, and he caught a laugh and an oath from the lips of the man of lightning. What does he do but go before a justice and swear out a warrant for malicious injury to a hog. An arrest and trial followed. Of course the lightning rod man testified on his own behalf that no malice existed. He and the elder's hog had never met before. He was driving up to the hotel in a fancy way to show off before the loafers sitting on the veranda, and the hog was unseen until too late.

At the conclusion of the trial the lightning rod man told the elder and about forty others what he thought of them, their town and their fathers and mothers before them, and there was a fight, in which he got badly banged up and driven out of town. Of course he wanted to get even. You must know that there is a fellow feeling between men who are skinning the public, and it was quite natural that the elder's victim should select a tin peddler as his instrument for carrying out his plan.

A shallow river runs through Plainfield. At that time its banks were lined for a mile up and down with elderberry bushes. Toward the last of August the clusters of berries were a sight to see. One could gather a wagonload in half a day. One day a tin peddler stopped to gather a couple of bushels. In answer to inquiries he stated that he was going to make elderberry wine after a recipe brought from China by a missionary. Your mother, if she lived in the country, used to make wine of these berries, but only in limited quantity. It isn't the beverage to make one enthuse. There was considerable talk about the tin peddler and his Chinese recipe, and an excitement followed. He returned to Plainfield with a twenty gallon keg of new wine, and wanted to form a syndicate for gathering the berries and making the wine. He had with him a letter purporting to come from a large wine house and offering him $8 a gallon for all the elderberry wine he could ship.

Six hundred dollars was the cash capital wanted for a press and building and to pay for the gathering. The dividends for the season would be 100 per cent. There was no hayseed in the hair of the population of Plainfield. The peddler's talk sounded all right, but the people said he must show them before they invested. That was why that twenty gallon keg was placed on the tavern veranda, and the public asked to help themselves. Elder Carpenter was a temperance man right down to refusing ginger beer, but he saw no hurt in manufacturing a good brand of elderberry wine and selling it for medicinal purposes.

It was three hours before the keg was empty, and by that time it was the universal verdict that the peddler was a "goo' fel'r" and that the town stood ready to invest not $600, but $600,000,000, in his enterprise. They would buy 6,000 presses. They would gather 60,000 loads of berries. It was in the midst of the greatest good feeling and general hilarity that the town blacksmith said that Elder Carpenter was a hog himself for making the lightning rod man trouble over the other hog. The elder promptly replied that the smith was a born liar and started the row. The peddler made for the tavern barn and hid away, but his example was not followed. Every man got the idea that it was his duty to wade into some other man, and for an hour there was fighting up and down the streets. Fathers whanged away at sons, and brother punched brother. The three local ministers butted in as peacemakers and were early left stranded in the dust.

There were a few men in the town who did not get black eyes and bloody noses and lumpy heads, but they were the old men who had had their fun in other days and were now willing to let the younger generation go in and whoop 'er up. It was these old men who assisted the women when it came to poultices and bandages and to wheeling home those who could not walk.

Only two men knew what was in that keg, and they never told. It may have been Chinese elderberry wine according to missionary recipe, or it may have been a mixture of whisky, brandy, gin, wine and drugs. At any rate, the "feeling" lasted two whole days, and there were fights almost daily for the next fortnight. It was a month later that the lightning rod man came driving up to the tavern again. This time he ran over two hogs instead of one. Elder Carpenter was passing again, but he did not stop or turn. He simply uttered an "um" and held his way. There was the usual crowd on the veranda, but they crossed their legs, spat their tobacco juice over the railing and were mum. The town had been struck by lightning and didn't want any more of it. It didn't even want the empty keg the peddler had left behind him in his flight.

A Narrow Escape From State Prison

By SAMUEL E. BRANT

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I was cashier for Richard Steptoe & Co. I had the safe combination and was implicitly trusted by the head of the firm. The amount of cash in the safe varied. Sometimes there would not be $10, sometimes there would be $1,000, and occasionally when a large amount of currency would come in after banking hours it must be kept overnight there. At such times I was always troubled, for the safe was an old pattern and the lock out of date.

I always counted the cash in the safe, night and morning. One morning my cash did not correspond with what had been there the night before by $20. I thought that I must have made a mistake in my count the night before, but on balancing my cash I could detect no error. Fearing that something was wrong with me, I said nothing about the missing money, but, being sure that my cash balance was right, made up the deficiency from my own pocket.

Within a week I missed another amount from the safe. This time it was $15, a smaller sum than before, but the amount in the safe was much smaller than before. It now became evident that some one not an outsider had the lock combination and was helping himself whenever in need of ready cash. I feared it might be one of the clerks who was tempted. I shrank from being the means of sending any one, especially one I knew well, to prison, so I went to Mr. Steptoe and told him that I thought we should have a new safe or at least a new lock. The matter was compromised by a safe and lock workman changing the combination.

What was my astonishment ten days later to miss another $10. I had been given the combination by the man who had changed it. He had not even spoken it. I had handed him a slip of paper on which he had written it and handed it back to me. There was something uncanny about these disappearances. I am no more superstitious than other fairly educated people, but I couldn't momentarily resist the feeling that a ghost was helping himself to the cash.

Still, I didn't report the matter. I had a dread that I should get some of my fellow employees into trouble or that I should discover that something had gone wrong with myself. After thinking about the matter a good deal I found that I couldn't add a column of figures twice with the same result. I called on my doctor and told him that I suspected my mind was giving way. He recommended me to take a vacation. I didn't take his advice, not liking to leave the safe to any one else during my absence.

I thought of watching the safe nights, but I couldn't watch every night, and there was no knowing when a robbery would occur. Sometimes several weeks would elapse between them. But after I had made up a hundred dollars from my own pocket I began to think I had better take measures to stop the leak.

One day, when one of the clerks, George Simpson, came for his salary, I noticed while he was signing the receipt slip that the end of the forefinger of his right hand was covered with the finger end of a kid glove.

"Cut your finger?" I asked.

"No; burned it."

The next week when this young man, Simpson, came to draw his salary he still wore the covering on his finger. When I remarked upon it I detected a look of uneasiness cross his face. I didn't think much about it, however, but when another week had passed and I still noticed the kid covering I began to wonder about the finger.

"Not healed yet?" I asked.

"No; I guess my blood must be in a bad state."

"Let me see it."

He took off the covering. The tip of his finger looked as if the skin had been taken off and had not grown again. I made no remark, but took the receipt he had signed and filed it.

At a time when no money had been missed for a space of twelve days I made up my mind to watch the safe nights. I couldn't remain awake every night in succession, so I took a bookkeeper, Travers, into the secret, and we started in to watch alternately. I took first watch, Travers second. On the fourth night, it being my turn, about 11 o'clock I heard a key put in the lock of the office door. Some one came in stealthily, and I could hear the tread toward the safe. Pretty soon I heard a faint sound like a tumbler falling in a lock. I waited awhile and heard another, then another, until I had heard four. My position was behind a desk over which was an electric light. Hearing the safe door swing open, I switched on the light. There was a man reaching into the safe. He turned pale as a sheet and faced me. I went to him. He was Simpson.

"I wasn't taking anything out. I was putting it back," he gasped, holding out his hand with some bills in it."

"Simpson," I said, "you're a fool."

"I know it."

"I have known of this for a long time. Tell me how you did it."

"I pared the skin of my forefinger down to the quick, making it so sensitive that I can feel the tumblers fall.

I breathed a sigh of relief. He was returning all he had taken. I did not report the matter, and he has never again taken such a risk at money borrowing. He had a narrow escape from a wrecked life.

Purse Versus Passport In Russia.

Should a citizen of the United States attempt to enter Russia without a passport he would be turned back at the frontier. Should he arrive in Russian waters he will not be permitted to disembark until he has produced the necessary document, properly vised by a Russian consular or diplomatic officer. Indeed, the mere possession of an American passport is not sufficient, for the regulations of the Russians prescribe that the credential must be vised before the frontier is crossed. Better to lose one's purse than one's passport in Russia. Funds may be cabled for and received in the course of a few hours, but it is a question of weeks where a passport is concerned. Russian officials are usually courteous to American visitors who do not display too much curiosity about certain unspeakable Russian institutions, but let them find a traveler in the interior without a passport and the luckless one will speedily see the inside of a Russian jail, and sooner or later be conducted to the nearest point of the frontier.—Travel Magazine.

Astronomical Facts.

The diameter of the sun is reckoned at 882,000 miles. This diameter, owing to its loss of heat and the consequent condensation, is steadily being shortened, though at a very slow rate, of course. The whole solar system—the sun and all of its planets—is moving through space at a pace estimated at about 150,000,000 of miles annually. Those who are supposed to know about the matter assure us that, owing to certain causes, too numerous and complicated to be dealt with in this place, the planet on which we live receives only the 2,250-millionth part of the heat that is thrown off by the sun. Even as it is the earth receives annually from the sun an amount of heat that exceeds by a million times the heat producible by the combustion of 280,000,000 tons of coal.—New York American.

Thackeray's First Poem.

Thackeray's momentous first appearance in print was a satirical poem, published in the Western Luminary during one of the happy holiday times which he spent in Devonshire when still a scholar at the Charterhouse. A certain Mr. Lalor Sheil was to have delivered a speech upon Penendon heath, but the crowd refused to hear him. He had taken the precaution, however, to send copies of his intended oration to all the leading journals before leaving town, and these, of course, printed it. This ludicrous incident inspired Thackeray to write a little jeu d'esprit entitled "Irish Melody," telling how "Mister Sheil" when the men of Kent "began a grievous shouting" found comfort in reflecting:

> "My speech is safe in the Times I wot
> And eke in the Morning Chronicle."

Cats In Ancient Wales.

An ancient statute ascribed to Howel the Good, a Welsh prince, who ruled in 948, regulated the price of cats. A penny was the price of a kitten before its eyes were open, twopence until it had caught its first mouse and four pence when it was old enough for combat. He who stole a cat from the royal granaries forfeited either a milk ewe, with its fleece and lamb, or as much wheat as would cover the body of the cat suspended by its tail, with its nose touching the ground. A penny was a coin of great purchasing power in the tenth century.

The Eternal Feminine.

From the fresco paintings of women in the Cretan palaces of the period about 2000 B. C. it is learned that the women of that time pinched in their waists, had flounced or accordion skirts, wore an elaborate coiffure on their heads, shoes with high heels and hats which might have come from a Parisian hat shop, while one woman might be described as wearing a jupe culotte.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake county is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this coming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

LAUNCH IS SUNK BY BIG STEAMER

Accident at Toledo, O., Costs Lives of Seven Men.

Toledo, O., Sept. 3.—Seven men were drowned in the Maumee river when the thirty-five-foot launch Nemo, owned by Michael Mayer, was struck by the 500-foot freighter, Phillip Minch, inbound for the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton docks. The drowned are:

The party was bound for Kelley's island, where they expected to do some bass fishing over the Labor day holiday. With the exception of Michael Mayer, owner of the launch, all were drowned. Mayer was saved by members of the crew of the Minch. None of the bodies have been recovered.

Captain Cummings of the Minch says that the wheelman was throwing the searchlight across the river channel, looking for channel stakes, when they first espied the launch, which he thought was a mile and a half distant. The launch was then 150 feet out of the course of the channel to the westward.

The steamer blew the danger signals, but before the launch could change its course the freighter crashed into the small boat, capsizing it and throwing the occupants into the water.

WANTSGOVERNMENTCONTROL

Secretary Fisher's Plan for Development of Alaska Coal Lands.

Cordova, Alaska, Aug. 31.—In a talk to a number of prominent citizens Secretary of the Interior Fisher declared that, in his opinion, the coal of Alaska should not be turned over to private interests for exploitation.

Two plans for prompt and wise development of the coal lands present themselves, he said. One contemplated the government leasing the lands to private individuals under terms which will permit the government to control the lands; the other, he said, proposes direct government operation of the coal lands and the sale of the coal to people at cost.

STORM DAMAGE FULLY A MILLION

Charleston Suffered Immense Loss by Storm.

CITIZENS REPAIRING HAVOC

Much of the Debris Has Been Removed, but Danger of Pestilence Has Not Passed.

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 1.—"Dry out, clean up, disinfect and repair" is the watchword in storm stricken Charleston. Mayor Rhett, having hurried from New York on hearing of the hurricane, has taken the helm and is directing the work of rehabilitation. The death list has reached seventeen and the property damage is conservatively estimated at $1,000,000.

Reports are getting in from the exposed sea islands, where only two lives were lost on James island, but the property damage is very heavy. It is said by planters that long staple cotton and rice have been almost wiped out. Houses have been wrecked and cattle and live stock killed. Roadways are impassible, as the bridges have gone and trees have been felled.

First reports of damage at the Isle of Palms, a resort directly on the ocean nine miles from here, were exaggerated. Buildings were not as seriously damaged as believed. In Charleston things are approaching the normal with splendid progress. The railroads, though their yards are crippled, are giving much better train service for passengers and freight.

The trolley cars are running on all the city lines and the cars on the seashore division will be in operation regularly shortly. The telephone company reports most of its system in working order. Electric light and power service is being rapidly extended over the city.

Much of the storm debris has been removed and all the streets are clear. The board of health is imploring householders to get their premises sanitary without delay, citing the danger of sickness from continuance of present conditions. The damage about Beaufort and Port Royal is placed at $1,000,000. There was no loss of human life in that section.

FOUR KILLED; FORTY INJURED

Passenger and Freight Trains In Collision on the Erie Road.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 5.—Four persons were killed and at least forty others were injured in a collision between an Erie and Pittsburgh passenger train and a Lake Shore freight train at Dock Junction, four miles west of here.

The collision occurred while the freight train was backing onto a sidetrack to allow the passenger train, running thirty minutes late, to pass on the main line.

A relief train was hurried to the scene of the disaster in response to a telephone call, but before it reached there the entire wreck was a mass of flames. The four dead had been pinned under the wreckage. Their bodies have not been recovered.

TAFT TALKS TO LAWYERS

Denounces Recall and Suggests More Pay for Judges.

Boston, Sept. 1.—Addressing the members of the American Bar association, in convention here, President Taft urged the lawyers to take up the work of reform in judicial procedure; denounced the recall as applied to the judiciary and urged the adoption of the arbitration treaties negotiated with France and Great Britain.

The president's remarks were greeted with enthusiasm by the 800 lawyers. The greatest demonstration came when the president advocated increase of salaries for federal judges from $15,000 to $25,000 a year, and when he referred to the recall as a "wild theory."

RAILWAY STRIKE SEEMS CERTAIN

Illinois Central President Refuses to Meet Union Leaders.

PLACES BLAME ON THE MEN

Letter From President Markham Says There Are Contracts In Existence With Some of the Unions and Hopes the Men Will Live Up to Them. Believes Public Opinion Will Be With the Railway.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—President Markham of the Illinois Central railroad ended hopes of an immediate settlement of the labor difficulties of the road by directing a letter to W. F. Kramer, secretary of the Blacksmith's International union, refusing to meet the representatives of the federated shop employes as had been requested.

The letter, from the reports of the nine international unions involved, and to which Mr. Markham's communication was a reply, was considered by labor men here to be in the nature of an ultimatum.

The unions asked that Markham meet the employes of the road as represented by the system's federation.

President J. F. McCreery of the federation will meet the nine international officers and a decision as to future action by the union will be reached.

The union representatives intimated that their plans already had been made. President McCreery issued a statement that the nine crafts in the federation had turned matters over to the international officers and will await action by them.

The letter from President Markham of the road to Secretary Kramer, representing the international union officials, is as follows:

Text of Markham's Letter.

"As has been repeatedly stated to yourself and associates present at meetings with Mr. Park and myself there are in existence certain contracts between the Illinois Central railroad and seven of the organizations represented. Never before in the history of our dealings with labor organizations have we been asked to change contracts except in the usual manner provided therein, viz: That the thirty days' formal notice which has always been regarded as an essential feature of the same be given.

"The required thirty days' notice not having been given in the manner provided in each of the different contracts we regard them as still in effect and must again decline to enter into negotiations with other agencies for the purpose of making changes therein.

"The paramount interest in this controversy is that of the shipping and traveling public and, being convinced that it is the ultimate purpose of the federation to consolidate railroad service employes into one organization, the management does not feel that public opinion would sustain it in entering into an agreement which would place in the hands of one body the power to throttle the commerce of the country.

"Neither does it believe that the same public opinion will sustain any action which will result in disruption of the harmonious relations that have heretofore existed between the Illinois Central and its employes.

"You will, of course, take whatever action you may consider advisable for the protection of your respective organizations. If you will permit me to say it, it is my opinion that you can take no action that will afford any better protection than to advise them to live up to their contracts with this company just as it has always lived up to its contracts with them. If any other course is pursued and the trouble results the responsibility is yours, not ours."

INDIAN PRINCE IS DEAD

Nizam of Hyderabad, Descendant of Ancient Family, Passes Away.

Hyderabad, British India, Sept. 5.—Asaf Jah Nizam-ul-Mulk, the Nizam of Hdyerabad and the premier prince of the Indian empire, died here. He was born Aug. 18, 1866, and succeeded his father, the Nizam Aful-ul-Daula, on the latter's death, Feb. 26, 1869.

The late Nizam belonged to a family of great antiquity and importance among the Mohammedan rulers, being lineally descended from the first Khaliff, Abu Bakr, the successor to the prophet. Under him were 11,000,000 people.

BRYAN'S TIP ALWAYS GOOD

Commoner Has Always Told Friends Not to Bet Upon Him.

New York, Sept. 5.—William J. Bryan, in a lecture at Grace Methodist church on "The Old Religion," strongly denounced all games of chance. His face lighted up with a broad smile as he continued:

"During the three campaigns when I ran for the presidency I always advised my friends not to bet. And," he added, amid a shout of laughter from the audience, "they always appreciated the advice after the election."

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR

By THOMAS R. DEAN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The civil war gave those who participated in it all the fighting they wanted for many a year to come—indeed, for the rest of their natural lives—but it left its effects in a different way on many boys who were too young to fight for the Union. Peter Briton was seventeen years old when the Confederacy collapsed, and he ever after regretted that the fight hadn't been kept up long enough for him to get a smell of powder.

When Peter was twenty-one this spirit developed with a desire to take part in a duel. He maintained that affairs among gentlemen would better be settled by the code than by bloody noses, though why blood coming from a place where there is little or no danger rather than one where death may be instantaneous did not appear in Peter's logic. He mistook himself. The reason he believed in dueling was because he rather fancied getting into a duel.

When this fad with him was at his height he went abroad. Dueling has always been more or less in vogue in all the countries in Europe and is so on the continent today. Peter went to London, but no one insulted him there, and he continued on to Paris. Even in the French capital he saw no chance to participate in his hobby, so he went on down into Italy.

The middle class Italians are a peaceful people, and Peter found himself as far as ever from a duel. Fearing that he would be obliged to return home without a scrap, he resolved to pick a quarrel with some one. In a restaurant in Rome he saw a man at a neighboring table eating macaroni in a manner displeasing to a well bred American. Peter signified his displeasure by calling to the man not to make a pig of himself. The man, instead of giving a verbal reply, tossed the contents of a tumbler of wine in Peter's face and went on eating his macaroni. Peter wiped away the wine with his napkin and laid his card on the macaroni eater's table, receiving one in return.

Picking up the man's card, Peter took it to an American friend of his, Gunter, and told him the circumstances. Gunter looked at the card and exclaimed:

"Good gracious, man, you've challenged Castelli!"

"And who is Castelli?"

"The principal of the fencing school."

Peter's face fell.

"He's not only that," Gunter went on; "he's a noted duelist."

Peter turned very pale.

"He's not only a noted duelist, but he kills his man every time. There is a great deal of prejudice against him in Rome, but he finds all the pupils he cares to have among the young Roman swells who may possibly some time need to use his instruction. They find him a splendid teacher."

"But can't we use pistols?" asked Peter. "I've done a lot of good work with the pistol."

"You, having challenged the fellow, will have to fight with any weapon he may select."

"That's so. I didn't think of that."

"Of course he'll choose foils or rapiers, though he is a dead shot with the pistol."

"I don't like this fix," said Peter, giving a shiver. "What can I do to get out of it?"

"I don't see what you can do, but I'll think it over and try to hit on some plan. Since you are the insulted party you don't have to fight unless you wish to, but you don't care to put yourself in the position of a coward, I suppose."

"No," said Peter, "I don't wish to do that."

"Well, stay here till you hear from me."

Peter passed a terrible half day; then the door of his room was thrown open and two men entered and bade him go with them. They placed him in a carriage and took him to a large building that he thought was a hospital. It was a lunatic asylum. He was put into a room by himself with an iron grating on the windows and locked in.

Peter never experienced such joy of relief in his life as he now felt locked up in a madhouse, where the fencing master could not get at him. He recognized in his imprisonment a scheme of his friend Gunter, who had doubtless taken out papers to have him confined as a lunatic.

The next day Gunter came to see him and admitted the plan as his own. Gunter told Peter that he had seen Castelli and advised him that Peter was not responsible for his acts. Castelli was very much disappointed at not being able to add one more to the list of those he had killed!

Peter asked Gunter how long it would be necessary for him to remain a maniac and could get no definite response. But one day Gunter brought him a letter of apology from Castelli. Peter, greatly surprised, asked how he had secured it.

"I circulated a report," replied Gunter, "among Castelli's pupils that he had insulted a lunatic, and most of them left him. Meanwhile I had agreed to take lessons of him, and he asked me what he should do. I advised him to write you an apology, which he did."

Peter smiled a sickly smile. He went home, but kept very quiet about his affair of honor. Fortunately for him, since it occurred in a foreign land he was able to keep it secret. But from that time he lost his taste for listening to stories of the civil war.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR PRIZE PRODUCTS

HOW THE BIG LAND SHOWS ADVERTISE THE NORTHWEST

The cool weather and abundant rains in the past few weeks assure the Northwest farmers good crops. More than usual returns will be had by many of the more progressive farmers, who will exhibit at the New York and other big land shows. The habit of exhibiting at these big shows is a good one to get—it brings honor and money to the enterprising farmer. In past years the Northwest farmers have won many prizes for the best wheat—oats—potatoes—barley—the finest apples—and prize winning corn, sugar beets, alfalfa and hops are also raised. Every time a Northwest farmer wins a prize at the big land shows more settlers come into the Northwest and many times they move close by the prize winner's farm. This increases the value of his land and brings him good, ambitious neighbors, who also get the prize getting habit.

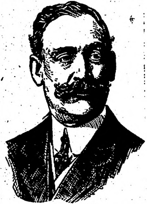
Take the great new land show—the New York Land Show, which will be held between November 3 and 12, 1911. For the best hard wheat $1,000 in gold is offered to the farmers of the world. There is a big silver cup for potatoes—a $1,000 cup. The Northwest ought to win that potato cup, as well as the wheat prize money. Then there is the Earling cup for the best oats—the James J. Hill cup for the best 100 pounds of wheat—the Busch cup for hops—the Pabst cup for barley. All these are beautiful cups, all worth $1,000, except the Pabst barley cup—that's worth $1,500. Surely the Northwest should win these cups. Where else do they raise such potatoes, wheat, barley, oats, etc.?

$500 for Apples.

President Elliott, of the Northern Pacific Railway, has offered $500 in gold for the finest apples. The apples raised in Montana, Oregon and Washington are easily the best in the world. They bring the highest prices and have the best flavor, color and keeping qualities, as the National Apple Shows have demonstrated.

It is now harvest time, and the farmers of this section should go after these prizes. The Great Northern Railway will help the farmers in their territory win these prizes. No entry fee will be charged at the New York Land Show. The Great Northern Railway will make a special arrangement to handle these exhibits. Write at once to Ed. Leedy, the General Immigration Agent at St. Paul, Minnesota, who will tell you how to pack your exhibits and where to ship them. A $1,000 prize cup or $1,000 in gold is certainly worth trying for. Send a postal to him to-day.



A. E. STILWELL
President American Land and Irrigation Exposition, who gives $1000 Prize Cup for best potatoes

Other Big Land Shows.

If the Northwest farmer will only get busy and get his good stuff together he can exhibit at most all the land shows. The Pittsburg Land Show will be between October 12th and October 28th. The Omaha Land Show will be between October 15 and 28, 1911. Then comes the New York Land Show with $11,000 in prizes; dates—November 3rd to November 12th. After the New York Land Show is the big Chicago Show, starting Saturday, November 18th, and ending December 9th.

The Northwest farmers' own show—the Northwestern Land Products Show, at St. Paul—will probably commence December 12th and continue to December 24th, 1911, and so, you see, a farmer or a community can exhibit at all the shows. Every good exhibit at any one of these shows is going to help bring new settlers to that place.

The Great Northern Railway is cooperating with the Commercial Clubs in an effort to get good displays from all sections.

Why They Died.

Naturally applicants for life insurance may be expected to put as good a face as possible on the reports concerning relatives and the causes of their deaths, but they sometimes make rather amusing statements. Some one has collected a few of these which were originally published in the British Medical Journal:

"Mother died in infancy." "Father went to bed feeling well and the next morning woke up dead." "Grandfather died suddenly at the age of 103. Up to this time he bid fair to reach a ripe old age." "Applicant does not know cause of mother's death, but states that she fully recovered from her last illness." "Applicant has never been fatally sick." "Applicant's brother, who was an infant, died when he was a mere child." "Grandfather died from gunshot wound caused by an arrow shot by an Indian." "Applicant's fraternal parents died when he was a child." "Mother's last illness was caused from chronic rheumatism, but she was cured before death." "Father died suddenly; nothing serious."—Journal of American Medical Association.

Loaded For Economy.

A fireman was up for examination for promotion to the position of engineer. He passed a fair test on the rules and machinery, but during all of it the examiner was constantly lecturing him as to the need of economy in the use of fuel and oil, so that by the time he finished his examination it was pretty well on his nerves. Having finished the technical part, the examiner thought he would put the man in a critical position to see what he might do in an emergency. So he put this question: "Supposing you are the engineer of a freight train on a single track, and you are in danger of a head-on collision with a passenger train, and you know that you could not stop your train—that a collision could not be averted—what would you do?" The man, unstrung by the vigorous instruction he had received as to economy, replied in this way: "Why, I would grab the oil can in one hand and a lump of coal in the other and jump."—Atchison Globe.

A Simple Twist of the Wrist.

Candle Making In China.

The manufacture of candles in China is no new thing. Years before the advent of the foreigner the natives made them by crude methods and used them in home and temple. Even today millions of candles are made by the old process of dipping, at which the old Chinese are very expert. A mixture of tallow and castor oil is first prepared and the operator, placing a straw to serve as a wick between each of his ten fingers, dips them into the preparation as many times as necessary to give the candles the desired thickness. After this they are set up on end against a board to harden and the straw wicks clipped to a proper length. The finished product burns well, gives a fair light, is consumed slowly, and, best of all, in native eyes, is very cheap. These candles are usually made by small factories for sale to storekeepers, but many individuals still manufacture for family and temple use.

Buddist Priests of Burma.

Every morning after sunrise the Buddhist priests of Burma go out in Indian file, preceded by a boy with a bell, which he rings at intervals. This warns the people of their approach, and it is wonderful to see with what reverence the people regard these priests. Immediately the bell rings a Burmese woman runs out with her offering of rice, bananas, eggs or the best that her house can provide. No words of greeting are exchanged. The offerings are made and received in silence. The Buddhist priests may not receive money. This is why they have to beg for their daily bread.

Days of the Week.

While the Egyptians named the days of their week, the Jews numbered them only, the first day of the week being always the day after the weekly Sabbath. Fifteen different methods of Sabbath counting are known to have existed during the last 4,000 years, including every day of the week, weeks of different and varying length, from six to ten days, and months of various and varying length.

A discussion on appointments to the Most Noble Order of the Thistle gave rise to a caustic saying on the part of Disraeli. "I couldn't give Lord —— the Thistle. He'd eat it."—London Graphic.

ROADS REJECT MEN'S DEMANDS

Harriman Lines Refuse to Recognize New Federation.

SITUATION IS VERY GRAVE

Vice President Kruttschnitt Declares Recognition of Federation Would Hamper Company in Performing Its Duty to the Public—Union Leaders Considering Strike Vote and Developments May Come Soon.

San Francisco, Sept. 2.—The Southern Pacific Railroad company, through Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president and director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman lines, rejected a demand for recognition of the federation of shop employes, comprising five shop crafts unions and 25,000 men.

That such recognition, with its implications, would hamper the company in performing its duty to the public was the position taken by its officials.

Union leaders asked for it on grounds of economy and expedition and, admittedly, because of a feeling that greater centralization of capital and power made corresponding centralization among unions desirable.

The unions involved had asked their general officers for permission to strike in the event of the refusal to grant recognition of the federation.

A conference lasting three hours and twenty minutes was terminated by Mr. Kruttschnitt's final answer and following it the union representatives, sober faced, went into session by themselves to consider the strike vote, which they may accept as binding or may reject, refusing to sanction a strike.

President Kline, it was learned, presented the case for the unions and replied to questions put to him by the railroad officials, who acted without a formal spokesman during the discussion.

Mr. Kline based his pleading on economic grounds and one of the officials said "held his own" in the questioning from his angle of the case. Once or twice the discussion became lively, but it never ranged beyond coolheaded argument.

The railroad officials in their turn took the position—already publicly announced by Mr. Kruttschnitt—that the federation's power and demands would render it impossible for them to perform the duties and carry the responsibilities which are imposed upon them by law and which make them, in the words of Mr. Kruttschnitt, "quasi-public officials."

Gotch pinned the Lion's shoulders to the mat for the first fall in 14 minutes and 18 seconds, winning on a reverse body hold.

The second and deciding fall was won by the champion in 5 minutes and 32 seconds, Hack going down under the strain of the famous toe hold.

BEATTIE FACES HARD GRILLING

Prosecutor Vigorously Cross-Examines Young Virginian.

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 5.—Through six weary hours in a stuffy little courtroom Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife, battled for his life. Night interrupted a vigorous cross-examination by the commonwealth.

The prisoner, always cool and collected, told the gruesome story of the attack of the highwayman, the wild ride to the Owen home at a speed of fifty-five miles an hour, with the lifeless, blood covered body of his wife on a seat of the motor car beside him.

Beattie, by request of the prosecution, donned the blood stained coat he wore the night of the murder and attempted to explain why blood spots did not appear on certain parts of the garment if his wife was reclined against him in the way he described.

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

> "I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case."

Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

James E. Boyle, head of the department of Economics and Political Science, University of North Dakota, has made an extensive study of municipal government, and especially of city government by commission. In a letter to the Press, dated Sept. 6th, 1911, he tells of his direct observations with respect to Kansas City and Leavenworth before and after the adoption of the commission plan of government, as follows:

"It is my good fortune to be fairly well acquainted with several towns and cities in Kansas, and especially with Leavenworth and Kansas City, the two large Missouri river cities. For years these two cities remained excellent examples of conspicuous failures in municipal government. Leavenworth in particular was notoriously bad. Never in my life have I seen filthier and shabbier streets than I saw here in 1904. The police force was demoralized, the city finances were in a bad way, and the once thriving city had apparently fallen into decreptitude and decay. Even the very street cars were operated by beardless boys too young to feel or exercise responsibility for the lives of passengers in their care. The city had apparently given up the struggle, and was supine and helpless. Business men were leaving and flocking to Kansas City, Missouri, just across the line from Kansas City, Kansas. Dwelling houses and stores were empty; weeds were growing in the main streets; sidewalks were rotting away.

"In 1910, I found all this changed. The city looked prosperous; few empty houses in sight; streets in good shape; business men cheerful and hopeful; real estate gone up; bank deposits increasing.

"The only reason I could find for this great improvement was the Commission Plan of city government now in successful operation. It made a great change for the better in this despairing city.

"The other city, Kansas City, has long been a prosperous and growing city, in spite of the break-down of its city government. However, it wisely adopted the commission plan, along with scores of smaller cties in Kansas. My visit to this place and conversatoins with men there convinced me that, beyond any shadow of a doubt, this city had greatly profited by a change to the commission plan.

"In conslusion, I may state in general, thatI am satisfied that the Commission Plan is absolutely sound in principle, and that it works well in practice. It places both responsibility and power in a definite place, where all the people know exactly where to look for them. In this way it actually puts government into the hands of the people, where, in our great Republic, it is supposed to be."

Eliminate the Boss

"The phenomenon of the commission plan of government which gives the most satisfaction to many people is the complete disappearance from influence of the typical ward politician. The whole field of "peanut politics" seems to have disappeared. In Galveston, for example, the nominations which are recognized as emanating from the politicians who formerly controlled the town get only 20 per cent of the votes. In all the cities it is claimed that the city service has been put on a nonpartisan basis, with a great increase in efficiency. Certain it is that under the commission plan candidates have repeatedly been elected without the help of politicial machines, while voters are casting their ballots without relying upon the guidance of the machines either."

ALBERT LEVIN BUYS BARBER SHOP.

Last Wednesday forenoon there was consumated a deal whereby Albert Levin, of Hoffman, Minn., acquired the barber shop on LaBree Ave., formerly owned by Joe Flynn. Mr. Levin comes here highly recommended as an experienced and up-to-the-times barber. He intends fixing up the shop, so as to make it one of the most attractive places in the city. Here's hoping that he meats with unalloyed success.

Mr. Flynn conducted a very popular barber shop and enjoyed a desirable class of trade, and his many friends will be sorry to hear of his selling out. He is undecided now as to where he will next engage in business. The first of the week he will leave for a few days [illegible] his home in Rice Lake, Wisconsin.

WILL THE CITY GET COMPETITION

Plans and Specifications for new Light Plant In Question.

The council at its meeting on next Tuesday night the 19th has called for bids for the new Electric light plant. A set of plans and specifications have been voted on by that body and have been formally issued by resolution, and a copy has been placed on file at the Builders Exchange at Minneapolis for the inspection of prospective bidders.

The council may be of the opinion that those specifications are of such a nature that free and unrestricted competition will be obtained from a variety of contractors. However an inspection of the plans and specifications will show that exactly the reverse is true.

It appers that some time ago the Council either retained, or was to retain, the service of a competent, unbiased, consulting engineer to advise the city, and assist the Superintendent of Water and Lights in getting out a comprehensive set of plans for the new plant, that would permit and attract bidders, thus insuring the city active and agressive competition on all of the better makes of boilers, engines and dynamos that are needed in the installation.

Instead of that, it appears that the council has seen fit to employ the representative of one particular manufacturer, The Minneapolis Steel and Machinery Company to do this work, and a set of plans have been received and issued which have been drawn by this representative. The agreement, it is understood, is that this representative is to receive approximately two percent of the cost of the plant as his compensation for getting out these plans, but it is further understood, that, in event of his companys receiving the contract for the work, that is based on his own set of plans and specifications, that this commission is to be waived and no charge is to be made for that work!

Notwithstanding the fact that the purpose of this is obvious, it allows a bidder to bid on public plans and specifications of his own, and then if he is successful in getting a contract based on his own plans and specifications, receive what amounts to a bonus as well.

The plans and specifications are on file at the office of the City Clerk and a careful inspection of them will show that the plant has been designed around one particular set of apparatus, this being set in place, then a building built around to fit the particular dimensions of this apparatus alone, without any provision for future changes or enlargement.

It has been reported from the Twin Cities that other would be bidders who examined the plans at the Builders Exchange in Minneapolis will refrain from figuring on the work, on account of the plans being manifestly so one sided as to confine the bids to one class of apparatus. Thus the city will be deprived of the competition that it should have, and deserves.

Th specifications as sent out also provide for the letting of the contract in one bid, including the machinery and all. Manufacturers of engines, boilers, dynamos and the other material of the quality and reputation that the city deserves and desires, are thus handicapped in placing their proposals before the council in the best manner.

There should be provision made for allowing these manufacturers to give the city the benefit of their competition [illegible] the city should buy direct [illegible] to the manufacturers for the satisfactory carrying out of the individual contracts.

If the council desires this competition, it should take steps at once to insure it, and the plans should be changed to permit it.

If the council does not desire competition and wants to allow but one bidder, with perhaps a dummy bid or two, to figure on but one make of machinery, why then waste money in advertising for bids?

The city should be protected in the expenditure of upwards of Thirty Thousand Dollars, by competition, by securing the services of an expert to see that the city gets a thoroughly modern plant, properly installed, and honestly tested to see that it meets with guarantees.

There is neither fairness, business sense, nor legality in allowing the city to enter into any contract for a public improvement of this magnitude and importance, without securing the fullest measure of competition, and this cannot be had on plans and specifications so clearly biased and restricted.

FLAX FIBER PLANT

Here is a proposition that we want you farmers, and especially you flax growers, to consider carefully and then give us a reply.

Mr. Beard, a representative of the North America Linen Fiber Company with headquarters at Philadelphia, was in the city last week looking over the local field with a view of ascertaining the advisability of putting a fiber factory in Thief River Falls. After having looked the field over carefully with some of the local men and further having taken the matter under a week's advisement with the company, Mr. Beard telephoned us last night that he had practically decided on having a plant established here and that some of the fiber dressing machines will be shipped immediately.

A full plant would consist of ten of these machines and would handle about twenty-five ton of flax straw per day. Only a few of these machines, possibly two or three will be installed here this season, but in order to ascertain as closely as possible how much flax straw can be expected he proposes the following scheme:

Every man who has flax straw that he would like to haul to market should either call at the Press office and state approximately the amount of straw that he could deliver or, if not convenient to call drop a postal card addressed to the Press stating the number of tons he will furnish. This is essential to the getting of the machines as no company would desire to put more than one machine in any one locality unless it were certain that sufficient straw would be furnished.

If we can make a showing that will warrant them in putting in five machines they will do so.

The Press will simply act as your registry in showing this company what they may expect. It will now be up to you to show that you have flax straw to deliver in case you want the plant.

A word or two with regard to price and manner of handling flax for fiber may be opportune.

Any common flax straw pile reasonably free from chaff and weeds would be worth about two dollars a ton. Flax may be brot to the plant in its original state without being [illegible] and the machine will do the [illegible] The longer the straw the more valuable the fiber and hence the better price can be paid for the straw. The price may vary from two dollars to ten dollars per ton. Cut your flax stubble short and get a better price for your straw.

WILL SOON BE DAY AND NIGHT POWER

People have been asking why we do not have day and night power. The answer is that, just now, the revenue derived during the day would not be enough to pay for the expenses of running and, therefore, the city would be losing money. There will be day and night power as soon as Hanson and Barzen have installed a 75 horse power motor, which is going to be used to run their flour mill. Then the revenue during the day will be sufficient to warrant running. The motor will be here and installed the last of this week.

LOCAL CREAMERY TO MAKE IMPROVEMENTS

The Farmers Co-operative Creamery Company has decided to make some worthy improvements in and about the local creamery. The creamery will be raised and a concrete foundation put under it; a cement floor will be put in thruout the entire building, to replace the wooden one there now; the engine room will be enlarged four feet to the north and four feet to the south; and a cement walk will be built about the building, replacing the present board walk. When these improvements have been completed, the farmers will be able to boast of one of the neatest and handiest creameries in the state.

Embryonic Ones.

They had been at school together. They had fought both shoulder to shoulder and face to face. Now, after the passing of years, they met again.

"How's the world treated you?" asked the long, thin one.

"Like a lord," said the short, fat one. "Got my own business, wife and three youngsters, two thousand a year. And how are you?"

"How?" replied the thin man. "Oh, anyhow!"

"Dear me! Sorry to hear it. Let me think. You went on the stage, didn't you?"

"Yes. But I had to give it up."

"Why was that?" asked the city man.

"Oh, I thought it best," said the other. "I had a few hints that I wasn't quite suited to the profession."

"Oh, I see!" nodded his friend knowingly. "The 'little birds' told you, eh?"

"Well, not exactly," answered the ex-actor, with a painful smile. "But they would have been birds—if they had been allowed to hatch."—London Answers.

French Schoolboy Knowledge.

It does not seem to be a difficult matter for the pupils of primary schools to obtain certificates, if one may judge from some specimens of their answers at examinations published by the Paris Journal. Here is a sample, among others, of a written answer to the question: "Which period of French history do you prefer, and why?"

"The period of the history of France that I prefer is the war of 1870. Bismarck said to Napoleon III., 'Es-tu pret?' 'Yes,' says the other, 'I have not a gaiter button wanting.' Then Napoleon III. tells McMahon to come. But McMahon, who was on the tower of Malakoff, replies, 'J'y suis, j'y reste.' I detest war because it is a barbarism."

As the Paris Journal remarks, it is sad to think these lads, who are on the point of becoming apprentices, will probably never open a book again and in a few years will be electors.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Origin of "Plagiarist."

One who appropriates—that is, steals—the literary work of another to use it as his own thought, the child of his own brain, is guilty of plagiarism, as everybody knows, yet few are acquainted with the derivation of the word or know that the plagiarist is literally a child stealer. Among a certain class of criminals in Rome in the time of the earlier Caesars, there existed the damnable custom of stealing children and selling them as slaves. According to Roman law, the child stealers, when detected, received as a part of the penalty for their crime a severe flogging. As the Latin word plaga signifies a stripe or lash, the ancient kidnapers were termed "plagiarii"—that is, deserving of stripes. So both the crime and the criminals received their names from the castigation inflicted.

Morocco is not so hot as it is often supposed to be. The greater part of the country is near either the sea or the mountains, often both, and it is only about as far south as Georgia or Louisiana. The sun is hot, of course, at midday, in a dry region where the sky is usually cloudless and the latitude is about like that of the gulf coast of the United States. But the temperature in the shade is seldom extreme—that is, in the parts of the country where the bulk of the people live. South and east of the mountains, on the border of the Sahara desert, the conditions in respect to heat are altogether different, but there the population is small. The people of Morocco are fanatical Moslems, and they resent bitterly any kind of pressure to change old customs or give up old ways, but they are much less formidable than they used to be in the prime of Moorish power, especially in comparison with the conditions in the advanced countries of the earth.—Cleveland Leader.

Poor Hand in a Bible Class.

A woman of Louisville, Ky., who enjoys a game of cards, recently visited a friend in Indianapolis. Sunday morning came, and the hostess invited her visitor to accompany her to Sunday school. It is the practice of the teacher of the Bible class of which the hostess is a member to ask each member of the class to read a verse from the Bible and comment on it. The visitor from Louisville had not been informed of the teacher's custom. However, the teacher seemed to think that visitors as well as regular members should participate, and when the member next to the visitor had read her verse and made her comment the teacher smilingly looked toward the visitor. The visitor appeared to be disconcerted for a moment, and then she hastily said, "I pass."—Indianapolis News.

Roman Bricks.

When the preparations for rebuilding the Campanile, in Venice, were undertaken the archaeologists were afforded an opportunity to make some interesting studies of the bricks. It was found that they had been used in arches, fortifications, the tops of walls and in other ways before they were built into the campanile, and that they were not Venetian but Roman bricks. These ancient bricks were made in slices, for in many the layers could be seen undisturbed. It is said that bricks made this way can bear a greater weight than modern bricks. The bricks examined were of the first century. One of them bore the imprint of a horseshoe, which may prove that Romans used a horseshoe like ours, although it is generally believed that their horseshoes were strapped on, not nailed.

Loss of Weight in Rowing.

A well known physician in New York city who has long been identified with aquatics, says that the average individual loss of weight in a four-mile pull, whether in a race or a row against time, is two or three pounds. Under peculiarly trying conditions of heat the individual loss may reach five or six pounds. On the other hand, says this physician, many oarsmen go through a four mile pull with the loss of only about a pound in weight. This lost weight is fully recovered by the next day. Proper training is so arranged in these days that a four mile race comes only when the oarsmen are thoroughly rested and at the top of their training weight, so that the loss of weight rarely indicates that the individual is "stale," or below good training condition.

Goldsmith's Obituary Notice.

It would be difficult to find a more quaint announcement of death than that published in an old newspaper in 1774, at the time of Oliver Goldsmith's demise.

"1774, April 4. Died, Dr. Oliver Goldsmith. Deserted is the village. The traveler hath laid him down to rest; the good natured man is no more; he stoopse but to conquer; the vicar hath performed his sad office; it is a mournful task from which the hermit may essay to meet the dread tyrant with more than Grecian or Roman fortitude."

Dead Leaves as Fertilizers.

According to tests made in France, dead leaves possess a high value as fertilizers. They are extensively used by the market gardeners about the city of Nantes. Pear leaves have the highest quantity of nitrogenous, oak leaves come next, and the leaves of vines stand lowest in value.

Kindness Misdirected.

THE SHORT BALLOT

Politics is a profession. Politics is the business of citizenship. To make this business so elaborate as to be a profession is practically to disfranchise all the citizens who have other professions of their own. And so we have government by the 3 per cent of professional citizens instead of by the 100 per cent of busy common citizens. The Short Balot proposal is to simplify politics sufficiently to allow it to be readily mastered by the average man.

Now comes Governor Morris of Montana and says governors should have power to initiate and refer legislation to the voters for their approval or rejection. Maybe they should, It really matters not much so long as the people are allowed to pass upon it. But when it comes to initiating legislation as Taft did his reciprocity pact and then not even allowing the people's representatives to pass upon it untrammeled by the "ball and chain" of patronage we draw the line.

It is becoming more and more apparent that there is an increasing tendency both on the part of state and the federal government to multiply officers and increase their pay. Only the other day President Taft urged the National bar association to use its influence towards securing in the salaries of federal judges so as to make it $25,000 a year. The frightful extravagance prevailing in official circles in the nation and states has become a heavy burden upon the people. Those interested in the welfare of our country must become watchful in this respect, especially in an era of economic and social unrest such as this country is now experiencing, because public officials constantly seek to increase their power and their salaries.—Roseau Region.

The United States congress never intended the anti-trust law to prevent righteous and proper co-operation among farmers, laboing men and consumers. But the federal government has now indicted the officers of a New England milk producers' union for conspiracy under the Sherman anti-trust law, and there is no telling what form of agricultural co-operation will next be indicted by the United States district attorney. There is no danger that co-operative effort among farmers will ever become monopolistic and farmers joining interests do not seek to establish a monopoly. This law was not designated to prevent farmers working together to prevent being robbed by unscrupulous middlemen. While monopoly and trusts must be regulated vigorously, farmers and others should be given a fair chance, and all that farmers ask is to be allowed to work out their own salvation.

(BY SEN. MOSES E. CLAPP.)

While there are some who favor the recall of bad officials generally, they seem to hesitate at giving the people the right to recall a bad or inefficient judge. There is absolutely no logic in this attempted distinction. It is urged that the recall applied to judges would interfere with the independence and fearlessness of judges. If this is true, and a sufficient reason for withholding it, it wolud of course apply to all officials. Originally the judges dealt with matters largely of private concern, but they deal with the making of law as well as its interpretation. The court can one day declare that the American people cannot issue greenbacks and the next day, without changing a line in the written law of the country, declare that they can issue them. The court can declare one day that the people of the United States have an income tax law; the next day, without changing a line of our statutory law, they can declare that we do not have an income tax. A more absolute truism was never uttered by Judge Harlan when he declared, in the dissenting opinion in the Standard Oil cases, that the court had read into the statute that which was not there. In other words, under our system, the court does make law; and, being a law making instrumentality, it should be as much subject to the supreme sovereignty of the people as any other function of government.

If the people are competent to elect a man as judge before he is tried, it is a queer logic that leads to a conclusion that they are incompetent to pass upon the same question after he has been tried. We all know that there has been a sinister force, sometimes successful, but at all times active, in the effort to determine the selection of judges as well as other officials. It is only just to the judge that this sinister force should find its counterpart in the recall in the hands of the people, which, instead of destroying the independence of the judiciary, would free the judiciary from the influence which has too often, at least, sought to dominate it.

I think the veto of the Arizona constitution was a most unfortunate thing. The people of that state, first, in the selection of the members of the constitutional convention, in the adoption of the constitution had twice solemnly declared that they believed in the recall of judges, and, whatever others may say, it must, I think, be conceded that the people of Arizona were competent and had the right to judge for themselves. The merest tyro in the study of public questions know that, after they have gone through the formality of disclaiming the recall, the Arizona people will proceed to put the recall in their constitution by a more decided vote than before. It is little short of bribery. It is a sad lesson, indeed, to teach the electorate of a tentative state. It is hardly the highest form of preparation for an electorate's participation in the policies of the Union. Fortunately the humiliation is not the hulilation of the people of Arizona.

In the last analysis there is but one of two alternatives; either to recognize free government as a failure, or, in the language of the great progressive governor of California, declare that successful and permament government must rest primarily on recognition of the rights of men and absolute sovereignty of the people.

MOSES E. CLAPP.

TWO MILLION DOLLARS

If Governor Eberhart calls the legislature in extra session this winter to enact a law increasing railroad taxes, this measure can and will be submitted to the people at the election in November, 1912.

There is no doubt that the legislature will enact such a law if it is permitted by the governor to come together, for The Herald has in its possession the pledges of enough members to pass it, and it is a safe prediction that there will not be a half dozen votes against it in either branch of the legislature.

If the increase is approved by the people in November, 1912, it will be effective in 1913.

But if the Governor's negligence or reluctance to serve the people at the cost of offending the large interests puts the matter over until the regular session of 1913, the increase cannot be submitted to the people until the election of 1914, and will not be effective until 1915, or two years later than it can be done by an extra session.

If the increase is ony from the present 4 per cent on the railroad gross earnings to 5 per cent,—and many members in their letters to The Herald strongly favored making it 6 per cent instead of 5,—the additional revenue will amount to nearly a million dollars a year.

That million dollars a year for two years will be lost if there is no extra session. The extra session might cost from $25,000 to $100,000, but it would gain the state $2,000,000. If there is no extra session the state will save the expense of a session, or $25,000 to $100,000; but it will lose $2,000,000.

That sum, once lost, can never be regained.

Now two million dollars, in this day of large sums, isn't a particularly impressive amount, but after all it is a good deal of money. Certainly it is too much to lose unnecessarily. And there is no necessity of losing it. The legislature is in favor of saving it, and the people are in favor of saving it. All that is needed is that Governor Eberhart shall call the legislature together; the legislature and the people will do the rest.

Two million dollars isn't a vast sum compared with Mr. Carnegie's fortune or Mr. Rockefeller's. Compared with the fortune of the average taxpayer who is now paying not only unfairly high freight and passenger rates but a part of the taxes that ought to be borne by the railroads, it is a good deal of money.

Two million dollars would build 2,000 miles of good roads at $1,000 a mile; and Minnesota needs good

Two million dollars would build 200 rural consolidated schools and equip them to teach agriculture and domestic science as well as fundamental branches, allowing $10,000 to each school.

Two million dollars, spread over ten years, would so equip the fight against tuberculosis that in that time the state could come very close to wiping it out within the borders of the commonwealth.

Two million dollars would drain the greater part of the swamp land of the state, turning it from a dreary waste to a smiling, fertile and productive garden place.

A small part of two million dollars would provide what the state needs about as much as it needs anything—a thorough and comprehensive physical survey of the state's public domain, so that the state would know what it possesses and be able to sell homeseekers the kind of land they are seeking.

Two million dollars—but the list of things the state needs which two million dollars would provide for it is too long to be enumerated.

The real question is this:

Shall Minnesota permit its governor to lose forever by his neglect of a plain duty this vast sum which belongs to the state and the people of the state?—Duluth Herald.

FRUIT SEASON AT ITS PRIME

Now is the time to buy fruit. Few housewives of the city realize that pears and peaches purchased by the box are very cheap right at the present time. The fruit market has presented a rather unusual situation this season and the fact that fruit could not be bought at reasonable prices when in an ordinary season, it is plentiful and cheap has lead the consumers generally to think that the present season is a poor one to buy fruit. This, however, is decidedly not the case. The California fruit season this year is from two to three weeks later than usual and peaches, pears, etc., are coming in in splendid quality and quantity. The housewife who is interested in having the best for winter at the cheapest possible price should not overlook the opportunity the market is going to offer during the next few weeks. Naturally there has been little change in fruit prices when they are bought by the dozen or in other small quantities but purchased by the box the best value for the money is secured. There is going to be a plentiful supply of grapes at reasonable prices when the Michigan Concords come in. Michigan has an unusually large crop of excellent grapes this year. The early supply of apples would indicate that there is going to be a wealth of this popular fruit during the coming months. The first supply of crabapples is now on the wane and the mealy apples are making their appearance. The Montana crabapple crop will, however, be on the market in about ten days and a plentiful supply of high quality fruit may be expected according to reports received regarding the crop. Last year all of the apples were received from the west. This year Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, southern Minnesota, in fact that group of states known as the central states are furnishing a splendid supply. The plum season is now on the wane, but there are still some fine Italian plums, ideal for canning and preserving purpose on the market.

Season for It.

The curious condition of the local fruit market and the reasons why now is the time to invest in fruit are the results of the change in the California fruit season. The Califronia season is away behind. Last year California fruit began to move in this part of the country the latter part of June and the movement was very heavy in July. This year a few cars moved early, but during the month of July there was practically no California fruit marketed in the northwest. Now there is a plentiful supply and when the people realize this fact big sales may be expected.

There is not going to be any low prices on canned or pressed fruit during the coming winter owing to the fierce competition during the early season between the big canning companies, evaporated fruit companies and pressed fruit concerns. In their eagerness to get the supply of fruit the competitors bid the price away up for the early fruit so that canned goods are going to cost the jobber a stiff price and the consumer will also come in for a like price in case he must buy canned goods. The advantage therefore in buying the pears and peaches at their present low prices is very evident. The Bartlett pears from California and Washington are on the market and the season for the Elberta an Crawford peaches from Washington is also at hand. Last year Texas furnished 50,000 cars of peaches, while this year only 20 per cent of a crop is being furnished. The Texas crop, however, has no especial effect on local markets except in so far as to influence the price of early fruit. Peaches during the early season were scarce and high, but they are now plentiful and reasonable. The central states are showing a much larger crop of fruit than last year which is having its infuence on the market.

It is not often that the fruit crop is underestimated as it has been this year, but this mistake on the part of the big concerns means that the unexpected quantity of fruit will be given to the consumer at lower prices. The value of fruit as food is too well known for the consumer to overlook taking advantage of the opportunities offered.—Grand Forks Herald.

At a banquet of the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers in New York last December 8th Emery, the chairman of Taft's board in a speech said: "There are certain things that are very difficult to get, and one thing, that according to the platform of the Republican party—and incidentaly that does not mean anything to me, except that I have been given the job according to that platform—is to try to get the cost of production. I thank you all, gentlemen, that you did not laugh(laughter)••• I frankly say right here that this idea of settling things on cost alone by any mathematical or algebraical or geometric ratio or problem or theory, is all nonsense. You must not think I am joking about this thing, but there is a joke about it, and the joke is this: I have no powers whatsoever. The tariffboard has no powers. There is really no such thing as a tariff board. The law says that for Certain purposes the president may employ such persons as he sees fit. I am one of such persons. That is all." (Laughter and applause.) Now, my dear reader what can we expect of such a tariff board? And what can we expect of a president that will put off revising an "indefensible" tariff in the interest of the people because he thinks congress must first have the expert(?) figures of such a tariff board, when—"there is really no such thing as a tariff board"—and the board that is has "no powers whatsoever"? Do we not feel, instinctively, that Taft has insulted our intelligence?

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

Again a most horrible scene has occurred at Oslo, Minnesota, when a Polander, crazed by drink, drove into Red River and was drowned. This is the result of the work of the saloon-keepers and their supporters.

Saloon men, you have driven a man into the depths of Hell and left his family unprotected. If you who stand behind the bar and deliver the crazed drug, thought for one moment of the wrong you have done, you could not be happy an hour. And if you, honorable councilmen, who have full power to close the saloons, realized the responsibility that rests upon you and the many tears you cause to flow by permitting the selling of liquor, you would be forever unhappy and would hasten to put a stop to the traffic. And you mighty voters, what can you say for yourselves? Are you exempt from guilt in this terrible tragedy, you, who vote for such men you know to be saloon supporters? No, never. Call yourselves Christians and church people and then support this terrible business. You can not serve two masters. You cannot serve God and Mammon. You are serving Mammon faithfully when you vote for such men.

I chanced to be at Oslo the day when this unhappy man was to be taken home to his family. His son had come to get him. It was a most heartrending scene. The poor grief-stricken son was almost overcome by sorrow as he watched the body of his dead father being rolled into a wagon box like a dead animal. Now he was nothing to you, saloon-keepers. No, you would think of it as unclean to touch him, but while he was alive andhad money you were his best friend and thought it well to fill him with the deadly drug. You likely look upon it as no fault of yours and say, "Well, the brute ought to take care of himself." When you put up a trap, do you expect to catch something in it? Yes, indeed, and you watch closely too, to see how soon it is there. Just so, with the saloons. You want the "brutes" to come there and be caught.

BEATTIE GUILTY IN FIRST DEGREE

Jury Convicts Young Virginian of Wife Murder.

JUDGE GIVES DEATH PENALTY

Twelve Men Spend Brief Time in Prayer, Then Vote Unanimously for Conviction.

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., Sept. 9.—Twelve Virginia farmers knelt at dusk in the obscurity of the small juryroom at Chesterfield Courthouse, praying fervently that they might pass judgment aright on Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., indicted for the murder of his wife. They arose a moment later and silently one by one recorded a unanimous verdict of "guilty."

Pausing in solemn contemplation for fifty-eight minutes, weighing carefully the meaning of their decision and once more on bended knees beseeching divine assistance that they might not err, they filed into the hushed stillness of a crowded courtroom and with startling suddenness twelve voices, instead of the usual one of the foreman, spoke the single word "guilty." It was almost a shout.

The perfunctory motions for a new trial were made by counsel for the defense. The usual granting of permission even to argue the point was denied, as Judge Watson in a stern voice declared that all rulings of the court were on comparatively unimportant detail and in no way could have influenced the verdict.

A stay of execution was granted, however, in order to give counsel an opportunity to apply for writ of error when the court of appeals meets in November.

Judge Watson delivered an impressive speech to the prisoner. He told how the young man had stained his own life and that of the way in which he lived by his sordid acts.

"You have had a fair and impartial trial, Mr. Beattie," said Judge Watson, "and the jury has done what it considers its duty. Therefore, you have been convicted of murder in the first degree, and on Nov. 24, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, you must forfeit you life to the community. May God have mercy on your soul."

STREETS FLOODED WITH MOLASSES

Million Gallons Break Loose in New Orleans.

New Orleans, Sept. 12.—Mississippi river levee residents in the vicinity of Market and St. Thomas streets were overwhelmed by a flood of molasses that flowed out of a storage depot and turned streets, yards and houses into a sticky mass.

The people and the city officials wrestled vainly with it. It will be several days before the district is cleared up.

Shortly after noon the warehouse of the Sugar Planters' Storage and Distributing company burst. The "warehouse" was a reservoir used by the old municipal waterworks plant. It covers more than a block. The walls are twenty feet high, of brick reinforced with steel and concrete. The great weight of the molasses is supposed to have caused them to give way.

With a roar a section of the wall twenty feet wide broke. The sticky fluid rolled out, streaming in all directions. Its depth was fifteen feet at the start and it reached Magazine street, a third of a mile away, with a depth of ten inches. The quantity flowing was more than 1,000,000 gallons and the property loss is about $125,000.

The weight of molasses came upon two city water mains and the heavy pipe crumbled, adding great streams of water to the molasses and swelling the volume of the flood. Two boilers just beyond the walls, weighing fifteen tons each, were carried one hundred feet and one was left standing on end.

In the streets fire companies, police and the white wings brigade fought vainly. Many residences were two feet deep in the sticky mass. Men and women, overtaken in the streets, were rescued with difficulty and many barely escaped suffocation.

Two fire horses dragged a hose cart until they were leg deep in the stream, then refused to budge and an hour later were pried out with planks.

SHEEP HERDER IS MURDERED

Two Suspects Are Under Arrest for Murder and Robbery.

Marmarth, N. D., Sept. 12.—With a bullet wound in one shoulder and with his pockets rifled of about $300 he was known to have had, Thomas H. Corcoran, a sheep herder, was found dead in his wagon in this city. Two suspects, Bert Gase and Tom Carberry, seen in the vicinity of the scene of the crime on the night previous, have been placed under arrest. One of the men has a gunshot wound in the thigh which he is unable to explain.

Corcoran, a former telegraph operator, had been engaged as a sheep herder for only a short time.

Banker Shot While Hunting.

Pierre, S. D., Sept. 12.—The first hunting accident of the season in this locality has occurred. J. R. McKnight, cashier of the Pierre National bank, received part of a charge of shot in his hip while out in the fields. The injury, while painful, is not serious.

COULD AGREE ON ROOSEVELT

Both Factions Would Accept Him, Says Davis.

MIGHT RENOMINATE TAFT

Minnesota Congressman Is of Opinion That President Could Not Be Re-Elected and La Follette Could Not Get Conservative Element Support.

St. Paul, Sept. 12.—That the Republicans will unite on Roosevelt and force him to take the nomination for president rather than nominate a man whom they cannot elect is the opinion of Representative C. R. Davis of St. Peter.

"It seems very doubtful that Taft can be re-elected, although he could be renominated," said Mr. Davis. "I have been through a considerable part of Pennsylvania and several other Eastern states and find that things are all torn to pieces and it looks as if Taft, while he might get the delegations to the convention, would lose a big portion of the Republican votes in the fall. The reciprocity pact which the president forced through also hits a number of states which he cannot afford to lose and that will hurt him.

"It might be equally difficult to elect La Follette and perhaps difficult to nominate him. While the regulars would hesitate to vote for a Democrat, because they would not like to give up the federal appointments, it might be difficult to round them up for La Follette.

"It looks as if La Follette would carry several of the Middle Western states in the spring and if he does this, even if he does not get enough to nominate him, it indicates a weakness in Taft, which will make the regulars hesitate before they nominate him. This is particularly true in the South, where the Republicans who go to conventions are practically all officeholders. If they get to believe that Taft cannot be re-elected they will not try to force his nomination. They would rather cast their votes for some candidate who can be elected. Politics is a business with them.

Might Agree on Roosevelt.

"I believe the regulars and progressives could agree on Roosevelt, and there is no hope of electing a Republican president unless the two factions agree. Roosevelt is about the only man upon whom they could agree.

"Personally I have taken no part in the presidential preliminaries and have tried to say as little as possible. I like La Follette and think he is an able man and would make a good president. I consider him a conservative man; he has become more conservative during the last year or two. But a lot of people look upon him as a radical, and for that reason he may not be the most available candidate.

"As for Taft, you know my views. I voted against the reciprocity bill, and voted for the other revision bills, which he vetoed. There was some excuse for his veto of the cotton schedule; at least he picked some flaws in it in his analysis of the bill, even if they were not important. But his message vetoing the wool schedule simply amounted to saying that he did not know anything about the bill and therefore vetoed it."

Mr. Davis professed ignorance regarding Minnesota and Third district politics, and said he will spend a few days in the near future visiting around the district.

GOVERNORS IN CONFERENCE

Western Governors Are First at Scene of Convention.

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 12.—The vanguard of thirty-five governors who are expected to participate during the week in the third annual governors' conference reached here. Fifteen state executives with their wives dined together.

A special car attached to a Pennsylvania flyer brought eight governors here from the West. Governor Shafroth of Colorado and Mrs. Shafroth were not aboard.

Governor Hay of Washington was the first of the delegates to arrive, followed by Governor Kitchin of North Carolina. He was not expected, as the legislature of his state did not make an appropriation for his expenses. Governor Marshall of Indiana has notified the secretary, William George Jordan, that he will not be present, because of a similar oversight.

Accidentally Shoots Grandson.

Eau Claire, Wis., Sept. 12.—While examining a new revolver he had just purchased F. Emery, a car repairer at Altoona, accidentally discharged the weapon, the bullet striking his five-year-old grandson, Ray Emery, entering the mouth and passing out through the neck. It is thought that the injured child will recover.

Chinese Warship Arrives.

New York, Sept. 12.—The Hai Chi, the first Chinese warship to visit this country, has arrived here. The boat will remain a week before visiting Philadelphia, Boston, Newport and Annapolis.

MRS. THURSTON.

Author of "The Masquerader" Dies Suddenly in Ireland.

FAMOUS AUTHORESS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Katherine Cecil Thurston Expires at Hotel in Cork.

Cork, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Katherine Cecil Thurston, famous author of "The Masquerader," "The Gambler" and other books, was found dead in a hotel here.

Mrs. Thurston had been living quietly since her divorce from her author husband, Ernest Temple Thurston, whom she married in 1901. In 1907 Thurston left his wife, declaring that for the purposes of his literary work it was necessary for him to go to the very bottom of society. He took up his residence in the Soho quarter with another woman.

When she secured her divorce Mrs. Thurston told the court that she had offered to forgive her husband if he would return to her. He refused, it was stated, on the ground that he was not worthy. He also complained that his wife was making more money than he.

DEMANDS WILL BE REJECTED

French Reply Said to Be Conciliatory but Firm.

CABINET MEETING IS CALLED

Germany's Demands Such as Could Not Be Accepted and Answer Is Immediately Written.

Paris, Sept. 12.—France's reply to Germany's counter proposals in the Moroccan negotiations has been written and will be laid before the French cabinet for approval. The task of drawing up the reply proved simpler than at first expected, doubtless because the German demands were such as could not be accepted by France.

The premier, M. Caillaux, after conferring with several colleagues, made up his mind to convoke a meeting of the cabinet and sent notices to the ministers. M. Caillaux will lay before them his answer to Germany, after which it will be dispatched by special carrier to the French ambassador at Berlin, who will hand it to the German foreign minister.

It is understood that the reply, while written in a spirit of conciliation, is absolutely firm with regard to the position France has assumed concerning questions of principle from which France will not depart a hair's breadth.

The premier's energetic and businesslike manner of proceeding has had other proof of the absolute unanimity and firmness of the government as to its policy and as a manifestation of the government's desire to do its utmost to shorten the period of uncertainty which is having such prejudicial effects on the markets of the world. It also removes any possibility of charges that France by delay assisted in bringing about further financial distress in Germany.

The broad outlines of Germany's proposals have been communicated to the public, because the government believes that the people have a right to know at this period what is being done. Foreign Minister De Selves also has indicated in a semi-official note that France's reply would be a refusal to accept Germany's conditions. In this French opinion appears to be wholly united and prepared for any contingency.

One point of view in official quarters is that Germany's financial situation, which is expected to reach a climax by the end of September, may tend to moderate Germany's demands.

SHOPMEN WILL NOT STRIKE

Executive Board of Machinists' Union Won't Authorize.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—The strike threatened by the shopmen of the Illinois Central railroad because of the refusal to recognize the system federation of mechanical employes has been averted.

Of chief influence in preventing the strike was the refusal of the executive board of the International Association of Machinists, in session at Davenport, Ia., to authorize the strike on the ground the system federation had not conducted its negotiations properly with the Illinois Central, and because the strike would imperil the working agreements now existing between the railroads and several of the international unions.

As the machinists are important in the Federation of Railroad Shopmen, a strike without the benefit of financial assistance of the international union was considered to be hazardous to the welfare of the federation.

TO PROTECT MISSIONARIES

Navel Force Goes Up the Yangtse River.

Washington, Sept. 12.—All the American naval strength deemed necessary as a precaution is being concentrated as near as possible to the scene of serious disorders in China. Admiral Murdock cabled to the navy department that he sailed on his flagship Saratoga, accompanied by the cruisers New Orleans and Helena, from Shanghai for Nanking. The admiral's report contained nothing regarding the situation in China.

Against the strong current of the Yangtsekiang the three cruisers are likely to make slow headway. They are expected at Nanking by tomorrow. At that point they will relieve some of the light draft gunboats, which will push on up the river to get as near as possible to Szechuen province and afford asylum to the missionaries who have been obliged to leave Chengtu, where the soldiers and rioters have clashed.

ALLEN WILL FIGHT CHARGE

Millionaire Accused of Smuggling Jewelry Into Country.

New York, Sept. 8.—United States District Attorney Wise has learned that at least one of the two wealthy men indicted in the Helen Dwelle Jenkins smuggling case will fight the case to the bitter end.

He is Nathan Allen, the Kenosha (Wis.) millionaire, formerly head of the leather trust and one time admirer of the fascinating divorcee, who, after a quarrel with Allen, is supposed to have given the government information concerning the gigantic plot whereby hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of jewelry were illegally brought into this country.

The other indicted man, John R. Collins, friend of Allen, and a wealthy coal operator in Memphis, has not yet indicated what he will do about the charges.

MAINE GOES WET, SAY FIRST RETURNS

Prohibition Repealed by Majority of 1,400.

Portland, Me., Sept. 12.—Unofficial returns indicate that prohibition has been voted out of the constitution of the state of Maine by a majority of about 1,400.

About twenty-five small towns have not been reported and the vote of these, together with errors incident to the collection of returns by telephone, leaves the exact result in some doubt.

One hundred and twenty thousand voters cast ballots on the question. With the twenty-five towns missing the vote was 60,878 for repeal and 59,563 against a change in the constitution.

As had been predicted, the cities were the chief strongholds of the repeal faction, but the majority of 12,000 in the total city vote was barely sufficient, according to the latest available returns, to offset the vote of the rural communities.

MANYFLOOD REGUGEES DYING

Five Hundred Chinese Perish Daily in Inundated Section.

Shanghai, Sept. 12.—The troops the Chinese government is concentrating to suppress disorders in the Yangtsekiang river flood district will probably see serious fighting soon.

The authorities are so overwhelmed by the disaster's extent that small effort is being made toward relieving the refugees, who are desperate.

The average number of deaths daily among the 70,000 survivors surrounding Nanking alone is approaching 500, of whom perhaps 50 per cent die literally of starvation and the balance of exposure and disease.

Looting and murder are growing rapidly more prevalent. There is still no sign of subsidence of the flood.

FOURTEEN DROWN AT SEA

Schooner With Cargo of Mahogany Burns Off Nicaragua.

New York, Sept. 12.—Fourteen men were drowned in the sinking of the schooner Whisper off the Nicaraguan coast, according to cables received here from Port Limon.

The schooner, commanded by Captain Winston Hall of Philadelphia, carried a cargo of mahogany, which caught fire and burned to the water's edge.

An explosion of gasoline finally sent the ship to the bottom with all on board.

A SINGULAR VEHICLE

By ELINOR STEWART CATON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A seedy man, out at the elbows and looking as though he had slept the night in the park, stopped a gentleman on the sidewalk and said:

"My friend, you haven't seen a family consistin' of a woman and four small children—two boys and two girls, the girls lookin' like me and the boys like their mother—go ridin' by here today in a two story frame house painted yaller?"

"Excuse me, my friend. I'm in a hurry."

The wayfarer passed on, leaving the seedy man standing looking after him as though he felt very much hurt. Leaning up against a tree box, he waited for another person to question. A lady came along, and the man, pulling the rim of his hat, accosted her.

"Beg your pardon, ma'am. Have you seen anything of a poor woman with four children enjoyin' theirselves on an afternoon ride in a yaller house on wheels down this here street?"

The lady looked sorrowfully at the man, took out her portemonnaie, picked out a silver coin to the value of 10 cents, gave it to him and walked on. He looked at the retreating lady, then down at the coin in his hand, and didn't seem to understand.

The next person to whom he applied was a benevolent looking gentleman with mutton chop whiskers and spectacles.

"I'm lookin'," said the seedy man, "for a family"— and stopped short.

"Well, my good man, tell me about what family you're looking for."

"I've tole that to two pussons already, and they don't seem to know what I'm talkin' about. I thort I'd just call 'em a fam'bly to you, so's I wouldn't mix you up, and say nothin' about the rest of it."

"But how can I help you to become reunited to this family without your telling me more about them?"

"Well, if you're sure you'll understand, I'm lookin' for 'em to ride by here about this time in a yaller house enjoyin' theirselves"—

"In a yellow house?"

"Yes, two story, shingle roof."

"My good man," said the other after contemplating him thoughtfully for some time, "tell me where you live. I'm going to take you home."

"My residence is anywhere from 74 Union street to no number at all at present, Hopkins street."

"Poor fellow!" sighed the benevolent man.

"I tole you you wouldn't understand me. None o' the others did. What's the use o' my tellin' people all about it? They only think I'm gone daft."

He looked very much troubled. Taking out his bandanna handkerchief, he blew his nose sonorously.

"Come with me," said the benevolent man coaxingly.

"I don't want to go anywheres with nobody. I just want to catch my wife and children as they go by and enjoy the rest o' the ride with 'em."

"I think I can take you where you'll learn all about it. Come."

"Where you goin' to take me?"

"Oh, I'll take you where you'll be cared for."

"I don't want to be cared for. I want to know whether my family has gone past. There's a puff of smoke blowin' around the corner now. I shouldn't wonder if it's them!"

"I see. They're coming in an automobile. You confused it with a yellow house."

"I didn't do no such thing. The smoke I'm talkin' about comes out o' the chimbly."

The gentleman assumed an authoritative tone. "Now, my man, either walk with me to a police station or I'll call a policeman and have you taken there by force. You're off your head. I don't know whether you are a dangerous lunatic or not, but you need to be shut up, if not for the public good, for your own."

"I knowed it," said the man lugubriously. "I knowed if I tole you the hull thing I'd get myself into trouble."

"Will you come?"

"Who are you anyways?"

"I'm the president of the Society of General Charities. Now, you know that I intend you no harm. I wish to help you."

"But I don't need no help. There! There's another puff o' smoke. I reckon they'll be turnin' the corner purty soon. Will you wait a few minutes? If they don't come along just as I said they would I'll go with you."

"Instead of waiting I'll go with you If you are satisfied the smoke you see comes from another cause than what you suppose, perhaps you will go with me."

"Reckon I'll risk it."

They walked down the street to the one where they saw the smoke and, turning into it, saw a windlass pulled around by a horse. Ropes led from it to a two story yellow house about 100 feet away, which was being moved in the middle of the street.

"There she are!" exclaimed the seedy man. "Come on. I'll show you the family."

The gentleman hesitated. Then, with an expression of disgruntlement, he was about to go on his way when he changed his mind and followed the other. Sitting in a window darning stockings was a woman, while children were running about.

"Hello, Mol!" said the seedy man.

"Hello, John!" said the woman.

The benevolent gentleman took a bill out of his pocket, handed it to the mover and walked away.

The Coup de Monserrat.

The history of the sword stroke the Parisian fencers call the "coup de Monserrat" is romantic. The hero of the story was a young Parisian musician engaged to be married to a young lady of Bordeaux. Quarreling with a cousin of his fiancee, he got his ears boxed at the Bordeaux club. Ignorant of fencing, he dared not resent the insult and renounced his engagement. But he also took fencing lessons from one Monserrat, a maitre d'armes of Toulouse. Monserrat taught him one trick only, and he practiced it for a year. At the end of that time he returned to the Bordeaux club, slapped his man's face and, being called out, instantly ran his opponent through the body with his cunning lunge.

Grease Versus Gravity.

A professor in Yale university delights in telling of his experience with an inventor of the unlettered genius type who came to the professor with a model of a perpetual motion machine.

"H'm; looks plausible," observed the professor, "but it won't work. What are you going to do about gravity?"

"Gravity!" said the visitor scornfully. "T'ell wit' gravity; we'll use plenty of grease."—Cosmopolitan.

The Good Time Coming.

Hop Sing is a Chinese laundryman with a cheerful though somewhat unusual philosophy. After bewailing the hard times and lack of business he added smilingly. "Bimeby evrybody be lich, velly lich, bimeby." "How's that?" "Alla poor people got no money; no can eat. Then alla poor people die."—Argonaut.

Carried to Extremes.

A SINGULAR VEHICLE

By ELINOR STEWART CATON.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A seedy man, out at the elbows and looking as though he had slept the night in the park, stopped a gentleman on the sidewalk and said:

"My friend, you haven't seen a family consistin' of a woman and four small children—two boys and two girls, the girls lookin' like me and the boys like their mother—go ridin' by here today in a two story frame house painted yaller?"

"Excuse me, my friend. I'm in a hurry."

The wayfarer passed on, leaving the seedy man standing looking after him as though he felt very much hurt. Leaning up against a tree box, he waited for another person to question. A lady came along, and the man, pulling the rim of his hat, accosted her.

"Beg your pardon, ma'am. Have you seen anything of a poor woman with four children enjoyin' theirselves on an afternoon ride in a yaller house on wheels down this here street?"

The lady looked sorrowfully at the man, took out her portemonnaie, picked out a silver coin to the value of 10 cents, gave it to him and walked on. He looked at the retreating lady, then down at the coin in his hand, and didn't seem to understand.

The next person to whom he applied was a benevolent looking gentleman with mutton chop whiskers and spectacles.

"I'm lookin'," said the seedy man, "for a family"— and stopped short.

"Well, my good man, tell me about what family you're looking for."

"I've tole that to two pussons already, and they don't seem to know what I'm talkin' about. I thort I'd just call 'em a fam'bly to you, so's I wouldn't mix you up, and say nothin' about the rest of it."

"But how can I help you to become reunited to this family without your telling me more about them?"

"Well, if you're sure you'll understand, I'm lookin' for 'em to ride by here about this time in a yaller house enjoyin' theirselves"—

"In a yellow house?"

"Yes, two story, shingle roof."

"My good man," said the other after contemplating him thoughtfully for some time, "tell me where you live. I'm going to take you home."

"My residence is anywhere from 74 Union street to no number at all at present, Hopkins street."

"Poor fellow!" sighed the benevolent man.

"I tole you you wouldn't understand me. None o' the others did. What's the use o' my tellin' people all about it? They only think I'm gone daft."

He looked very much troubled. Taking out his bandanna handkerchief, he blew his nose sonorously.

"Come with me," said the benevolent man coaxingly.

"I don't want to go anywheres with nobody. I just want to catch my wife and children as they go by and enjoy the rest o' the ride with 'em."

"I think I can take you where you'll learn all about it. Come."

"Where you goin' to take me?"

"Oh, I'll take you where you'll be cared for."

"I don't want to be cared for. I want to know whether my family has gone past. There's a puff of smoke blowin' around the cornder now. I shouldn't wonder if it's them!"

"I see. They're coming in an automobile. You confused it with a yellow house."

"I didn't do no such thing. The smoke I'm talkin' about comes out o' the chimbly."

The gentleman assumed an authoritative tone. "Now, my man, either walk with me to a police station or I'll call a policeman and have you taken there by force. You're off your head. I don't know whether you are a dangerous lunatic or not, but you need to be shut up, if not for the public good, for your own."

"I knowed it," said the man lugubriously. "I knowed if I tole you the hull thing I'd get myself into trouble."

"Will you come?"

"Who are you anyways?"

"I'm the president of the Society of General Charities. Now, you know that I intend you no harm. I wish to help you."

"But I don't need no help. There! There's another puff o' smoke. I reckon they'll be turnin' the corner purty soon. Will you wait a few minutes? If they don't come along just as I said they would I'll go with you."

"Instead of waiting I'll go with you. If you are satisfied the smoke you see comes from another cause than what you suppose, perhaps you will go with me."

"Reckon I'll risk it."

They walked down the street to the one where they saw the smoke and, turning into it, saw a windlass pulled around by a horse. Ropes led from it to a two story yellow house about 100 feet away, which was being moved in the middle of the street.

"There she are!" exclaimed the seedy man. "Come on. I'll show you the family."

The gentleman hesitated. Then, with an expression of disgruntlement, he was about to go on his way when he changed his mind and followed the other. Sitting in a window, darning stockings was a woman, while children were running about.

"Hello, Moll!" said the seedy man.

"Hello, John!" said the woman.

The benevolent gentleman took a bill out of his pocket, handed it to the mover and walked away.

The Coup de Monserrat.

The history of the sword stroke the Parisian fencers call the "coup de Monserrat" is romantic. The hero of the story was a young Parisian musician engaged to be married to a young lady of Bordeaux. Quarreling with a cousin of his fiancee, he got his ears boxed at the Bordeaux club. Ignorant of fencing, he dared not resent the insult and renounced his engagement. But he also took fencing lessons from one Monserrat, a maitre d'armes of Toulouse. Monserrat taught him one trick only, and he practiced it for a year. At the end of that time he returned to the Bordeaux club, slapped his man's face and, being called out, instantly ran his opponent through the body with his cunning lunge.

"Gravity!" said the visitor scornfully. "T'ell wit gravity; we'll use plenty of grease."—Cosmopolitan.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

In an address before the Boston Economic Club, January 21, 1908, Mr. Sidney J. Dillon, of Des Moines, Iowa, explained the commission plan of city government as adopted by Des Moines in June, 1908. In his introduction he said:

"After giving due weight and attention to the various problems which enter into the question of local self-government, one will find that there are but three vital elements—each exerting a wide influence—which constitute the basis for the success or failure of every municipal government. These elements are: first, the character and ability of the officials holding municipal office; second, the system, by which these officials are elected, and the affairs of the city administered; and third, the extent of well-directed activity and interest, manifested on the part of the citizens in the conduct of all matters pertaining to the management of their local government. It is perhaps difficult to determine which of these factors is the more important, for while capable men in office may accomplish a great deal, even tho the system be unwieldly, yet the fact remains, that, unless the public,—the best citizens—participate in public affairs, we will not be able to induce representative men to run for office. And further, until we have had some modification of our present municipal election laws, it will not be possible to nominate, or elect, these representative men, even tho they should consent to serve the municipality.

"Last June (1908) the citizens of our city adopted a new charter, which has since become famous as the Des Moines plan of city government. This charter presents, perhaps, the most radical and important experiment in municipal administration ever made in this country. The new municipal system is such, that it will afford us an opportunity of demonstrating the fact, that the conspicuous failure of city government, in the United States, is due in part to politicians of mediocre ability now in office, and in part to the fact that our system has been based upon a misconception of the functions of a city government. The fact is we have not had, until the past decade, a satisfactory system of government in the United States.

"In drafting this charter there were four particular objects which we wished to accomplish by the Des Moines plan. First, we wished to create a municipal office which would have so many attractive features, that it would serve as an inducement to men of ability and character to seek political positions. We also wished to eliminate, as far as possible, those things which have heretofore been the means of squelching the ambition of desirable men seeking political recognition; we wished further to minimize, as far as possible, the chances of election of politicians—those parasites who, through manipulation and corrupt influence, are enabled to hold office, year after year; not for the benefit of the people, but for the purposes of personal self-aggrandizement. The second object we had in view was to so centralize the authority of government in a small deliberative body that we might have a fixed responsibility, and be able to turn over to this small governing board the complete power and control of city affairs. The third object we had in view was to simplify the present complex system; to dispense, if we could, with the numerous boards, committees and departments, with their over-lapping and conflicting duties, and to substitute for the present confusion in government, which results from a divided authority, a definite and fixed responsibility for every act of the administration. The fourth object was to establish a more democratic form of city government; to extend the power of the people, and to place in their hands the means whereby they might exercise an effective control over city officials and the acts of the administration."

The plan adopted by Des Moines is similar to the plan already outlined in this paper. The plan has been in operation there for three years, and Judson C. Welliver in Munsey's Magazine for August, 1911, sums up their progress in part, as follows:

"From being a dirty, ill-governed, crime-ridden town, the Iowa capital has become one of the show places of ter, formed by grouping public build- the middle West. The new civic centings on both sides of the Des Moines river, is widely regarded as the finest effect of the kind in any American city. That the handsomely boulevarded, generously parked, gorgeously lighted, well-ordered place which Des Moines is to-day, could be developed in so short a time from the Des Moines of four years ago, is simply a wonder. If it could be brought to the realization of other cities, it would be certain to prove the most potent argument for the new system."

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

That the fire waste is increasing year by year and becoming more and more appalling within the state of Minnesota is certain.

To determine by a congress of representative men, interested in the preservation of the wealth of our state, what the loss of property has been by reason of fire, the cause therefor, and how such waste can be reduced, will contribute greatly to the advancement of this state and to the economic welfare of its people.

The magnitude of loss of property by fire, as well as the cost of fire prevention, is not grasped by the average man. It is estimated that approximately one-half a billion dollars is annually expended by the people of the United States for this purpose,—a sum one-half as great as the annual budget of our federal government. Nearly two hundred fifty million dollars represents the loss by fire. A sum which would be equaled if a per capita tax of $2.71 were collected for every man, woman and child in the United States. In no European country does the per capita loss exceed 50 cents.

During the past fifteen years computations indicate that approximately two billion dollars and twenty thousand lives have been "sacrificed to fire."

Minnesota has borne too great a part of this enormous loss of property.

The loss of timber in our state by forest fires is almost beyond computation. Property destroyed by fire is a total and absolute loss. Every indication points to an increase of loss by fire in our state during the year 1911.

The season of the year when fires are wont to increase in number is at hand. The heating stove of the householder is again to be utilized, and the smoke therefrom must penetrate the swallow's nest before escaping.

It is believed that more than fifty per cent of our fire loss is due to incendiarism or negligence. Much can be done for the prevention of fires by criminals, or fires caused by carelessness. Carelessness in the use of fire and lights in housekeeping is common. Carelessness in the use of matches is universal. Inflammable rubbish in factories is too often found. Dark and dirty hallways where matches are scratched and where cigar and cigaretet stubs are thrown are too frequently the cause of fires. Tenants visit dark basements by means of candles, or old-fashioned oil lamps. ployed. Oily waste is not rarely found in packing houses, factories and lumber yards. Property is not carefully watched and those things that produce fire are improperly guarded.

It is meet that our people should be instructed and caused to realize that fire waste is impoverishing our commonwealth.

Taking into account these vital considerations for the welfare of our state, I hereby do proclaim the 8th day of November, 1911, to be known as Minnesota Fire Prevention Day, and urge that it be so recognized and observed in all the departments of the state, in all public and private institutions of learning, and by all organizations and persons interested in the social and economic uplift of our people. It is urged that the Press, as the strongest factor in the development of public sentiment, impress the importance of this movement upon our people.

And I do further proclaim the holding of a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress, to be held in the Palm Room, Saint Paul Hotel, in the city of Saint Paul, on said 8th day of November, and earnestly invite the entire citizenship of the state to participate and co-operate in carrying out the plans of this gathering, that its purposes may be fully realized.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state to be hereto affixed at the capitol, in the city of St. Paul, this 7th day of September, A. D. 1911.

CHANGES IN FORESTRY LAWS

The following sections, referring to fires, drawn from the Forestry Law enacted by the recent legislature are of interest to everybody living in or near forests or on the prairie. The law from which these sections are taken repeals all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with it. Section 20 is of special interest to road overseers and section 24 to township officers.

Percy C. Records,
District Forest Ranger,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Section 11. Under he direction of the state forester, the district rangers are charged with preventing and extinguishing forest fires in their respective districts, and the performance of such other duties as may be They may arrest without warrant required by the state forester. any person found violating any provision of this chapter, take him before a magistrate and there make complaint. When the district rangers shall have information that such violation has been committed, they shall without delay make similar complaint, and have action for trespass committed in the discharge of their duties.

Section 12. At any time district rangers, with the approval of the state forester, may employ suitable persons to be known as fire patrolmen, permanently to remain upon and patrol such territory, state or private as may be assigned to them as long as may be required to prevent and extinguish any fire. Each such patrolman so employed shall be supplied with the necessary equipment. The state forester and the district ranger may, and if they are absent and fires are actually burning in the forest the fire patrolmen may summon any made person of the age of 18 years and upwards to assist in stopping the fire, and may incur any other necessary and reasonable expense for the same purpose, but shall promptly report the same to the district ranger.

Any person, summoned by any official of the state who is physically able and refuses to assist shall be guilty of a misdeamenor and shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $25.

Section 15. Where and whenever in the judgment of the state forester there is or may be danger of starting and spreading of fires from slashings and debris from the cutting of timber of any kind and for any purpose, the state forester will notify the individual, firm or corporation, by whom the said timber has been or is being cut, ordering them to dispose of the slashings and debris as he may direct. Where conditions do not permit the burning of the slashings and debris over the entire area so covered, the state forester may require the person, firm or corporation by whom the timber was cut, to dispose of such sashings and debris in such a way as to establish a safe fire line around the area requiring such protection, the said fire line to be of a width and of a character satisfactory to the state forester.

When any person, firm or corporation shall have been notified by the state forester to dispose of slashings and debris, either by entirely consuming the same or establishing a fire line sufficient for the protection of adjoining property, and fails to comply with such instructions, the said person, firm or corporation shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 and not exceeding $100 and costs of prosecution for each violation thereof or failure to comply therewith.

When any such branches, slashings or debris are left unburned contrary to instructions of the state forester, the state forester may go upon the premises with such force of men as may be necessary, and burn such branches, slashings and debris, and the expense thereof shall be a lien upon the land on which they are situated, enforced as liens for the improvement of real estate are enforced, and such expense shall be a prima facie valid claim that may be collected from the person, firm or corporation who cut the timber or wood from which the said slashings and debris were made.

Section 16. Any person or corporation who cuts or fells trees or brushes of any kind in clearing land for roadbed or right of way for any railroad, highway or trail, shall in the manner and at the time as above prescribed burn the slashings and all combustible material except fuel and merchantable timber.

Any person or corporation who cuts or feels trees or bushes of any kind in clearing land for agricultural or pasturage purposes, or who in any way clears land, is prohibited from setting fire to the slashings, brush, roots or excavated stumps or other combustible material on such land and letting the fire run; the material must be disposed of pursuant to the regulations of the state forester.

Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than ten days nor more than ninety days.

Section 18. Every employee of the state forestry board and every person lawfully commanded to assist in enforcing any of the provisions of this chapter, who shall unjustifiably refuse or neglect to perform his duty; every person who shall kindle a fire on or near forest, brush or prairie land and leave it unquenched, or to be a party thereto, or who shall set fire to brush, stumps, dry grass, field, stubble or other material and fail to extinguish the same before it has endangered the property of another;

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

In an address before the Boston Economic Club, January 21, 1908, Mr. Sidney J. Dillon, of Des Moines, Iowa, explained the commission plan of city government as adopted by Des Moines in June, 1908. In his introduction he said:

"After giving due weight and attention to the various problems which enter into the question of local self-government, one will find that there are but three vital elements—each exerting a wide influence—which constitute the basis for the success or failure of every municipal government. These elements are: first, the character and ability of the officials holding municipal office; second, the system, by which these officials are elected, and the affairs of the city administered; and third, the extent of well-directed activity and interest, manifested on the part of the citizens in the conduct of all matters pertaining to the management of their local government. It is perhaps difficult to determine which of these factors is the more important, for while capable men in office may accomplish a great deal, even tho the system be unwieldly, yet the fact remains, that, unless the public,—the best citizens—participate in public affairs, we will not be able to induce representative men to run for office. And further, until we have had some modification of our present municipal election laws, it will not be possible to nominate, or elect, these representative men, even tho they should consent to serve the municipality.

"Last June (1908) the citizens of our city adopted a new charter, which has since become famous as the Des Moines plan of city government. This charter presents, perhaps, the most radical and important experiment in municipal administration ever made in this country. The new municipal system is such, that it will afford us an opportunity of demonstrating the fact, that the conspicuous failure of city government, in the United States, is due in part to politicians of mediocre ability now in office, and in part to the fact that our system has been based upon a misconception of the functions of a city government. The fact is we have not had, until the past decade, a satisfactory system of government in the United States.

"In drafting this charter there were four particular objects which we wished to accomplish by the Des Moines plan. First, we wished to create a municipal office which would have so many attractive features, that it would serve as an inducement to men of ability and character to seek political positions. We also wished to eliminate, as far as possible, those things which have heretofore been the means of squelching the ambition of desirable men seeking political recognition; we wished further to minimize, as far as possible, the chances of election of politicians—those parasites who, through manipulation and corrupt influence, are enabled to hold office, year after year; not for the benefit of the people, but for the purposes of personal self-aggrandizement. The second object we had in view was to so centralize the authority of government in a small deliberative body that we might have a fixed responsibility, and be able to turn over to this small governing board the complete power and control of city affairs. The third object we had in view was to simplify the present complex system; to dispense, if we could, with the numerous boards, committees and departments, with their over-lapping and conflicting duties, and to substitute for the present confusion in government, which results from a divided authority, a definite and fixed responsibility for every act of the administration. The fourth object was to establish a more democratic form of city government; to extend the power of the people, and to place in their hands the means whereby they might exercise an effective control over city officials and the acts of the administration."

The plan adopted by Des Moines is similar to the plan already outlined in this paper. The plan has been in operation there for three years, and Judson C. Welliver in Munsey's Magazine for August, 1911, sums up their progress in part, as follows:

"From being a dirty, ill-governed, crime-ridden town, the Iowa capital has become one of the show places of ter, formed by grouping public build- the middle West. If it could be brought to the realization of other cities, it would be certain to prove the most potent argument for the new system."

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

In an address before the Boston Economic Club, January 21, 1908, Mr. Sidney J. Dillon, of Des Moines, Iowa, explained the commission plan of city government as adopted by Des Moines in June, 1908. In his introduction he said:

"After giving due weight and attention to the various problems which enter into the question of local self-government, one will find that there are but three vital elements—each exerting a wide influence—which constitute the basis for the success or failure of every municipal government. These elements are: first, the character and ability of the officials holding municipal office; second, the system, by which these officials are elected, and the affairs of the city administered; and third, the extent of well-directed activity and interest, manifested on the part of the citizens in the conduct of all matters pertaining to the management of their local government. It is perhaps difficult to determine which of these factors is the more important, for while capable men in office may accomplish a great deal, even tho the system be unwieldly, yet the fact remains, that, unless the public,—the best citizens—participate in public affairs, we will not be able to induce representative men to run for office. And further, until we have had some modification of our present municipal election laws, it will not be possible to nominate, or elect, these representative men, even tho they should consent to serve the municipality.

"Last June (1908) the citizens of our city adopted a new charter, which has since become famous as the Des Moines plan of city government. This charter presents, perhaps, the most radical and important experiment in municipal administration ever made in this country. The new municipal system is such, that it will afford us an opportunity of demonstrating the fact, that the conspicuous failure of city government, in the United States, is due in part to politicians of mediocre ability now in office, and in part to the fact that our system has been based upon a misconception of the functions of a city government. The fact is we have not had, until the past decade, a satisfactory system of government in the United States.

"In drafting this charter there were four particular objects which we wished to accomplish by the Des Moines plan. First, we wished to create a municipal office which would have so many attractive features, that it would serve as an inducement to men of ability and character to seek political positions. We also wished to eliminate, as far as possible, those things which have heretofore been the means of squelching the ambition of desirable men seeking political recognition; we wished further to minimize, as far as possible, the chances of election of politicians—those parasites who, through manipulation and corrupt influence, are enabled to hold office, year after year; not for the benefit of the people, but for the purposes of personal self-aggrandizement. The second object we had in view was to so centralize the authority of government in a small deliberative body that we might have a fixed responsibility, and be able to turn over to this small governing board the complete power and control of city affairs. The third object we had in view was to simplify the present complex system; to dispense, if we could, with the numerous boards, committees and departments, with their over-lapping and conflicting duties, and to substitute for the present confusion in government, which results from a divided authority, a definite and fixed responsibility for every act of the administration. The fourth object was to establish a more democratic form of city government; to extend the power of the people, and to place in their hands the means whereby they might exercise an effective control over city officials and the acts of the administration."

The plan adopted by Des Moines is similar to the plan already outlined in this paper. The plan has been in operation there for three years, and Judson C. Welliver in Munsey's Magazine for August, 1911, sums up their progress in part, as follows:

"From being a dirty, ill-governed, crime-ridden town, the Iowa capital has become one of the show places of ter, formed by grouping public buildthe middle West. The new civic centings on both sides of the Des Moines river, is widely regarded as the finest effect of the kind in any American city. That the handsomely boulevarded, generously parked, gorgeously lighted, well-ordered place which Des Moines is to-day could be developed in so short a time from the Des Moines of four years ago, is simply a wonder. If it could be brought to the realization of other cities it would be certain to prove the most potent argument for the new system [illegible]

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

That the fire waste is increasing year by year and becoming more and more appalling within the state of Minnesota is certain.

To determine by a congress of representative men, interested in the preservation of the wealth of our state, what the loss of property has been by reason of fire, the cause thereof, and how such waste can be reduced, will contribute greatly to the advancement of this state and to the economic welfare of its people.

The magnitude of loss of property by fire, as well as the cost of fire prevention, is not grasped by the average man. It is estimated that approximately one-half a billion dollars is annually expended by the people of the United States for this purpose,—a sum one-half as great as the annual budget of our federal government. Nearly two hundred fifty million dollars represents the loss by fire. A sum which would be equaled if a per capita tax of $2.71 were collected for every man, woman and child in the United States. In no European country does the per capita loss exceed 50 cents.

During the past fifteen years computations indicate that approximately two billion dollars and twenty thousand lives have been "sacrificed to fire."

Minnesota has borne too great a part of this enormous loss of property.

The loss of timber in our state by forest fires is almost beyond computation. Property destroyed by fire is a total and absolute loss. Every indication points to an increase of loss by fire in our state during the year 1911.

The season of the year when fires are wont to increase in number is at hand. The heating stove of the householder is again to be utilized, and the smoke therefrom must penetrate the swallow's nest before escaping.

It is believed that more than fifty per cent of our fire loss is due to incendiarism or negligence. Much can be done for the prevention of fires by criminals, or fires caused by carelessness. Carelessness in the use of fire and lights in housekeeping is common. Carelessness in the use of matches is universal. Inflammable rubbish in factories is too often found. Dark and dirty hallways where matches are scratched and where cigar and cigaretet stubs are thrown are too frequently the cause of fires. Tenants visit dark basements by means of candles, or old-fashioned oil lamps. ployed. Oily waste is not rarely found in packing houses, factories and lumber yards. Property is not carefully watched and those things that produce fire are improperly guarded.

It is meet that our people should be instructed and caused to realize that fire waste is impoverishing our commonwealth.

Taking into account these vital considerations for the welfare of our state, I hereby do proclaim the 8th day of November, 1911, to be known as Minnesota Fire Prevention Day, and urge that it be so recognized and observed in all the departments of the state, in all public and private institutions of learning, and by all organizations and persons interested in the social and economic uplift of our people. It is urged that the Press, as the strongest factor in the development of public sentiment, impress the importance of this movement upon our people.

And I do further proclaim the holding of a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress, to be held in the Palm Room, Saint Paul Hotel, in the city of Saint Paul, on said 8th day of November, and earnestly invite the entire citizenship of the state to participate and co-operate in carrying out the plans of this gathering, that its purposes may be fully realized.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state to be hereto affixed at the capitol, in the city of St. Paul, this 7th day of September, A. D. 1911.

Adolph O. Eberhart,
Governor.

Julius A. Schmahl,
(Seal.) Secretary of State.

CHANGES IN FORESTRY LAWS

The following sections, referring to fires, drawn from the Forestry Law enacted by the recent legislature are of interest to everybody living in or near forests or on the prairie. The law from which these sections are taken repeals all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with it. Section 20 is of special interest to road overseers and section 24 to township officers.

Percy C. Records,
District Forest Ranger,
Thief River Falls, Minn.

Section 11. Under he direction of the state forester, the district rangers are charged with preventing and extinguishing forest fires in their respective districts, and the performance of such other duties as may be

They may arrest without warrant required by the state forester. any person found violating any provision of this chapter, take him before a magistrate and there make complaint. When the district rangers shall have information that such violation has been committed, they shall without delay make similar complaint, and have action for trespass committed in the discharge of their duties.

Section 12. At any time district rangers, with the approval of the state forester, may employ suitable persons to be known as fire patrolmen, permanently to remain upon and patrol such territory, state or private as may be assigned to them as long as may be required to prevent and extinguish any fire. Each such patrolman so employed shall be supplied with the necessary equipment. The state forester and the district ranger may, and if they are absent and fires are actually burning in the forest the fire patrolmen may summon any made person of the age of 18 years and upwards to assist in stopping the fire, and may incur any other necessary and reasonable expense for the same purpose, but shall promptly report the same to the district ranger.

Any person summoned by any official of the state who is physically able and refuses to assist shall be guilty of a misdeamenor and shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $25.

Section 15. Where and whenever in the judgment of the state forester there is or may be danger of starting and spreading of fires from slashings and debris from the cutting of timber of any kind and for any purpose, the state forester will notify the individual, firm or corporation, by whom the said timber has been or is being cut, ordering them to dispose of the slashings and debris as he may direct. Where conditions do not permit the burning of the slashings and debris over the entire area so covered, the state forester may require the person, firm or corporation by whom the timber was cut, to dispose of such sashings and debris in such a way as to establish a safe fire line around the area requiring such protection, the said fire line to be of a width and of a character satisfactory to the state forester.

When any person, firm or corporation shall have been notified by the state forester to dispose of slashings and debris, either by entirely consuming the same or establishing a fire line sufficient for the protection of adjoining property, and fails to comply with such instructions, the said person, firm or corporation shall be deemed guilty of a misdeamenor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 and not exceeding $100 and costs of prosecution for each violation thereof or failure to comply therewith.

When any such branches, slashings or debris are left unburned contrary to instructions of the state forester, the state forester may go upon the premises with such force of men as may be necessary, and burn such branches, slashings and debris, and the expense thereof shall be a lien upon the land on which they are situated, enforced as liens for the improvement of real estate are enforced, and such expense shall be a prima facie valid claim that may be collected from the person, firm or corporation who cut the timber or wood from which the said slashings and debris were made.

Section 16. Any person or corporation who cuts or fells trees or brushes of any kind in clearing land for roadbed or right of way for any railroad, highway or trail, shall in the manner and at the time as above prescribed burn the slashings and all combustible material except fuel and merchantable timber.

Any person or corporation who cuts or feels trees or bushes of any kind in clearing land for agricultural or pasturage purposes, or who in any way clears land, is prohibited from setting fire to the slashings, brush, roots or excavated stumps or other combustible material on such land and letting the fire run; the material must be disposed of pursuant to the regulations of the state forester.

Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dolars, nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than ten days nor more than ninety days.

Section 18. Every employee of the state forestry board and every person lawfully commanded to assist in enforcing any of the provisions of this chapter, who shall unjustifiably refuse or neglect to perform his duty; every person who shall kindle a fire on, or near forest, brush or prairie land and leave it unquenched, or to be a party thereto, or who shall set fire to brush, stumps, dry grass, field, stubble or other material and fail to extinguish the same before it has endangered the property of another;

Greatness.

Greatness is self conscious, not in the ordinary sense of that phrase, but in the sense that denotes consciousness of its possession.—William E. Simonds.

Women on the Stage.

The earliest mention of actresses was in 1611, when Coryat in his "Crudities" gave this description of a production at the Theater of Venice, Italy: "I saw women act, a thing I never saw before. They performed with as good a grace, action, gesture, as ever I saw any masculine actor."

Not Going That Way.

"Miss Adkins, there is something I desire very much to ask you."

"Oh, Mr. Williston—I mean Fred—I'm sure I should be delighted to hear—that is, I mean what is there that you can possibly wish to ask me?"

"Would you be willing to go on a long journey with me?"

"A very, very long journey, Fred?"

"Yes, a very, very long journey."

"Yes, I will go with you. Of course I—I suppose it is the journey that a man and a woman take together only once in a lifetime?"

"Well, as a rule I suppose it would not be taken more than once. You see, my mother and I are thinking of taking a trip to Japan, and she thought it would be nice if I could find some one who would be willing to go as a sort of traveling companion and maid to her in return for having her expenses paid."

"Oh! Well, you just tell your homely mother that when I wish to hire out I'll look for some other kind of a job."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Father's Dilemma.

A parent's life is one long responsibility. It's a wonder that so many of the genus discharge their duties so acceptably. A writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer has discovered another parental problem, or perhaps he merely calls attention to one which many fathers have discovered for themselves.

"How's the family?" one inquired of a happily married west sider yesterday.

"Well, my children are at a difficult age now."

"Difficult? Why, they've all passed the measles and teething stage, have they not?"

"Long ago. But you don't know a father's troubles. My children are at the age where if I use slang my wife says I'm setting a bad example, and if I speak correctly the kids think I'm a back number. Which would you do?"

In a Japanese Sleeping Car.

It was at night we had our first experience in a Japanese sleeping car. The track is narrow gauge, and the standard sleeping cars have six seats running lengthwise, each seating two passengers, with a center aisle. The upper berth is the regular Pullman style, and a section will accommodate two passengers. The night was during the extreme heat of midsummer, the car was crowded, and in addition to the regular curtains each berth was provided with a mosquito bar, which added to the general discomfort. Passengers were taken on and let down at all stops, so there was a constant procession through the aisle all night. Part of the car was reserved for local accommodation, and those who sat up smoked incessantly, so that long before morning the atmosphere became intolerable.—Railway Age Gazette.

Submarines at Sea.

Equilibrium is almost as difficult to maintain for a submarine vessel as for an aeroplane. With modern large submarines the act of diving is performed when the vessels have headway. The bow is depressed by horizontal rudders, and the vessel moves obliquely downward. The desired depth having been attained, the steersman must so manage the horizontal rudders that the vessel shall practically maintain its level; but, in fact, its course becomes really an undulating one. There must be no movement of men or weights in the vessel without immediate compensation to restore and maintain the balance, else the submarine may dive to a disastrous depth. Manual control has been found better than automatic control.

Mesmerism.

Frederick Anthony Mesmer, the founder of mesmerism, was a German physician of Merseberg. His thesis setting forth the science of mesmerism was published in 1766. Mesmer contended that the heavenly bodies diffused through the universe a subtle fluid, which acts on the nervous system of all animated beings and especially upon that of man. He gained a great number of followers and realized a splendid fortune. A committee of physicians and "philosophers" investigated his pretensions, which were finally exposed in 1784. Notwithstanding this, however, Mesmer continued to have many friends and followers, so great was the personal "magnetism" of the man.

Superstition That Is Ancient.

In many parts of Great Britain the superstition still survives that it folly to save a drowning man, as he will sooner or later do an injury to his rescuer. The superstition comes down from our ancestors, yet traces of it exist among the Sioux and other Indians, who seem to have inherited it from aboriginal sources. The belief is most prevalent in Cornwall and various parts of Scotland.

CROOKSTON SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE.

Farmers are paying more attention to the live stock end of their business than ever before, but not more than they should. In most cases losses come because the right animals are not kept and bred, because the feed used is not suitable, or because diseases attack the stock. The right kind of information is going out among the farmers through the Agricultural schools and colleges. The state Agricultural school, located at the experiment farm, near Crookston, realizes fully the importance of giving strong courses in animal and dairy husbandry. Two expert feeders and teachers are employed to give attention to that work. Prof. F. H. Sargent has special fitness for the dairy line, and Prof. R. B. Baxter for the care, breeding and feeding of horses, swine, beef cattle and sheep. Not only are there representatives of dairy cattle, but in the state farm herd will be found other types, as well as representatives of various breeds of farm animals. The boys who attend the state agricultural school at Crookston learn how to become expert stockmen. There is nothing so profitable to a man as the income from a well selected and well bred herd. The young men watch the care of the animals, they become good actual operations of the feeding and judges of stock and when they go out, put into practice the training received. The school has twelve specialists teaching and showing by actual demonstrations, scientific agriculture. There is a splendid opportunity offered to young men in attending such a school where every day brings home some need and valuable fact that will increase his success later. Supt. Selvig is using every effort to make these departments turn out young men ready to manage large stock farms and to become good farmers.

Considerable interest is being manifested already concerning who shall represent Minnesota at large in Congress for two years following the next general election. A number of men have been suggested from different sections of the state, but the main argument put forth in favor of the most of them is that they are entitled to this honor as a fit recognition for partisan services in the past. This is entirely too low a standard to put on the man suitable to represent this state at large adequately, especially as the state has already a number of congressmen who content themselves with reaping honor from the position they hold, but whose services for the state and nation are yet to be heard of. The voters of this state are not inclined to send a decorative figure to Washington to represent them, when the time is at hand for the initiation and advancement of fundamental question touching the future welfare and prosperity of the state. The people are growing tired of half-way men and measures, and will demand ability and merit in men who seek to represent them. One question alone affecting this state directly and the nation indirectly is big enough to engage the attention of a creative and powerful man at Washington, namely, the reclamation of the 5,832,308 acres of rich but idle swamp lands lying unproductive in our state at present. And of equal importance to future generations in the state is the conservation of the commomwealth. These are not visionary figures and imaginary conditions. They are facts that can be translated into utility by the right man if he is called upon to apply himeslf to their solution. In order that the vast areas of these lands in Minnesota may be developed, the federal government must be interested in the project. It costs too much for the state to reclaim these lands alone. According to figures arrived at by competent men after careful examination, reclamation of these lands in our state would increase its value in excess of all expenditures for such reclamation at least $250,000,000.00. These figures being based on the present amount of population. As population increases and land becomes more valuable, who can foretell the value of these lands, reclaimed, in half a century hence. It is no new venture to such a scheme, as in 1902 congress passed the national reclamation act making possible the expenditure by the government of over $60,000,000 for arid land reclamation by irrigation. A national swamp reclamation act would be of equal benefit and prove the greatest source of development in this state that has as yet been even suggested. But in order to accomplish such a thing, Minnesota must send to Washington a congressman-at-large like the Hon. L. C. Spooner of Morris. His knowledge of the needs of the state in these and other matters is not surpassed by any other citizen. As a statesman he is far seeing and couples with his enthusiasm over the future prospects of the state, a keen intellect and a determination that surmounts and overcomes difficulties. Let the ambitious office seekers retire for once, let those who are so anxious to be honored subside in order that a man like Mr. Spooner may be given an opportunity to serve the state.—Roseau Region.

HAS TAFT COMMITTED SUICIDE?

In his speech to the Essex County Republicans at Hamilton, Mass., Mr. Taft referred contemptuously to "the desire" of Democrats and Republican insurgents at the special session to "gratify what was supposed to be popular desire for the reductions of duties."

On the pledge that they would revise the Payne-Aldrich duties the Democrats carried the House in 1910 elections. Because of popular dissatisfaction with what Mr. Taft had declared at Winona to be "the best Tariff bill the Republican party has ever passed," a Republican majority of 39 in the House was changed to a Democratic majority of 61.

The same year the Democrats also elected Governor in Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Ohio, all states that had given a Taft majority in 1908. Legislatures were also elected that sent to the United States Senate Democrats to succeed Republicans in Maine New Jersey, West Virgina, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri and Montana. In those sections represented by insurgent Republicans who had fought the the Payne-Aldrich tariff the Democrats made fewest gains. In California the regular Republicans were beaten by the insurgent Republicans.

In the House on Aug. 14th, thirty insurgent Republicans and one independent voted with the solid Democratic majority for the Wool Tariff bill. The vote stood 280 to 90, or a three-fourths majority. In the Senate on Aug. 15th, eight insurgent Republicans voted with the solid Democrats for the same bill. The vote stood 38 to 28 in favor of lower duties on wool and woolens.

The eight insurgent Republican Senators who voted for the Wool Tariff bill and so incurred Mr. Taft's hostility are Bristow, Brown Clapp, Crawford, Cummins, LoFollette, Poindexter and Works. Of them Brown of Nebraska alone represents a state that gave its electorial vote to Mr. Bryan in 1908. The others represent Kansas, Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Washington and California, states which gave Mr. Taft 65 electorial votes in 1908. Mr. Taft has declared war on these Senators and other insurgent Republicans who voted for tariff revision. He has already attacked them on the stump and is about to "swing around the circle" on a speech-making tour though the territory where their views prevail.

In other states that gave him their electorial vote in 1908 and two years later, after the passage of the Payne-Aldrich traiff, elected Democratic Governors and United States Senators and helped to turn over the control of the House to the Democrats—in Massahcusetts, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia—Mr. Taft appeals for popular support by deriding "the supposed popular desire" for tariff reductions. He has made the issue in 1912 and opened the fight.

Has Taft committed suicide?—New York World.

GRAND OPENING.

Sanford Dodge has "The Right of Way."

In casting about for a successful play for next season Mr. Sanford Dodge decided to produce "The Right of Way." With this end in view he secured from Charles Frohman's agents the American and Canadian rights for this wonderful drama. He will use Eugene W. Presbrey's version which is conceded to be a most finished dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's popular story which by the way, is founded on absoute facts.

The story is not in any way a discussion of religion still it propounds some questions that are difficult to answer, and in fact can only be answered by the individual opinion and dictates of the individual brain and conscience. The play is constructed and executed with artistic care and detail and is intensely interesting with thrilling climaxes and terse, telling dialogue.

As Charley Steele, the brainy lawyer, Mr. Sanford Dodge will prove a revelation to those who have known him in "Sack and Buskin" of the legitimate drama. Those who have read the thrilling novel "The Right of Way" will want to see it produced and those who have not will be just as intensely interested as the play is a virile, living, throbbing chapter of heart beats from experiences that might befall any or all of us. A SERIOUS BLUNDER

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Edgar Ainsworth was editor of the Literary Review. One day he criticised a novel published under the name of Rosamond Stanford as follows:

"'Her Mistake,' by Rosamond Stanford (Jones Bros.), is a mistake all through. In the first place, it was a mistake for Miss Stanford to try to write a novel at all. Her hero, Milton Truesdale, is a prig. Her heroine, Alice Van Zant, would do very well for the leading lady of a child's play. The scenes are like a London fog, the characters as stiff as the figurehead of a sailing ship of the nineteenth century."

It was Saturday night when Ainsworth consigned the poor authoress' labor to oblivion, and the foreman of the composing room was calling for copy for the Literary Digest. The editor called a boy and sent up criticisms of six novels, all of which he had read that afternoon, to fill up the colum unprovided for. Then he went home, put a hot water bag on his stomach, another on his cheek and after a few hours' more suffering went to sleep.

He awoke at 10 o'clock in the morning refreshed. After a bath and a breakfast he lounged, and if he saw a newspaper lying about he took it up and put it in the stove. He dined at 2, slept from 3 till 6, took tea and proceeded to make his usual Sunday evening call on his fiancee, Marion Schoefield.

Miss Schoefield, who had been used to his calls for several years, waiting while her lover condemned enough books to enable him to marry her, was, as usual, watching for her lover on Sunday evening at the parlor window. Mr. Ainsworth was disappointed at not seeing her at the accustomed place. Fearing something serious had happened, he hurried into the house. Meeting her sister in the hall, he asked anxiously:

"Where is Molly?"

No answer.

"Great heavens! Is she ill?"

No answer.

"Do tell me!"

"Molly is well enough. She'll be down presently."

Ainsworth walked the parlor floor for half an hour, when, looking up, he saw his love standing mute before him. She had entered so silently that she had not heard him. She looked as if she had been bur' . and exhumed.

"Rose—sweetheart!" he exclaimed "What has happened?"

"A good deal has happened," was the reply.

"Tell me. I'm dying with suspense."

"Perhaps you will not think it a matter of importance. The truth has simply been spoken."

"The truth!"

"Yes. It is no fault of yours."

"Whose fault is it?"

"No one's. I have simply made a mistake."

"What mistake?"

"In trying to write a novel."

"You write a novel!"

"Yes. I have been engaged for more than a year on one."

"Well?"

"I have been advised by one near and dear to me—that's the worst of it"—tremulously—"that I made a mistake in trying to write."

"Who told you that nonsense?"

"Besides, I've discovered that the man I took for a model for my hero is a prig."

"Who did you take?"

"One I love."

"Good gracious! You didn't take me?"

"Y-e-s, I did," with a sob.

"Well, well, sweetheart, who told you all this? Have you been getting some addlepated fool's opinion on your manuscript?"

"The novel has been published."

"By whom?"

"Jones Bros."

Mr. Ainsworth began to see through a millstone.

"Has it been criticised?"

"Yes. A criticism appeared this morning."

"In what paper?"

"The Literary Digest."

Ainsworth saw that without a coup all was lost. "I wrote all the criticisms in today's issue. I wrote none on a book by you."

"My own name wasn't on the title page. It was Rosamond Stanford."

"What was the name of the story?"

"'Her Mistake.'"

"'Her Mistake?' My gracious, Molly, how could you have tried to write a story of British society without ever having visited England?"

"I didn't."

"And that scene between the duke and Lady Tatterton—it is ridiculous."

"There is no such scene in my novel."

"I shall stand by my guns. Your hero Auchincloss is a prig. I'll never give in on that."

"Auchincloss? He isn't my hero. My hero is Roy Courtenay. I drew him from you."

"There's no such man in 'His Mistake.'"

"'Her Mistake.'"

"I'm talking of 'His Mistake.'"

"My story was 'Her Mistake.'"

"I begin to see it all. You are barking up one tree, I another. Isn't it funny that this muddle should make a pun? We've both made a mistake. Kiss me, darling. I'll get at your book on Monday. But I warn you that if you've made me your hero you've struck a snag."

"I haven't any such thing. I've got a noble, good, true"—

He stopped the rest with kisses.

Men Who Never Unveil.

There is a wandering tribe of the Sahara called the Tuaregs, a strange people, supposed by some to have descended from the crusaders and distinguished by the wearing of veils, a custom that has occasioned much discussion. The Tuaregs guard their eyes against the glare of the desert by two veils, one rolled round the temples and falling down in front of the eyes, the other reaching from the nostrils to the edge of the clothing, covering the lower part of the face. All manner of learned arguments have been adduced to explain this custom, but hygiene is obviously the only motive. This is shown by the statements of the Tuaregs themselves and by the sobriquet "mouths for flies," which they apply to all who do not wear the veils. It is said that the Tuaregs never remove their veils, even at mealtimes. Indeed, they are so much a part of their wearers that any one deprived of such covering is unrecognized by his friends and relatives.

"Losing the Drop."

"When a man whips out a gun and get the drop' on you there's nothing else to do but throw up your hands and let him have whatever he wants."

"That's where you fool yourself," said the man from the southwest. "If a man has the nerve he can face a gun and get away with it—sometimes. I remember seeing in a border saloon an Englishman pull a gun on a Mexican whom he had caught cheating in a game of cards.

"'You give me back the money you've won from me or I'll blow your head off!'

"'You will?' said the Mexican, looking calmly into the muzzle of the Englishman's revolver. 'Well, you won't do it just now; that gun's not loaded.'

"'What's that?' exclaimed the Englishman, turning the revolver toward himself to look into the chambers. And on the instant the Mexican drew a knife and planted it to the hilt in the Englishman's stomach."—New York Times.

A Styrian Peasant Superstition.

A lawsuit for libel brought by an apothecary in Pollau, in Styria, against a young peasant reveals an extraordinary superstition prevalent among the country people. They believe that apothecaries and doctors have the right to kill at least one man and one woman every year in order to make medicines out of their bodies. An accidental movement of the apothecary at Pollau, Herr Kobermauser, when giving medicine to a boy named Putz led the latter to believe he was going to be killed. He ran away, but got such a fright that he fell ill. The inhabitants believed his story and boycotted the apothecary, who was at length compelled to prosecute. Putz was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment, but his parents, who had spread the story, were acquitted on the ground that they had acted in good faith.—London Standard.

One Use of the Eel.

It is difficult to exhaust the uses of the eel. Experts in top whipping pronounce a dried eel skin an admirable lash, and tops are by no means the only victims thereof. There is that affecting passage in Mr. Pepys' diary: "April 24, 1663. Up betimes, and with my salt eel went down in the parlor and there get my boy and did beat him till I was fain to take breath two or three times. Yet for all I am afeared it will make the boy never the better, he is grown so hardened in his tricks, which I am sorry for, he being capable of making a brave man and is a boy that I and my wife love very well." "Salt eel" appears to have been a nautical term for a rope's end, and it is not certain that Pepys' instrument of castigation was actual eels' skin. But the original "salt eel" laid its mark. — London Chronicle.

He'd Eat the Thistle.

A discussion on appointments to the Most Noble Order of the Thistle gave rise to a caustic saying on the part of Disraeli. Among the names suggested was that of a certain peer, who displayed more zeal than judgment in his support of the Conservative party. "Oh, no!" remarked his ungrateful chief. "I couldn't give Lord —— the Thistle. He'd eat it."—London Graphic.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $5o per acre. Red Lake county is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this coming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speaK.

DENIES MISUSE OF PATRONAGE

Taft Makes Eight Speeches on First Day in Michigan.

APPEALS FOR MORE MILITIA

President Is Greeted With Greatest Cordiality on Western Trip—Would Put All Appointive Positions Under Civil Service Restrictions If He Made the Laws—Is Greeted by Senators at Detroit.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 19.—With a speech on the relation the militia bears to the regular army and the national defense President Taft brought his first day in Michigan on his Western trip to a close.

It was the president's eighth speech of the day. He spoke at the dedication of Bay City's new armory. The same sort of enthusiastic welcome that greeted him elsewhere was given him in Bay City.

Mr. Taft's address was short. He referred to the need of a strong and able militia at home and on the Panama canal and said this nation went too long without it.

"It is true," he said, "that the Lord looks after children, drunken men and the United States. At least we have put ourselves in the same helpless category in the past in reference to what we have done in regard to national defense."

With the passage of the Dick law, however, the president declared, the militia gained its proper footing.

After his speech at the armory the president dropped in at a banquet of the board of commerce and then retired on his private car.

Asks Help for Arbitration.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 19.—President Taft stopped at Saginaw en route to Bay City and the northern part of the state, long enough to ask the people of this city to help him influence the United States senate to act favorably on the arbitration treaties.

The president stayed in Saginaw only a half hour. He motored through streets packed with people. The auditorium, where the president spoke, is built to seat 5,000 persons and every seat was filled and a thousand persons stood in the aisles. The president spoke for ten minutes and repeated much of the address he delivered at Erie, Pa., Saturday night.

Detroit, Sept. 19.—President Taft plunged into the political phase of his long trip through the West and delivered one of the set speeches which may have a determined effect upon his future. Mr. Taft chose the "Trusts" for his first appeal to the people.

In a second speech he answered the charge that he has used patronage to further his own ends.

Challenges Charge of Using Patronage.

"They have charged me with using patronage to accomplish something," he said. "If I have I am not conscious of it. But I challenge the men who make the charge to come forward and join with me in legislation which will enable me to put every local officer, be he postmaster, internal revenue collector, customs collector or anybody else filling an office of the United States in any of the states of the Union, under classified civil service. But they won't do it—at least they won't do it now.

"If I had the making of the laws of this country the first thing I would do would be to include in the civil service every collector, deputy collector and everybody connected with the internal revenue system in local collections and put the whole service on an effective, nonpartisan basis. I know that it would be a source of economy. I know that it would give the president a great deal more time to devote to other duties. I know that it would save a good many congressmen their seats and I know that it would tend to the elevation of the public service."

Mr. Taft will spend four days in Michigan, going from here to Sault Ste. Marie. He was greeted here both by Senators W. A. Smith and Charles E. Townsend. Governor Chase S. Osborn, detained at Lansing, sent a warm message of welcome.

CHILD BURNS BABY SISTER

Boy With Mania for Fire Causes Two-Year-Old's Death.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 19.—That the two-year-old child of E. G. Friday, a farmer of Iredell, was burned by her brother, four years old, the older child deliberately igniting a small torch and applying it to the clothing of his baby sister, became known here. The girl died shortly afterward.

When asked his reason for the act the child replied, "Just because." He repeatedly has set fire to furnishings of the house and is possessed of a mania for fire.

Boy Drowned in Tub of Water.

St. Paul, Sept. 19.—The one-year-old son of Harry E. Nelson, a milkman of this city, was found by the hired man, Gus Olson, drowned in a tub of water just outside of the kitchen door.

WILEY UPHELD BY PRESIDENT

Pure Food Expert Praised by Chief Executive.

SHAKEUP SEEMS PROBABLE

Mr. Taft Admits Lack of Harmony in Department of Agriculture and Hints at Future Action.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 16.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, federal pure food expert, has been upheld by President Taft in his findings upon the charges preferred against the pure food expert by the personnel board of the department.

In his review of the case the president praises Dr. Wiley and holds Dr. Rusby guiltless also. The recommendation of Attorney General Wickersham that "condign" punishment be visited upon Dr. Wiley is passed over by the chief executive with the remark that at the time he made it Mr. Wickersham was not in possession of as much data as is now available.

The executive admits that there has been a lack of harmony in the department of agriculture and hints that action upon it will follow later.

This is taken to mean, by some, that there will be a general shakeup, involving, perhaps, the retirement of Secretary Wilson.

The action of the president fulfills a promise made when he left Washington to settle the famous case, which has already extended over several months, before leaving Beverly.

© 1911, by American Press Association.

DR. H. W. WILEY.

In his decision, which is in the form of a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, the president declares that Dr. Wiley was justified in all that he did in the matter of employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby as an expert chemist; that he was no party to the correspondence involved in the case; that Dr. Wiley acted in accordance with numerous precedents and that he cannot but command the sympathy of every one for his earnest effort to maintain the pure food law.

The president also recommends the retention of Dr. H. H. Rusby in the government service and rules adversely to the decision of the personnel board of the department, which advised that besides Dr. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, Dr. L. F. Kebler, chief of the drug laboratory of the bureau, be "allowed to resign."

CAPTURED IN NORTH DAKOTA

Man Wanted for Kidnapping Canadian Schoolteacher.

Hannah, N. D., Sept. 17.—Eluding the vigilance of Canada's far famed mounted police and posses of more than 200 Southern Manitoba citizens and escaping across the international boundary into North Dakota, only to be captured by a party of six Langdon and Hannah residents, after having been led into a trap by farmers west of the city, was the fate of "Bill" Miner, alleged abductor and assailant of Eleanor Grace Price, the Pembina Valley (Man.) schoolteacher.

The prisoner has been positively identified by his victim.

STORM SWEEPS OVER CHICAGO

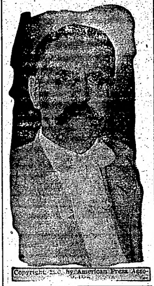
Two Killed and Twenty Injured—Big Property Loss.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Two persons were killed and twenty injured and a property damage estimated at $500,000 resulted from a storm which was a remarkable combination of lightning, thunder, wind, rain and hail. It swept through the city from the west and continued for several hours.

The Illinois naval reserve gunboat Dubuque dragged its anchor and was dashed against the government pier by the wind. It was towed back to its mooring in the inner harbor.

JAMES A. TAWNEY.

Probable Chairman of Boundary Waterways Commission.



Copyright, [illegible] by American Press Association.

TAWNEY PROBABLY WILL BE PROMOTED

May Be Made Chairman of Boundary Waterways Commission.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Former Representative James A. Tawney of Minnesota probably will become chairman of the American section of the International boundary waterways commission, as a result of the death of Thomas H. Carter of Montana. Mr. Tawney, Mr. Carter and Frank H. Streeter of New Hampshire were appointed members of the commission by President Taft. Upon the organization of the commission Mr. Carter, on motion of Mr. Tawney, was named chairman. With the death of Senator Carter Mr. Tawney becomes the ranking member of the commission. The new chairman probably will be elected as soon as the vacancy on the commission caused by Senator Carter's death is filled.

Mr. Tawney, who was named an honorary pallbearer at the Carter funeral, will be unable to come to Washington to attend. W. L. Busby, secretary of the commission, received a telegram from Mr. Tawney Monday as follows:

"Regret it is impossible for me to reach Washington in time to act as pallbearer at funeral Tuesday morning. Convey to Mrs. Carter and family my most sincere sympathy in their great loss and in the loss that the country sustains in the death of Senator Carter, who was loved by all who knew him."

REWARD ON SLAYER'S HEAD

Bullet Which Passed Through Body of Mrs. Bolton Found.

Anoka, Minn., Sept. 19.—The state has made no particular headway in its search for "Jim," the farmhand wanted for the murder of Mrs. Walter Bolton and F. E. Rhodes on a lonely farm in Anoka county. Sheriff John Casey received reports that suspects had been captured at Elk River and Madison, Minn., but when an effort was made to confirm the news it was learned no arrests have been made at either place.

County Attorney Albert Pratt announced that $200 reward will be given by Anoka county for information leading to the arrest of the double murderer.

At the Bolton farm the bullet which killed Mrs. Bolton was found in the wall of the cellar. It had passed through the kitchen floor, indicating that the woman was killed in the kitchen with a rifle.

LAURIER SURE OF VICTORY

Soul Would Be at Peace If He Were as Sure of Eternal Salvation.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 19.—Asserting that the limelight of campaign publicity had driven the annexation bogey to haunts known only to opposition leaders and that an overwhelming majority of Canadian voters are prepared to vote favorably next Thursday upon ratification of the reciprocity agreement, Sir Wilfrid Laurier stirred to remarkable enthusiasm an audience which filled the largest auditorium in the capital city of the Dominion.

"If I were as sure of my eternal salvation as I am that Canada will ratify reciprocity three days hence, my soul would be at peace," declared the premier, and his hearers gave him cheer upon cheer.

Strike May Be National.

Dublin, Sept. 19.—The general strike declared on the Great Southern and Western railroad is spreading over three great systems, the Great Southern, the Midland, Great Western and the Great Northern. All are affected and the services are generally demoralized.

E. H. MADISON.

Kansas Progressive Congressman Dies Suddenly.

EXPIRES AT BREAKFAST TABLE

Congressman Madison of Kansas Is Stricken Suddenly.

Dodge City, Kan., Sept. 19.—Edmond H. Madison, representative from the Seventh Kansas district in congress, died at the breakfast table at his home here.

Representative Madison had not been in good health for a year. He was a sufferer from stomach trouble, but at no time had his condition been alarming. At the time of his death he was preparing to accompany President Taft on his tour through Kansas next week.

Representative Madison was one of the best known progressive Republicans in congress.

PRESIDENT DEFENDS TRUST DECISIONS

Praises Action in Standard Oil and Tobacco Cases.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 19.—President Taft, at luncheon with the board of commerce here, made the first of what may be termed the political speeches of his six weeks' tour of the country. He talked of the "Trusts" and clearly outlined his views concerning them.

He defended with vigor the decisions of the United States supreme court in the Standard Oil and tobacco trust cases and there was a distinct campaign note in Mr. Taft's challenge to his ancient political enemy, William Jennings Bryan, to point out what particular contract or restraint of trade he would condemn which would not be condemned within the definition of the statute as laid down by Chief Justice White.

Mr. Taft added, rather significantly, that persons who do not understand the decisions and really do not understand the law have had a great deal to say about them. It was not fair to the court, he declared, to say that it had read the word "reasonable" in the anti-trust statute.

"I am entirely opposed to an amendment of the anti-trust law," said the president. "It is now a valuable government asset and instrument. Tested and brought into beneficial use by twenty years of litigation and construction by the highest court why should we imperil its usefulness by experiments?"

PREMIER DIES OF WOUNDS

Stolypin Succumbs as Result of Assassin's Bullet.

Kiev, Sept. 19.—The Russian premier, Peter A. Stolypin, is dead here from bullet wounds received at the hands of an assassin during the gala performance at the municipal theater Thursday evening. The official time of his death was announced as 10:12 p. m. (3:12 p. m. New York time). Almost until the last the premier was conscious, and for half an hour during the early part of the evening his wife alone was at his bedside.

Toward the end Stolypin suffered greatly. He groaned incessantly and threw himself about on the couch on which he lay. Finally the heart action became weaker, and, as the body grew cold, the premier realized that death was overtaking him. At a lucid interval a priest administered extreme unction.

MOUNT ETNA STILL ACTIVE

Lava From Volcano Separates Into Four Streams.

Catania, Sicily, Sept. 16.—Clouds of smoke from Mount Etna hides the sky. The volcano continues to throw out lava, cinders and ashes.

The river of lava flowing to the north has separated into four main streams, the largest of which is moving toward Alcantara and is two miles from Francavilla. The railway station of Solicchiata is in immediate danger.

It is estimated that the present eruption has caused so far a property loss of $20,000,000.

RATE DECISION IS CONDEMNED

Governors Appoint Committee to Protest to Supreme Court.

INVASION OF STATE'S RIGHTS

Committee Headed by Governor Harmon of Ohio Will Carry Protest Before Supreme Court.

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 15.—Governors of twenty-five states of the Union voted to unite in protest to the United States supreme court against what they consider an invasion of state's rights by federal courts.

The decision of Judge Sanborn of St. Paul in the Minnesota rate case is the particular "invasion" to which the governors object. By their action they establish a precedent in American history.

Judson Harmon, governor of Ohio and former attorney general of the United States, will head a committee of protest. His colleagues will be Herbert S. Hadley, governor of Missouri, and Chester H. Aldrich, governor of Nebraska. The motion to appoint such a committee to voice the views of the conference was made by Governor Emmett O'Neal of Alabama, which placed the membership at five. Action was declared unanimous, although Governor William W. Kitchin of North Carolina, the twenty-fifth delegate, who alone opposed it, did so, he said, solely because it would be a departure from precedent.

Harmon Supplied Suggestion.

Governor Harmon supplied the original suggestion for the plan, according to Governor O'Neal. In the sharp debate which followed the measure's introduction Governor Harmon took no part.

Introduction of the motion was unexpected by the majority of the delegates. Governor Aldrich's ringing denunciation of what he termed the invasion of the functions and rights of the states by the minor federal courts, discussed during the forenoon session, provoked enthusiastic applause and was followed in the afternoon by an address by Governor Francis E. McGovern of Wisconsin on the same topic. With the subject fresh in mind, the governors debated the question for an hour or more before Governor O'Neal introduced his motion.

In his speech Governor Aldrich referred in terms of condemnation to the decision of Justice Sanborn of the United States circuit court in the Minnesota rate case. He explained that the point of the decision was that the state's intrastate rate law was unconstitutional because it could not be enforced without interfering in its operation with the authority of the interstate commerce commission. This, he thought, was clearly an invasion of state's rights.

RACING AUTOMOBILE DASHES INTO CROWD

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 16.—In full view of a crowd of 50,000 persons, shortly after President Taft had left the state fair grounds, a big racing automobile plunged at seventy miles an hour through the race track fence, crashing into the crowd, killing six men outright, decapitating a boy, fatally injuring three who died later in hospital and seriously injuring eleven more, three of whom may die.

Lee Oldfield, brother of Barney Oldfield, took the place of Fred Belcher, who was down on the program to drive the ill fated car, and he was driving at terrific speed when, on the last mile but one, judges noticed that something was wrong with one of the wheels.

As Oldfield approached the starting line for the last mile the judges signaled to him to stop, but so engrossed was he in driving the big Knox car that he did not see the signal. As he swerved into the back stretch the tire of the damaged wheel exploded and the machine sped into the crowd, which was gathered close to the fence.

There was a tremendous crash and a great cloud of dust as a twenty-foot section of the fence was swept away. The victims were either ground to death or badly mangled under the wheels of the big auto.

MAJORITY DECIDEDLY SMALL

Wets Appear to Have Won the Contest in Maine.

Portland, Me., Sept. 15.—Returns received at the office of the secretary of state, with only six towns missing, and these six supplied by returns received in Portland, showed:

For repeal of prohibition, 60,517; against repeal, 60,383; majority for repeal, 134.

THOMAS H. CARTER.

Former United States Senator From Montana Called by Death.

THOMAS H. CARTER IS DEAD

Former Montana Senator Succumbs to Lun Trouble.

Washington, Sept. 18.—Former United States Senator Thomas Henry Carter of Montana, for many years a notable and picturesque character in national politics, once chairman of the Republican national committee, and since last March chairman of the American section of the international commission, is dead at his home of infection of the lungs. He was fifty-seven years old.

Mr. Carter's career was remarkable, extending over twenty-two years of congressional and official life at Washington. He was elected delegate from the territory of Montana to the Fifty-first congress, and upon the admission of the state was elected its first representative in congress.

BANK ROBBERS SECURE $315,000

Thieves Make Rich Haul at New Westminster, B. C.

New Westminster, B. C., Sept. 16.—Three hundred and fifteen thousand dollars was stolen from the branch of the Bank of Montreal in this city.

Five burglars entered the bank by the front door, broke through the thin metal coating of the vault, blew the safe with charges of nitroglycerin and got away with their booty without being seen, except by a Chinese caretaker.

There was in all about $400,000 in the bank safes. The thieves left only silver and bills of small denomination.

A GREAT PROBLEM

By KATHLEEN I. M'CURDY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Three hundred years ago timepieces were rare. There were town clocks in some European cities, but the watch had not yet been developed. Frau Stoekel, living in the square of Stuttgart, where she could see the tower clock by stepping to her door, had a clock of her own and used to set it every day by the clock in the tower.

Now, at this time the minds of men did not work as quickly or as shrewdly as they do now. The masses were still superstitious, referring every natural event to a supernatural course. The people of Stuttgart were as stupid as any, and it took them as long to get a proposition through their heads as would be required to bore a hole through a millstone with a gimlet.

A murder was committed among them—at least was supposed to have been committed, for the body of the murdered man could not be found. Franz Gobel, a peddler, had stopped all night at the house of John Mertz, and in the morning Mertz had disappeared. Gobel was caught leaving the house with some money Mertz had left behind him. Gobel pleaded guilty to taking the money, but denied having in any way injured Gobel. Nevertheless he was arrested and tried before a jury, such system of trial having recently come into use in Stuttgart. The fact that Mertz had disappeared and Gobel was going away with his money was quite enough to prove to the Stuttgartians of that day that Gobel had killed Mertz. They convicted him in short order, and he was sentenced to be hanged.

In Stuttgart was a man named Ventnor, who possessed a curious combination of knowledge. He knew quite as much law as the attorney of that period—which was nothing at all—and he knew something of mathematics and astronomy. Gobel sent for him and declared on a crucifix that he had not murdered Mertz, but had scared him away in the middle of the night by playing ghost in order that he might secure his money. The condemned man begged Ventnor to save him.

Ventnor was as ingenious as the people of Stuttgart were stupid. He took what money the prisoner had and, going to the keeper of the clock, bribed him to let him (Ventnor) into the tower whenever he wished to go there.

The next day at noon, when Frau Stoekel went to her door to look at the town clock in order to set her own, she found that the clock had gained twenty minutes. A gain or loss of five or ten minutes would not have surprised her, but twenty minutes quite took her breath away. However, she and every one in Stuttgart had perfect confidence in the town clock, and she set her own timepiece back. The next day, finding that it had gained another twenty minutes, she set it back again and moved the regulator to cause it to go slower. Nevertheless on the third day her clock had gained an hour.

Frau Stoekel, convinced that her clock was out of order, tried to get some one to fix it. Several of the best mechanics tried, but the more they tinkered with it the faster it ran. Notwithstanding the work done on it, in a month it had gained in all twenty-four hours.

Gobel was to be executed just one month from the date of the sentence. The day before the intended hanging Ventnor went before the judge who had sentenced his client and declared that the execution would be illegal. When asked why he asserted and brought two witnesses to prove that he had turned the town clock back at various times enough to effect the loss of a day. Therefore the date appointed for the hanging would be the day after that named in the sentence.

The judge was puzzled. Taking a quill pen, he began to make figures. He figured awhile, when a fellow townsman came in, and, having heard the problem as to whether the setting back of the clock had lost the town a day, he, too, began to figure. One by one the citizens came in till the room was full of persons driving quill pens with a view to working out the problem. At midnight, since there was no result, the judge issued a stay for the hanging, and the next day the figuring went on.

At the end of a week the judge sent to the university at Heidelberg for a professor of mathematics and astronomy to come to Stuttgart and tell the Stuttgartians whether Gobel if hanged as sentenced would have been illegally executed—in other words, whether by the setting back of the clock a day had been lost.

The professor came and told the burghers that a day had not been lost, but when he attempted to prove his words he found his listeners too thick headed to understand him.

The Stuttgartians after the professor's departure began to wrangle among themselves, some believing what he had told them, others steadfast in their opinion that a day had been lost. But all agreed that a new day should be fixed for the hanging and a guard meanwhile placed around the clock tower. From opinions they came to blows, and a fight was on when who should come sauntering along, looking like a frightened cur, but the murdered man! He said that the ghost of his grandfather had told him to go away and stay away for a month.

The people crossed themselves and set Gobel at liberty.

Paltering With the Eternal Verities.

The uncle from the west took his little Boston nephew on his knee.

"Wadsworth," he said, "once there was a man"—

"Then he still exists, Uncle Peter," interrupted the little Boston boy. "No sentient, reasoning being within whom the vital spark has found a lodgment on this mortal plane ever ceases to be, albeit his activities may seek expression in another form. Annihilation is abhorrent to the aesthetic sense. Matter may vanish from the sight, but the elements of which it is composed are imperishable. In like manner the intangible essence that constitutes the real man, the ego, survives all changes and mutations. It is the indestructible, sempiternal self, that persists through the ages. A little reflection, Uncle Peter, would convince you that the time worn phrase, 'once there was a man,' is a solecism."

Uncle Peter after a little reflection put the boy down from his knee and began to talk of something else.—Chicago Tribune.

Love and a Ring.

The story of one woman's pride and devotion comes out of a jeweler's shop. A young man bought an engagement ring. Apparently he was an impecunious young man. At any rate, he ordered an imperfect diamond. In less than a week his fiancee called at the shop alone.

"Is this a flawless diamond?" she asked. "I want an honest answer."

She got it.

"I thought so," said she. "Poor fellow! I don't blame him. He did the best he could. I don't care for myself, but I have friends who are good judges of diamonds, and it would nearly kill me for them to find out that he gave me a cheap ring. Will you take this stone out and replace it with a first class diamond? He will never know the difference. I will pay the bill."

The substitution was effected, and that young woman is now proudly showing an engagement ring that for splendor cannot be outdone on the whole west side.—New York Times.

Stammering.

Stammering is due to a peculiarly nervous temperament, and only very sympathetic treatment can effect a cure. Stammering in a child should receive immediate attention, and the first thing to be done is to improve the little one's health by means of plenty of sleep, fresh air and good food. Every day he should take deep breathing exercises in the open air. These deep, steady inspirations strengthen the muscles of the throat and counteract a spasmodic habit of breathing. Notice should be taken of the sounds which the little stammerer has most trouble with, and sentences containing these sounds should be composed for him to repeat each day—very slowly and clearly. He should also be asked to read aloud every day. This exercise should be omitted whenever he seems overexcited or run down in health, and it goes without saying that he should never be scolded or laughed at.—New York Tribune.

The Popular Ten Spot.

Perhaps the average reader would find it difficult if not impossible to state offhand the denomination of the notes which represent a larger proportion of our currency circulation than any other. The outstanding circulation amounts to something more than $2,546,000,000 and consists of notes of eleven denominations, ranging from $1 to $10,000. There are outstanding 154,411,835 one dollar notes. But neither the one dollar notes nor those of $10,000 represent the larger item in the currency circulation. There are 22,160 notes of $10,000 each outstanding—a total of $221,160,000. But the most important is the ten dollar note. of which 6,690,464 are in circulation. representing a total of $669,944,640. So the ten spot is your Uncle Samuel's favorite issue.—New York Mail.

A Heat Phenomenon.

A workman in the observatory at Toulouse has invited attention to a singular phenomenon. A bar of iron is taken by one end and the other end is plunged into a fire, heating it highly, but not so much that the hand cannot retain its hold. The heated end is then plunged into a pail of cold water. Immediately the other end becomes so hot that it is impossible to hold it. This phenomenon, familiar to workmen, is ascribed by them to some repellent action they suppose the sudden cold exerts upon the heat contained in the iron, which is thus driven to the opposite extremity.

Management.

"I don't see, Ella, how you manage with your housekeeping money. If I give you a lot you spend a lot, but if I don't give you so much you seem to get along with it."

"Why, that's perfectly simple, Rudolph. When you give me a lot I use it to pay the debts I get into when you don't give me so much."

It is the rule of rules and the general law of all laws that every person should observe those of the place where he is.—Montaigne.

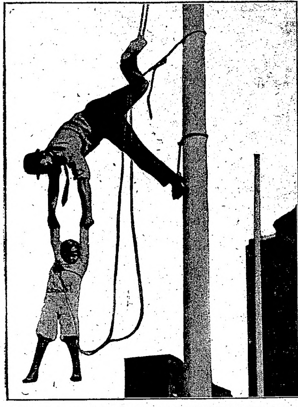
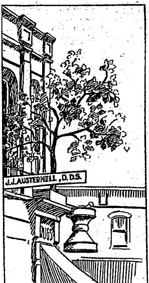
OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Daring Act of Steeplejack



The attention of thousands of persons in City Hall Park, New York, recently was attracted by a steeple jack and a small boy, who were suspended from the top of the highest flagpole on the city hall tower. The boy is Edward Hughes, seven years old, son of Samuel H. Hughes, one of the best-known steeplejacks in the country. With the help of his father the youngster climbed the staff, the top of which is 175 feet above the ground, where the two entertained the crowd with their acrobatic work for almost an hour. One of the feats that caused the crowd to gasp was performed when Hughes, suspended head down, grasped the boy by his hands and swung him free from the pole.

TREE IN HIS WINDOW BOX



Most persons love trees, but few carry their love of them to their places of business, as has J. J. Austernell, a dentist of Kansas City. In a window box on a ledge of his office in the second story grows a hardy cottonwood tree, eight feet high. Mr. Austernell planted the sapling two years ago and his watering and care have given him a flower box that is unique. Not only do the leaves cast a cool shade over the window, but their fresh greenness has a quieting effect on patients, the dentist believes.

FINDS PURSE AND WINS BET

Recovery of $400, lost the other day, netted W. P. March, a Chicago contractor, a like amount in bets at Atlantic City. When he lost his wallet other members of the Chicago Building Exchange made up a purse of $400 as a bet that he would never see his money again. They figured they had a 500,000 to 1 chance on the honesty of that number of visitors at Atlantic City.

March took the long chance and doubled his money. The wallet was picked up by Robert H. Clutch, of Philadelphia, and returned.

SANITY RESTORED BY SHOCK

On the testimony of expert alienists that Frank Teeling, a patient in the insane hospital at Overbrook, had been cured of insanity by the shock of a collision between an automobile and a prison van in which he was being transferred, the court of special sessions at Newark, N. J., ordered Teeling's release from custody, Teeling developed symptoms of violent insanity while in jail on a drunkenness sentence and was ordered removed to the asylum. While he was being transported the prison wagon was run into by an automobile. After the collision Teeling appeared perfectly sane. Alienists declared that the physical and psychic shock cleared his brain. They believe further that Teeling will be strong-minded enough to resist the temptation to overindulge in alcoholic drinks.

RIVAL TEACHERS HOLD FORT

Each insisting she is the regularly appointed teacher, Miss Alice Corn and Miss Catherine Kirby are holding sway in the same room at the school at Frederick, Colo. Each has a desk. The pupils have been apportioned between the two. Miss Corn holds a contract signed by two members of the school board, and Miss Kirby one signed by the remaining member. The arrangement will hold until the courts decide which is entitled to the salary.

SWORDFISH RAMS A DORY

An exciting affair occurred near Boston recently when a monster sword fish rammed its sword into a dory sent out from Capt. Richard Noonan's Dorcas, breaking the dory to splinters and hurling into the sea two fishermen who were rescued with great difficulty by three of their mates off Block island. Just as they were sinking in water probably a quarter mile deep, Captain Noonan and another man plunged into the sea and rescued them. All four were liable at any time to be rammed and killed by the mad sea monster. With the seamen safely aboard the fishing vessel the fight with the swordfish was renewed. The fish was weakened by the first lily iron thrust deep into its side, and one of the fishermen put out in another dory and again speared the fish. This time it succumbed and yielded to the rope which hauled it in.

INTERVIEW IN THE SEINE

People have been interviewed in the strangest ways and in the strangest places. The climax, perhaps, has been reached by the reporter of a Persian paper. He plunged into the Seine after his victim and interviewed her while swimming. The reporter's prey was Juliette Cure, a plucky little girl of twelve, who swam against the champions of the world and finished fourth. When it was known that, with an allowance of some 1,500 yards, the the little girl had plunged into the Seine at the same time as the other champions started at Ivry, all eyes were turned toward Juliette Cure. A reporter could not help plunging in after her as she reached the Point Royal. He swam up to her side. There was no time to present a card. Just one word, anything that she said then and there would do for an interview. She was too busy striking out with her hands and feet. The reporter insisted. "Surely you must feel tired," he said. "No," was the curt reply. "I'm going to finish." That was all he could obtain for his trouble, but it was enough. He had scored a point over his colleagues.

SOUTH SEA WAVES

We all remember with what frequency in the old narratives of experiences in the South Seas reference is made to the heavy swells of the ocean, which impressed the navigators with the idea of their remoteness from land. The great size of the set waves in high southern latitudes has been explained by the fact that south of the Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn there is neither windward nor leeward shore, and the prevailing wind in all longitudes is westerly. Thus when a west wind springs up it finds a long westerly swell, the effect of a previous wind, still running. The newborn wind increases the steepness of this swell and so forms majestic storm waves which sometimes attain a length of 1,200 feet from crest to crest. The average height attained by sea waves in feet is about half the velocity of the wind in miles an hour.

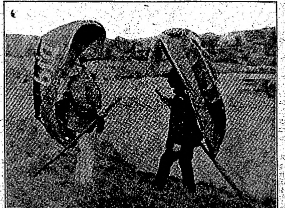
政治官報

The "Tching-Pao," the official gazette of Peking, is the oldest newspaper in the world; it is now celebrating its thousandth year. A copy of each number—from the first to the most recent—is preserved with great care in the palace. The "Tching-Pao" has changed in form on several occasions. The photograph shows its present appearance.

Coracle-Men of Carmarthen



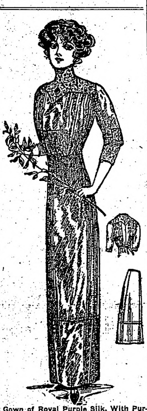
An interesting episode in the festivities connected with the eisteddfodd at Carmarthen, Wales, was the appearance of the coracle men on the river Towy, using a survival of the oldest form of water craft known. Coracles were in use in the time of the ancient Britons 2,000 years ago. The boats are made of sticks cut from the ash and beech trees, and have an average weight of 25 pounds. The framework is covered with a sheet of strong canvas saturated with tar and pitch.

SEASON OF SPLENDOR

DRESS MATERIALS ARE TO BE RICH IN THE EXTREME.

Velvets and Silks Are Staples—Striking Colors Also a Feature—Silk Corduroy Much Liked for Tailored Suit.

Dame Fashion is making up for the simplicity of her designs by the splendor of her materials. New textures show velvets of every sort in the lead, and there are fine silks with a satiny finish which run to superb plush borderings in lace designs. The groundwork of these, that is, the silk part, is always in some somber color, seal brown, dark ruby, raven blue, black, etc., but the banding introduces the most gorgeous colors. A shade of old gold, cerise and electric blue are some of the colors that stripe the borders of these superb textures. It is said in high places that only two yards and a half will be needed for a gown in such fabrics, and the small quantity is a blessing, for the materials are very dear—eighteen dollars a yard, in fact. But except for a lace guimpe and undersleeves and a few rare buttons there will be no other trimming for the gown, which will be of the costume sort.



Gown of Royal Purple Silk, With Purple Lace Over Green Chiffon.

For the tailored suit there is no fabric so chic and rewarding as a silk corduroy, and it will be the fad to trim these with a limited quantity of matching braid and buttons of the jewel sort. On all thin materials made up into toilets of the one-piece kind both satin and velvet will be used, as well as laces matching the color of the gown. To accomplish the exact reproduction of tint—for it is next to impossible to get a matching lace otherwise—dressmakers will give a sample of the gown goods with the lace to a dyer, and in this way, and this way only, will the matching lace be had. Gold laces, not of the tinsel sort, but in this coloring, are to be to the fore for jabots and undersleeves, and where there is any good lace on hand the color may be achieved with home dyeing.

In point of general cut these things are evident: The tailored suit is to have the strictest up and down lines, these accomplished with narrow panels on the tight skirt, with snug sleeves and revers which give a drooping fall to the shoulders. The costume, that is the bodice gown, will show the high waist line, a foot trimming for the skirt and a waist portion of such snugness that it will seem almost tight.

In the illustration is exploited a new silk, one with a satin finish, but which has no especial name. Royal purple is the color of it, a lace in exactly the same tone over green chiffon being used with smart effect for the trimming. The dress, although in two parts, gives a one-piece effect, and the buttons are made of the purple silk with green chiffon covers.

DARK GOWNS EASY TO CLEAN

May Be Sponged With Strong Tea or Coffee, or Even Put Into the Washtub.

From month to month we go on wearing black clothes, and we never seem to think that they require cleaning. It is enough that the dirt "doesn't show"—we don't worry at all about its being there all the time. Think how quickly soiled a white garment would be and how a couple of days makes our muslin waists yearn for the washtub, and perhaps you will realize that black, too, is unhygienic and unclean, even when it looks all right, and much more so when it has actually the appearance of being soiled and rusty.

At any time the appearance of black clothes may be greatly improved if they are thoroughly sponged with a strong infusion of tea or coffee, provided they are first of all well brushed and shaken. But they may also be washed without coming to grief. Experiment with a blouse and go on to a skirt, and you will soon see how successfully voile, serge, cashmere, lawn and cloth may be cleansed.

Add a little ammonia to lukewarm water and well souse the garment, without, however, rubbing it; then take it out, squeeze but do not wring it, plunge it into cold water, then hang it, dripping, in the air to dry, having selected, of course, a fresh and breezy day for washing. Before beginning the process all stains should first be removed.

TREATMENT OF DARK ROOM

White Paint and Enamel, With a Sunny Wall Paper, Will Do Wonders With It.

In nearly every city house there is always sure to be one dark and gloomy room. It casts its depression upon all who enter it and yet one is often at a loss as to what should be done to dissipate the lugubrious effect.

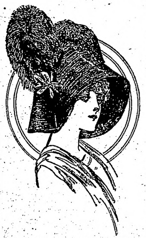
It should be dealt with ruthlessly. White paint and enamel should be used with a generous hand. Dark woodwork should not be tolerated and dull or gloomy paper should be avoided. Hang the room in a paper of sunny yellow hue, put up only curtains of thin net and decorate your walls with pictures framed in white and gold and silver gray frames.

Many mirrors, if possible, should be used, for they aid wonderfully in brightening a dark room, but they must not be hung too high, as they will only reflect the ceiling, while they should catch the cheerful flame of an open fire, where there is one, and repeat its gleam.

No one thing is more successful in destroying the depressing atmosphere of a room than an inside window box. This box can be made attractive by a thin covering of brass or copper that will add to the brightness of the room, and the plants should be chosen with an eye to their color.

When the furniture in your dark and depressing room has been covered with a gay cretonne, and magazines, books and papers have been strewn about this room, which previously filled every one with aversion and discomfort, then will it become the favorite resort of the family.

"1820 BONNETS"



The helmet has, by gradual stages, developed into an out and out bonnet—a bonnet borrowed from the days of our great-grandmothers. This new bonnet comes from an authoritative French milliner and is intended for a September bride, whose blonde tresses will be well set off by the dark brim. The bonnet is made of black satin and the full feathers mounted at either side are held in place under rosettes of copper colored metallic braid.

Wearing of Beads.

Long strings of beads make the short woman look tall. It is well known that beads are becoming, that is why they are so popular, but it isn't every woman who understands why.

ECONOMY IN COOKING

PROPER USE OF THE LEFTOVERS MEANS MUCH.

Really There Should Be Little or No Waste in the Well-Conducted Kitchen—Some Ideas of Worth.

It takes thought as well as time to handle leftovers to the best advantage, but nothing proves more tempting than a savory rechauffe, says Fannie Merritt Farmer in the Woman's Home Companion. The prudent use of leftovers involves a considerable saving, and if the housewife is careful there is little need of waste.

Cold Roast Beef.—Try slicing it very thin and arrange the slices overlapping one another on a platter. Pour over a French dressing, to which has been added a little chopped green pepper; then surround with crisp lettuce leaves and garnish with parsley, stoned olives and curled celery. Curled celery makes a most attractive garnish to many dishes. Cut thick stalks of celery in three-inch pieces. With a sharp knife, beginning at outside of stalks, make five cuts parallel to each other, extending one-third the length of pieces. Make six cuts at right angles to cuts already made. Treat other ends in the same manner. Put pieces in ice water and let stand for an hour or more, when celery will curl back and be very crisp.

Beef Casserole—Cut roast beef or cold broiled steak in one-inch cubes. Put two cupfuls in a casserole dish and add one cupful of brown gravy or sauce, one-fourth cupful of celery, cut in small pieces, one-third cupful of carrots, cut in small cubes, one-half onion, thinly sliced, one-half cupful of canned tomatoes, one-half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, and salt and pepper to taste. Cover and cook in a slow oven one hour. Add one-half cupful of canned peas and two-thirds cupful of one-half-inch potato cubes, which have been parboiled in boiling salted water, to cover five minutes. Again cover and cook 30 minutes, or until potatoes are soft. Send to table in casserole dish.

For Savory Fish—Separate cold, cooked fish into flakes; there should be one cupful. Cut a two-inch cube of fat salt pork in very small cubes, try out and drain. To two tablespoonfuls of the fat add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended; then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one cupful of rich milk. Bring to the boiling point and add fish, two egg yolks, slightly beaten, pork scraps and 1½ cupfuls of hot boiled potato cubes. Season, and serve very hot.

Baked-Bean Soup—Put three cupfuls of cold baked beans, three pints of cold water, two slices of onion and two stalks of celery, cut in pieces, in a saucepan. Bring to the boiling point and let simmer 30 minutes; then rub through a sieve. Add 1½ cupfuls of stewed and strained tomatoes, and one tablespoonful of chili sauce. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, and two tablespoonfuls of flour, and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, the hot liquid. Bring to the boiling point, season and serve.

Salad Pyramids.

About one pound of cold new potatoes, one pound cooked beef, one cucumber, a little grated horseradish and some salad dressing. With a round cutter cut out equal-sized rounds of the potato, beet and cucumber, the slices to be about one-eighth of an inch thick. Arrange these in alternative layers in mounds or pyramids; the top layer should be rather smaller rounds. Put a heap of very finely chopped grated horseradish on the top of each. Arrange the pyramids in a bowl and pour the salad dressing round.

White Fruit Cake.

Stir together one cup of sugar and one-half cup of butter. Beat until very light the whites of four eggs and mix with the sugar and butter; then add one cup of stoned and chopped raisins and one-half cup of citron cut in small shavings and rolled in flour. Sift two teaspoons baking powder with two cups of flour. After adding to the mixture one cup of sweet milk, stir in the flour and bake in a moderate oven. —Miss F. Winifred Dunham.

Oyster-Pepper Pot.

Strain ripe tomatoes for two persons. One pint of juice will do. Place over fire, add pinch of salt, finely chopped green peppers and small piece of onion. Let get boiling hot; strain juice from one can of oysters and add; add oysters just before taking from fire, just long enough to get heated through. Have ready toasted bread cut thin and in three cornered pieces; pour oysters and sauce over toast and serve hot.

Emergency Beef Tea.

One pound of shredded beef, one pint of water; place the meat in a saucepan with cold water, stir it to separate the meat, and allow the water to extract the juice. Leave for ten minutes, then place over a moderate fire, and stir till it simmers, then pour off the liquid, remove the fat from the surface with paper, and serve at once.

A Dainty Touch.

For variety cook some little white onions with the green peas. Fresh peas need no flavor but if not perfectly fresh the onions improve them.

CHAPTER I.

A Dispatch for Longstreet.

It was a bare, plain interior—the low table at which he sat an unplaned board, his seat a box, made softer by a folded blanket. His only companions were two aides, standing silent beside the closed entrance, anxious to anticipate his slightest need.

He will abide in my memory forever as I saw him then—although we were destined to meet often afterwards—that old gray hero, whose masterly strategy held at bay for so long those mighty forces hurled on our constantly thinning lines of defense. To me the history of war has never contained his equal, and while I live I shall love and revere him as I can love and revere no other man.

"General Lee," said one of the aides, as I passed the single sentry and drew aside the flap to step within, "this is Captain Wayne."

He deliberately pushed away the mass of papers which had been engaging him, and for an embarrassing moment fixed upon me a glance that seemed to read me through and through. Then, with simple dignity, far more impressive than I can picture it in words, he arose slowly and extended his hand.

"Captain Wayne," he said gravely, yet retaining his grasp, and with his eyes full upon mine, "you are a much younger man than I expected to see, yet I have selected you upon the special recommendation of your brigade commander for services of the utmost importance. I certainly do not hold your youth to be against your success, but I feel unwilling to order you to the performance of this duty, which, besides being beyond the regular requirements of the service, involves unusual risks."

"Without inquiring its nature," I said, hastily, "I freely offer myself a volunteer for any service which may be required either by the army or yourself."

The kindly face brightened instantly, almost into a smile, and a new look of confidence swept into the keen gray eyes.

"I felt, even as I spoke," he said, with a dignified courtesy I have never marked in any one else, "that I must be doing wrong to question the willingness of an officer of your regiment, Captain Wayne, to make personal sacrifice. From our first day of battle until now the south has never once called upon them in vain. You are from the ranks, I believe?"

"I was a corporal at Manassas."

"Ah! then you have won your grade by hard service. You take with you one man?"

"Sergeant Craig of my troop, sir, a good soldier, who knows the country well."

He lowered his eyes to the numerous papers littering the table, and then, leaning over, traced lightly with a colored pencil a line across an outspread map.

"You speak of his knowing the country well; are you aware, then, of your destination?"

"I merely inferred from what Colonel Carter said that it was your desire to reestablish communication with General Longstreet."

"That is true; but do you know where Longstreet is?"

"Only that we of the line suppose him to be somewhere west of the mountains, sir. It is camp gossip that his present base of supplies is at Minersville."

"Your conjecture is partly correct, although I have more reason to believe that the head of his column has reached Bear Fork, or will by tomorrow morning. Kindly step this way, Captain Wayne, and make note of the blue lines I have traced across this map. Here, you will observe, is Minersville, directly beyond the high ridge. You will notice that the Federal lines extend north and south directly between us, with their heavier bodies of infantry along the Wharton pike, and so disposed as to shut off all communication between us and our left wing. Now, the message I must get into Longstreet's hands is imperative; indeed, I will say to you, the very safety of this army depends upon its reaching him before his advance passes Bear Fork. There remains, therefore, no time for any long detour; the messenger who bears it must take his life in his hands, and ride straight westward through the very lines of the enemy."

He spoke these words rapidly, earnestly; then suddenly he lifted his eyes to mine, and said firmly: "I am perfectly frank with you. Are you the man?"

I felt the hot blood leap into my face, but I met his stern gaze without flinching.

"If I live, General Lee, I shall meet his advance at Bear Fork by daybreak."

"God guide you; I believe you will."

His words seemed uttered unconsciously. He turned slightly, and glanced toward the door. "Major Holmes, will you kindly hand me the draft of that dispatch?"

He took the paper from the outstretched hand of the aide, read it over slowly and with great care, wrote a word of explanation upon the margin, and then extended it to me.

"Commit that to memory, word by word, to your memory; we must run no possible risk of its ever falling into the enemy's hands."

I can see it now, that coarse yellow paper—the clear, upright penmanship, the words here and there misused and corrected, the sentence scratched out, the heavy underlining of a command, and his own strangely delicate signature at the bottom.

"Headquarters, Army Northern Virginia,

"'In the field, near Custer House,
Sept. 23, 2 P. M.

"Lieutenant General Longstreet,
"Commanding Left Wing.

"Sir: You will advance your entire force by the Connelton and Sheffield pikes, so as to reach Castle Rock with your full infantry command by daybreak, September 26th. Let this supersede all other orders. I propose to attack in force in the neighborhood of Sailor's ford, and shall expect you to advance promptly at the first sound of our artillery. It is absolutely essential that we form prompt connection of forces, and to accomplish this result will require a quick, persistent attack upon your part. You are hereby ordered to throw your troops forward without reserve, permitting them to be halted by no obstacle, until they come into actual touch with my columns. The success or failure of my plans will depend utterly upon your strict observance of these orders,

"R. E. LEE,
"General Commanding."

I handed back the paper, and lifted my hand in salute.

"You have memorized it?"

"Word for word, sir."

"Repeat it to me."

He held the paper before him as I did so, and at the close lifted his eyes again to my face.

"Very good," he said, quietly. "Now let there be no mistake; repeat it over to your companion as you proceed until he has memorized it, and one of you must live long enough to reach Longstreet. I advise you to take the Langley road—it is the most protected, and not try to pass beyond the old Coulter plantation until after dark, or you will run the risk of being observed by the enemy's pickets. Beyond this I must leave all to your own discretion."

He paused, and I still lingered, thinking he might have something more to add.

"Are you one of the Waynes of Charlottesville?" he asked gravely.

"Colonel Richard Wayne was my father, sir."

"Ah, indeed! I remember him well;" and his face lit up with a most tender smile. "We were together in Mexico. A Virginia gentleman of the old school. He is dead, I believe?"

"He was killed, sir, the first year of the war."

"I remember; it was at Antietam. And your mother? If my memory is not at fault she was a Pierpont?"

"She is now in Richmond, sir, and the old plantation is but a ruin."

"War is indeed sad," he said slowly; "and I often feel that our southern women are compelled to bear the brunt of it. What heroines they have proven! History records no equal to the daily sacrifices I have witnessed in the past three years. God grant it may be soon ended."

Then, as if suddenly moved by the impulse of the moment, he again extended his hand.

"Well, lad," he said kindly, the same grave smile lighting his face, "our country needs us. We must not waste time here in conversation. I am very glad to have been permitted to meet the son of my old friend, and trust you will remember me to your mother. But now goodby, captain, and may he in whose hand we all are, guide and guard you. I know that a Wayne of Virginia will always do his duty."

Bareheaded and with proudly swelling heart I backed out of the tent as I might have left the throne room of an emperor, but as I grasped the reins and swung up into the saddle, I became conscious that he had followed me. Craig flung up his hand in quick, soldierly salute, and then, with a single rapid stride, the general stood at his horse's head.

"Sergeant," he said—and I was struck by the incisive military tone of his voice, so different from the gentleness shown within—"I am informed that you are intimately acquainted with the roads to the westward."

"Every bridle-path, sir, either by night or day."

"Then possibly you can inform me whether the Big Hickory is fordable at Deer Gap."

"Not for infantry at high water, sir; but there is another ford two miles north where it is never over waist deep."

"That would be at Brixton's mill?"

"No, sir; the other way."

Lee smiled, and rested his hand almost caressingly on the trooper's knee.

"You are a valuable man for us to risk on such a ride," he said kindly. "But I desire you to understand, sergeant, how deeply I value the service you are about to render, and that I shall never permit it to be forgotten or go unrewarded. And now, goodnight, sergeant; goodnight, Captain Wayne."

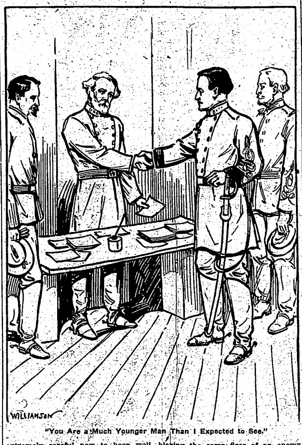
As we turned into the main road, riding slowly, I glanced backward. The general was yet standing there in front of his tent, gazing after us, the rays of the westering sun gleaming on his gray hair.

CHAPTER II.

The Night Ride.

By five o'clock we were safe at Colchester, and while our horses rested and refreshed themselves on some confiscated grain, the two of us lay lazily back on a grassy knoll, well within the shadow of a ruined wall, and watched the round, red sun drop slowly down behind those western hills we had to climb.

As early as we deemed it safe to venture, we were again in saddle, riding now straight to the westward, along the smooth-beaten pike, until we caught sight of the black shadow of Colton church, in our front; then we swerved to the left, and still moving rapidly but with considerable care for the horses, headed directly across the more broken country toward the foot-hills. It proved to be a hard, toilsome climb up those long, steep slopes rising before us; for we were extremely careful now to keep well away from every known route of travel, and our horses, although selected from among the best mounts of the cavalry brigade, had already been thoroughly winded by their smart trot up the valley.



"You Are a Much Younger Man Than I Expected to See."

An hour of this work passed. Whether or not we were yet within the enemy's lines was largely conjecture, for no human eye could pierce the enveloping gloom, and no sound, either of warning or encouragement, reached us as we strained our ears. The sergeant rode slightly in advance as we toiled up the higher terrace, for our sole dependence as to direction and distance was upon his memory, and even that could scarcely serve for much on such a night as this. I traced his passage upward as best I might, and pressed close after him, guided not so much by sight as by sound—the occasional rolling of a loosened stone, the rustling of leaves as he touched a bush in passage, the faint clinking of his sabre, and the heavy breathing of his horse—until at last his long, slender figure rose sufficiently above the dark hill surface to be faintly silhouetted in deeper shadow against the dim reflection of the upper sky. Almost coincidently with this my horse ranged up beside his, where he had drawn rein.

"What is it, Dan?" I questioned cautiously; for all I could feel reasonably assured of just then was that behind any rock or tree in our front there might be crouching a Federal picket.

"It's nothin', Cap," he answered quietly, turning his face toward me as he spoke. "I'm just tryin' ter 'member some landmark yereabout ter guide from. Blamed if ever I see such a dark night; it's like bein' inside a pocket, sir, an' I reckon as how it must be nigh onter ten year since I run loose in this yere country as a kid. Thet thar cut-off we took a while back has sort o' confused me; that's a fac', and I don't just know whar I am; but I reckon as how the main ridge road we're a huntin' after oughter run somewhar out yonder." He pointed forward into the night.

"Very well; hand me your rein, and see what you can discover out there on foot. Sitting here isn't apt to mend matters, and we surely cannot afford to cripple our horses among those rocks."

The sergeant, a gaunt, tireless mountaineer, slipped silently from his saddle, swung his light cavalry carbine from his back to the hollow of his arm, and in another moment was lost to sight in the darkness. A snake could not have slipped away more stealthily.

How utterly alone I seemed; how intensely, painfully still everything was! The silence felt almost like a weight, so greatly it oppressed me. Even the accustomed voices of nature were hushed, as if war, with its unspeakable cruelty, had cast a spell over all things animate and inanimate. It was weird, uncanny. With every nerve strained, I leaned forward across the pommel of my saddle, listening for the slightest sound out in that black void. My head burned and throbbed as with fever, and I felt that strange, unnatural stillness as though it had been a physical thing; surely others besides us were upon this hilltop! For I knew well—my every soldier instinct told me—that somewhere out in that impenetrable mystery were blazing the camp fires of an enemy. Vigilant eyes were peering everywhere in search of such as we. How far away they might lurk I could not even conjecture.

The soft night wind, heavy with pine odors, began suddenly to play amid the leaves of a low tree beside me, and the pleasant rustling mingled like strains of music with the slow breathing of the horses. I recall it now as one of the loneliest moments of my life, one of those almost unaccountable conditions of mind and body when it seemed to me that the thin, sinewy fingers of an inexorable fate were closing down with a pressure which no strength of man might resist. I was worn with fatigue in the saddle, but did not dream of sleep; my mind, in a firm endeavor to cast aside the uncanny influences of the hour, recalled in swift panorama those three years of civil strife which had run their course since I, a slender, white-faced lad, had stolen forth into the moonlight from the portals of the old home, to ride away into the northward where the throbbing drums called me. So deeply had my every thought become merged in these musings that Craig, slipping silently as a ghost from out the engulfing darkness, laid hand upon my bridle-rein before I became aware of his approach.

"I got 'er all right now, Cap," he announced quietly, peering up into my face. "We uns are not more nor a hundred yards ter the right of the road, but I reckon you'll find ther way a bit rough."

He led both horses forward, moving slowly and with that silent caution so characteristic of his class. With scarcely the scraping of a hoof on the flinty rocks we came forth in safety upon the defined, hard-beaten track.

"The south is over yonder ter the left," he whispered, as he swung up into saddle, "an' the trend of the road is mighty nigh due west."

"But in which direction does their main camp lie, sergeant?"

"Durn it; thet's just what I can't quite figure out, sir—whether we uns be to ther north or south of ther white church. Then, somehow or other, it seems like to me as if this yere road lay a bit too close ter the edge of ther plateaus ter ever be the main pike what the Feds marched over. I reckon from ther direction it runs that maybe it might be a branch like, or a wood-road leadin' inter the other. If thet's the way it is, then them fellers we uns is tryin' ter dodge ought ter be down yonder ter the left somewhar."

I gazed vaguely out into the black vacancy to which he pointed.

"Well, if we should chance to run up against one of their picket posts we shall soon be enlightened," I returned, urging my horse carefully forward. "But we shall have to take the chances, for it would not prove healthy for either of us to be caught here by daylight."

Not daring to venture on any gait faster than a walk along this unknown and ill-defined mountain trail, we slowly and cautiously worked our way forward for more than an hour, meeting with no human obstacle to our progress, yet feeling that each step forward was surrounded by imminent peril. That we were now well within the guarded lines of the enemy we were both assured, although where or how we had succeeded in penetrating the cordon of picket posts unobserved we could only conjecture.

CHAPTER III.

An Unwelcome Guest.

This was the sort of work I had long ago learned to love; it warmed the blood, this constant certainty of imminent peril, this intense probability that any moment might bring a flash of flame into our very faces. Each step we took was now a stern, grim play with Fate, where the stakes were life and death. I felt my pulses throb as I rode steadily forward, fairly thrusting the darkness aside, my teeth hard set, my left hand heavily on a revolver butt.

But hark! Surely that was no common sound, born of that drear loneliness! No cavalryman can mistake the jingle of accoutrements or the dull thud of horses's hoofs. The road here must have curved sharply, for they were already so close upon us that, almost simultaneously with the sound, we could distinguish the deeper shadow of a small compact body of horsemen directly in our front. To left of us there rose, sheer and black, the precipitous rock; to right we might not even guess what yawning void. It was either wit of sword play now.

I know not how it may be with others in such emergencies, but with me it always happens that the sense of fear departs with the presence of actual danger. Before the grewsome fancies of imagination I may quake and burn like any maiden alone upon a city street at night, until each separate nerve becomes a very demon of mental agony; but when the real and known once fairly confronts me, and there is work to do, I grow instantly cool to think, resolute to act, and find a rare joy in it. It was so now, and, revolver in hand but hidden beneath my holster flap, I leaned over and touched Craig's arm.

"Keep quiet," I whispered sternly. "Let them challenge first, and no firing except on my order."

Almost with the words there came the sharp hail:

"Halt! Who comes there?"

I drew the cape of my riding jacket closer, so as better to muffle the sound of my voice.

"Friends, of course; who would you expect to meet on this road?"

Fortune seemed with me in the chance answer, for he who had hailed exclaimed:

"Oh! Is that you, Brennan?"

There was no time now for hesitancy; here was my cue, and I must plunge ahead, accepting the chances. I ventured it.

"No; Brennan couldn't come. I am here in his place."

"Indeed! Who are you?"

"Major Wilke."

There was a moment's painful pause, in which I could hear my heart throb.

"Wilkie," repeated the voice, doubtfully. "There is no officer of that name in the Forty-third."

"Well, there chances to be such an officer on the staff," I retorted, permitting a trace of anger to appear in my tone, "and I am the man."

"What the devil is the difference, Hale, just what his name is?" boomed a deeper voice back in the group. "We are not getting up a directory of the Sixth corps. Of course he's the man Brennan sent, and that is all we've got to look after."

"Oh, all right, certainly, major," returned the first speaker, hastily. "But the night is so cussed black I supposed we must be at least a mile this side of where we were to meet. However, we have the lady here for you all right, and she is anxious enough to get on."

PUTTING IT UP TO CENTRAL

All Caller Wanted Was Mrs. Smith's Number, and Surely That Was Easy to Get.

"Halloa, there, central! Is this central? It is? I thought it was, but I couldn't quite be sure. The other day I supposed I was talking to central, and here it was only my grocer. I do think there are some queer mix-ups in this telephone service. What I want now is to find out the telephone number of Mrs. John Smith—S-m-i-t-h, Smith. I find that there are more than 100 persons of that name in the book, and I don't know which one is the husband of the lady I want. She is a large lady with a florid face and prematurely white hair, and I think her husband is a traveling man, and a brother-in-law of hers, named Jones, lives somewhere on M street—a stoutish, elderly gentleman with side whiskers. Kindly let me have Mrs. Smith's number at once. I had it on a slip of paper that I can't find. Seems to me it was two-four-sixteen ring three, or none-two-sixty-four ring two. You know how confusing telephone numbers are. Let me have Mrs. Smith's number right away, please."

"ECZEMA ITCHED SO BADLY I COULDN'T STAND IT."

"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again, was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more.

"I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.

"My brother got his face burned with gun-powder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (Signed) Miss Elizabeth Gehrki, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 17 L, Boston.

Lawn Economics.

"I note," says the sage, "that you allow a sprinkler to spray water upon your lawn almost continuously."

"Yes," said the native. "We do that to make the grass grow."

"But the other day I saw a man pushing a clicker contrivance over the lawn and—"

"Oh, yes; that was a lawn mower?"

"And what is its purpose?"

"Why, it cuts the grass."

"Then why do you put water on it to make it grow if you simply cut it down as fast as it comes up?"—Judge.

THE WAR IS BEGUN

ITALY RELENTLESSLY PRESSES WARFARE AND CONTROLS SITUATION ON MEDITERRANEAN.

TURKEY ASKS FOR HELP

Dispatches Declare Nations Are Expected to Take Hand at Any Moment—Cretans Assert They Will Unite With Greece.

Constantinople, Turkey.—The Turkish government addressed another appeal to the powers expressing pained surprise at Italy's action in declaring war and saying that there is still time to prevent the disastrous and evil effects of a war which nothing in the attitude of the Turkish empire justifies. The Porte appeals to the powers to assist in convincing Italy of the conciliatory intentions of Turkey.

The government has asked the United States to take charge of the interests of Ottoman subjects in Italy.

The war office announces measures to make the rule of martial law more severe because of the public excitement. Public meetings and alarmist publications are prohibited. Sufficient troops have been stationed in convenient places to meet emergencies.

"Committee" for War.

The Committee of Union and Progress published the following proclamation:

"Italy at length has unmasked her hostile designs on Tripoli. The Italian charge has handed a note to the Porte announcing the occupation of Tripoli province. The Ottoman prefers honor to lie and indignantly repels the Italian auducity.

"There will be war between the two countries and our nation will employ every means against the enemy. Tripoli will courageously deend itself. The Ottoman government will expel all Italians from Turkey and Italian schools and business houses will be closed.

"Our committee will employ all its influence to cause these measures to be applied in a calm spirit toward the nation which has trod under foot our most sacred rights. We beg the population to remain tranquil and leave to the government the duty of acting against the Italians, thus demonstrating that Ottomans are more civilized and equitable than Italians, who drove their government to the present action.

"We invite all children of the fatherland to be united at this critical moment."

Importance of Battle in Doubt.

The official version at Constantinople of the naval engagement off Prevesa differs from the earlier reports in that it makes no mention of the landing of troops following the sinking of a Turkish torpedo boat destroyer by an Italian cruiser.

News reached here from the city of Tripoli to the effect that a large Italian cruiser has gone ashore there.

Prevesa, the scene of the first encounter between the Italians and Turks, is situated at the entrance of the Gulf of Arta, which lies at the extreme south end of Albania and which divides that Turkish province from Greece. It is removed from the regular line of transit for steamers from Venice and Trieste through the Adriatic.

DISSOLUTION OF TOBACCO

PLANS OF DISINTEGRATION ALL MADE PUBLIC.

Will Be Three Competing Companies, the American, Continental and Ligget & Myers.

New York, N. Y.—Some of the details of the plan of disintegration or recreation by which the American Tobacco Company will sek to obey the mandate of the supreme court have been made public. There will be three companies, probably known as the American Tobacco Company, the Continental Tobacco Company and the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company which will operate separately and distinctly from each other and compete with each other. The last named was one of the chief constituents of the Continental Tobacco Company. Prior to the consolidation of the American Tobacco Company and the Consolidated Tobacco Company as the present American Tobacco Company, the Continental was owned by the Consolidated.

Each of the new companies will issue bonds, preferred stock and common stock to be exchanged for the present issues of the American Tobacco Company. As to the treatment of the securities of the present American Tobacco Company, it is understood that it will be as follows:

American Tobacco preferred shares will receive in exchange par in equal proportions of the preferred stock of the three segregated companies. The new preferred stock will bear 6½ per cent dividends as against 6 per cent paid on the present preferred stock.

American Tobacco 4 per cent bonds will receive in exchange $450 in cash per $1,000 bond and 50 per cent of their par value in equal proportions of new five per cent bonds to be issued by the three segregated companies.

American Tobacco 6 per cent bonds will receive cash and bonds of the new companies in proportions which cannot be given at this time.

American Tobacco common stock now selling at $400 per share on the New York curb will receive in exchange par in equal proportions of the common stock of the segregated companies.

SUPERIOR HAS $25,000 FIRE.

Gasoline Spreads on Water of Bay and Burns Fiercely.

Duluth, Minn. — Fire originating in some mysterious manner in gasoline that was spread out on the water to Tower bay slip in Superior did damage to the amount of $25,000 and property worth millions was threatened and for an hour or more was in danger. The damage is confined to the destruction of two ferry boats, two launches and to the property of the Northwestern Oil Company and Tower Bay dock.

The fire department of Superior fought the fire over tanks of naphtha fearlessly and with the same ardor as if it were so much water. How the gasoline got on the water is not known. Where the stuff leaked from has not been established, but it was set fire by a spark from some boat, and the waters of the slip were instantly sheeted in flames. The fires burned fiercely around the tanks of the Northwestern Oil Company, and did considerable damage there. It was extinguished only by the splendid work of the fire department under conditions of the greatest personal danger. The two ferry boats were old. They were the Hattie Lloyd and Fanchon owned by Captain A. C. Majo.

KILLS WIFE NO. 2

CHICAGO INTERNE SAYS WOMAN FOUND SLAIN NEAR DIXON WAS HIS VICTIM.

MYSTERY QUICKLY CLEURS

Committed Crime to Hide Marital Duplicity From First Mate—Makes a Full Confession.

Chicago, Illinois. — Dr. Harry Elgin Webster, a Rush Medical college graduate student and interne at the Polychnic hospital, in a remarkable confession to the police, admitted that he murdered one of his two young wives, Bessie Kent Webster of Chicago, in the woods of Ogle county, ten miles from Dixon, Il., Sept. 16. The authorities declare that the motive for the crime was Webster's desire to hide from his first wife, Zoe Varney Webster, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., the fact that he was a bigamist. He had married the two women within one week last January.

The accidental discovery of Bessie Kent's body, almost two weeks after she had been killed, was followed by identification and the arrest of Webster.

The young medical student was arrested at the hospital shortly after he had left Zoe Varney Webster, wife number one, at a down town hotel, where he had attempted to explain his marital duplicity to his first wife. She had been greatly shocked by her husband's revelations, but he had convinced her that he knew nothing of the murder near Dixon.

One of the peculiar features of the case was the manner in which the Chicago police work compared with that of the country officials who came to Chicago to arrest the murderer. The credit for solving the murder mystery belongs to W. P. Delany, sheriff of Ogle county, and W. P. Emerson, assistant state's attorney in the same county.

Webster, still mopping his eyes with his handkerchief and the back of his hand, began the story of his life from birth. He said that he was born in Freeport, Ill., in 1882. He led up to his education in Rush Medical college and, finally, to his meeting and infatuation with Bessie Kent. But, he continued, he had not thought of marrying her. Miss Kent, he said, was to be a "chum" and not a wife.

"Still Bessie followed me. She was so insistent that I agreed to marry her and the ceremony was performed in a justice's office in the county building just a week after my marriage to Zoe."

Bessie was to get a divorce, but failed to do so, and an application made by the doctor failed. He attempted to leave her, but she followed him to Dixon and demanded to see his parents. He took her for a drive into their country to gain time, their quarrel increased and he finally killed her.

San Francisco.—400.

Cairo, Ill.—300; machinists at work

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Reports received here indicate that about 35,000 men—members of the systems federations of the Harriman lines and of the Illinois Central—have obeyed the order to strike, in an effort to force recognition of the federation by the railroad heads. The strike, laboring men declare, eventually will spread all over America, unless the federation of unions is recognized.

From all over the middle and far west, where the strike has started, come reports that the men obeyed in an orderly manner. In a number of places, moving pictures were taken of the men as they marched out, to prove their orderly exit. Armed guards are being stationed about the deserted shops of the Harriman lines and the Illinois Central. Officials of these lines declare there are ten strikebreakers applying for every place vacated and that there will be no delay to traffic. Unionists deny this statement. The machinists were the last of the shop crafts to strike.

4,000 Quit at Burnside.

All of the 4,000 men employed in the Illinois Central shops at Burnside, just south of Chicago, laid down their tools and went on strike. There was no disorder. Guards were immediately thrown about the place by the railroad officials. There was no demonstration and the policemen at the different gates of the stockade had nothing to do. As the first to leave reached the gates he met several hundred men constituting the night force, who were returning for their tools. The night men decided not to re-enter the shops, however, and departed without their tools.

There were no strike breakers at hand, although the company is reported to have a force of recruits in Chicago. One hundred and fifty locomotives in the course of repairs are in the shops and more than 500 cars are in the yards, not available for use until repairs are completed.

Say Engines Will Be Tied Up.

The first handicap to traffic is expected when the engines are brought to the ashpits. The men say there will be no one to handle them and the engines will not be ready for use when needed.

Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president of the Harriman lines, who will represent the lines in all negotiations looking to a settlement, returned here from New York. Mr. Kruttschnitt said he had heard nothing from railroad officials in the south and west and that he would make no statement.

As engineers, firemen and trainmen on the Harirman road received increased wages recently, they probably would not consider going on a sympathetic strike. Traffic would not suffer were all the shopmen to strike, railroad officers declare.

Prepared for Violence.

The shops at Burnside are surrounded by a 10-foot board fence, surmounter by a wire screen. Policemen were stationed at every entrance and only railroad officials and workmen were admitted.

Although no violence is expected, reserve forces of policemen are being held at the Woodlawn, Kensington and Grand Crossing stations, ready for immediate use in the event of trouble. The reserve force numbers 500 patrolmen and it is said this number will be increased.

Railroad officials worked all night preparing for the strike of shopmen by removing hundreds of locomotives and cars from the shops.

Dublin, Oct. 2.—The bronze statue of Parnell, one of the finest achievements of the great sculptor Augustus St. Gaudicus, which has been erected largely through subscriptions by American admirers was unveiled by John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish parliamentary party. The scenes of enthusiasm were only paralleled by those which attended the unveiling of the O'Connell statue at the opposite end of Sackville street 30 years ago. Richard Croker accompanied Mr. Redmond.

SCHLEY IS DEAD

DESTROYED SPAIN'S FLEET

On July 2, 1898, During the Absence of His Superior Officer, Admiral William T. Sampson—In the Service Forty-five Years.

New York, N. Y. — Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley dropped dead near the corner of Forty-fourth street and Fifth avenue while on his way down town. Admiral Schley had been out of town over Sunday and on his return here had gone to the New York Yacht club. After a short stay at the club he started to walk along Forty-fourth street toward Fifth avenue when he was taken suddenly ill. A hurry call was sent for physicians and an ambulance but before aid could reach him the admiral was dead.

Winfield Scott Schley was born in Frederick county, Maryland, Oct. 9, 1839, the son of John Thomas and Georgiana Virginia Schley. He entered the naval academy at Annapolis Sept. 20, 1856, and was graduated in 1860. During the following year he served on the frigate Niagara. In 1861 he was promoted to the rank of "master," and attached to the frigate Potomac, which was serving as storeship at Ship island. In 1862-3 he was on the steam gunboat Winona, of the west gulf blockading squadron.

On July 16, 1862, he was commissioned lieutenant. During the years from 1864 to 1866 he served on a steam gunboat of the Pacific squadron and distinguished himself in 1865, during the insurrection of the Chinese coolies on Middle Chincha islands. In the same year he was at La Union, San Salvador, to protect the American interests during the revolution in that county. He became lieutenant commander July 25, 1866, and acted as instructor in languages at Annapolis from 1867 to 1869. In 1870 he was assigned to the Benicia, third rate, and with that ship spent three years at the China station. He saw sharp fighting in June, 1871, during the capture of the Korean forts on the Sulee river, leading the assaulting column.

From 1873 to 1876 he was again at the naval academy, being appointed commander June 10, 1874. In 1877 he commanded the "Essex," third rate, at the South American station. From 1880 to 1883 he was lighthouse inspector at Boston, became attached to the bureau of equipment in 1883 and in 1884 was placed in command of a relief expedition sent to the arctic regions to search for Lieutenant Greely and his comanions. Two former expeditions sent out for that purpose had failed. Commander Scvhley's expedition sailed from St. Johns, Newfoundland, May 12, 1884, with the three steam whalers "Thetis," "Bear" and "Alert." The expedition returned to St. Johns on July 16 of the same year.

Previous to the outbreak of the Spanish-American war Commodore Schley was ordered on the Brooklyn and given command of the "flying squadron." It was his squadron which located the Spanish fleet at Santiago on May 29, 1898, and blocked the harbor. On the morning of July 2, 1898, Admiral Sampson, who was the superior in command, departed for Siboney, leaving Schley in full command of the fleet on board of the flagship.

Scarcely one hour after the admiral's departure the Spanish fleet emerged from its sheltering harbor. Commodore Schley directed the battle which followed and which ended with the complete destruction of the Spanish fleet.

Schley's action in the battle was made the subject of an investigation, but the experts found his action fully justified and public opinion gave Schley all credit due to him. While on the waiting list after his return to Porto Rico, he made a tour of the country and was feted and overwhelmed with honors everywhere. He was made rear admiral March 3, 1899, and from Nov. 9 of that year was in command of the South Atlantic station until Oct. 9, 1901, when he was placed upon the retired list having attained the age of 62 years.

Admiral Schley married Anne Rebecca Franklin of Annapolis and they have three children living. The eldest, Virginia, is the wife of Ralph Montague Stewart Wortley, an Englishman residing in New York. The admiral's eldest son and namesake is a surgeon in New York, and a young son, Franklin Schley, is a lieutenant of the Twenty-third infantry.

Schley was in active service at sea for a total of eighteen years. He had twenty-five years and seven months of land duty.

300 DEAD IN PENN. FLOOD

JAM BURSTS, CAUSING CATASTROPHE IN WHICH BOTH COSTELLO AND AUSTIN ARE DESTROYED.

FLAMES COMPLETE HAVOC

Rescuers Labor to Save Injured, With Light From Burning Buildings.—Logs Hurled Down on Village By Wave.

Austin, Pa.—Two towns leveled by flood and fire, an estimated death list of over 300 persons, as many more injured and the surviving inhabitants dazed to inaction, is the destruction worked in this town by a flood which broke the concrete dam at Austin, freeing a lake five miles long that engineering science had held in leash in the valley of Freemans Run. The torrent of water, carrying with it millions of feet of pulp logs, swept away the buildings in its path, and, as the structures were dashed from their foundations, fire sprung from the broken gas connections and spread to the buildings higher up in the valley.

The flood, a repetition of the Johnstown disaster, first destroyed Austin, a town of 3,000 population, swept its buildings along in the current and dashed them into the town of Costello, a short distance down the valley.

The flood was in full daylight, but the inhabitants had relied on the strength of the dam, which had held water but a week. The dam was five miles above the town, and when the report came that the water was running over the top, many went out to see it.

It was while these persons watched that the pile of cement and rock gave way and the lake, five miles long, 530 feet wide and 50 feet deep, swept down on the towns. There was no chance to give warning, and those in Austin and Costello were caught. Hearing the rush of water and the tumbling logs it carried on its surface, many rushed for the higher surface and had scarcely reached safe places before flames shot up about them.

People in their homes and in places of business were killed instantly or were injured and carried along with the torrent until they died of exhaustion.

Survivors See Homes Burn.

The flood left the survivors without means to protect themselves from the second danger that sprang up, and they sat on the banks of the receding river, dazed and powerless, to watch their homes burn. No apparatus was available to help them, and none could be obtained from surrounding towns before Austin was in ruins.

Darkness came before the surviving people realized the extent of the destruction and that added to their bewilderment. Whole families were destroyed and in other instances men and women returned to find their homes gone. They wandered up and down the valley, calling, and getting no response, looked for the bodies.

The dam was built two years ago and the water was turned into the basin but a week ago. Behind the dam was the pile of logs to be used by the Goodyear Lumber Company and the pulp mills. When the dam went out the entire pile of concrete seemed to go down at once and the water swept along in a solid crest as high as the dam had been. The logs riding the crest of the floor made a battering ram that swept all before it. The pulp mill, half a mile abbve Austin, was one of the first buildings to be wrecked and its timbers were added to the burden the flood already carried. At the outskirts of the town the great dam demolished the planing mill and the hotel which stood near it.

The escape of more than two score who survived the first onslaught of the flood was cut off by a long barbedwire fence which ran along the creek. When the flood passed, rescueing parties found the bodies caught in the wires and terribly torn. Many bodies are being recovered along the banks of the river, some having been swept five miles below the city.

Fire departments from Smithport, Coudersport, Bradford and Keating Summit were rushed here to fight the flames. The wreck of the buildings left the gas mains open and the flames spread rapidly. All of the buildings not completely destroyed by the flood were swept by fire, which blazed along the ruins, jumping from gas pipe to gas pipe.

Residences suffered because of their construction, and while no accurate estimate of the real damage can be made, it is stated that there are not enough houses left in the village to cover the survivors. The railroad shops, where the debris is piled high, and which resisted for a time the force of the water, probably will prove to be the death chamber of the majority of the men who were employed there. A rescuing party attempted to reach the interior of the ruins but were driven back by the smell of burning flesh.

Strong men became cowards, and until help comes from the outside, little can be done to ascertain the loss or succor the injured. Those so fortunate as to live above the line of flood were called to help the survivors of the valley, and the food supply was soon exhausted, as every grocery store, with the exception of one small establishment, was swept away. Many went without their evening meal.

The five or six churches in the town are all gone, the only public institutions left standing being the hospital and the schoolhouse. They were above the flood line.

Among the principal places destroyed was the plant of the Emporium Lumber Company, not a vestige of it being left. A part of the plant of the Bayless Pulp and Paper Company, whose dam gave way, also disappeared under the raging waters, and the Commercial hotel and Davis house went down before the rush. The White house, another hotel, was burned and it is believed that several persons perished with the building.

Whole families have been wiped out. Among them are some of the leading people in the town, but in the darkness and confusion it is impossible to tell just who are left. The number of the dead is estimated at from 850 to 1,000, the population of the town having been 3,000 before the disaster.

Through all the three miles of the valley the scene scarce loses the aspect of a gorge. Never more than 400 feet wide, and inclosed on two sides by high hills, it allowed the great wall of water but little opportunity to spread out and lose its force. Down this the flood rushed.

A dangerous situation developed immediately after the great wall of water had passed. Austin was piped for natural gas and the great force of the flood tore the mains from the streets. One of them, the largest pipe in the town, burst in the business section. A moment afterwards the gas rushed out and in a twinkling it had taken fire. There was no explosion, but the flames leaped to a height of twenty feet or more and, blown by a strong wind were communicated to the nearest house. In ten minutes a dozen other gas pipes had burst and were pouring their deadly inflamable fluid into the air.

The dam which burst was a gigantic concrete structure which in reality was a double dam. It was located on a hill a half mile above the village and spanned practically the entire valley, which at this point is about one-third of a mile wide and banked by high hills. The dam held back a wall of water fifty feet deep and three quarters of a mile long normally as reserve power for the great pulp and paper mill which nestled at its base.

The Johnstown flood, which is recalled by the Austin, Pa., disaster, occurred on the afternoon of May 31, 1889, and 2,142 lives were lost and property was damaged to the extent of more than $9,500,000.

The Johnstown flood followed a series of heavy rains which caused the breaking of a dam across the south branch of the Conemaugh river, 18 miles above the city. The break released the waters of Conemaugh lake, which was two and a half miles long, one and a half miles wide, and, in places 100 feet deep. This great volume of water swept down the narrow valley at terrific speed, covering the 18 miles between the dam and Johnstown in seven minutes.

In the valley between the dam and Johnstown stood the villages of South Fork, Mineral Point, Conemaugh and Woodvale. On Decoration day, 1889, there were approximately 40,000 people in these towns. The following day Mineral Point was entirely wiped out, with not a house left standing. Neither was there a building left standing in Conemaugh, and as to Woodvale, there has been a dispute ever since the flood as to where the villages really stood.

ASSESS HIGHER

STATE TAX COMMISSION REPORTS BIG GAIN IN ALL COUNTIES.

VALUATION $206,000,000

Preliminary Returns Add About Ten Million Dollers to Personal Property Assessment Throughout the State.

St. Paul.—An increase of about ten millions in the assessed valuation of personal property in the state, exclusive of moneys and credits, will be effected, according to a preliminary report issued by the state tax commission. The complete figures cannot be given, as the reassessment ordered by the commission on the personal property in South St. Paul has not been completed. With this single exception returns from every assessment district in the state have been equalized by the commission.

The total valuation will be in the neighborhood of $206,000,000. The total for 1910, excluding moneys and credits, which henceforth will be assessed separately, was $196,117,473. Members of the commission give assurance that the total for the missing city of South St. Paul will be fully as high as the last year, which was $1,036,412. Leaving South St. Paul out of the computation, it is found that the total valuation is $204,810,009, as compared with $195,081,061. This shows an increase of $9,729,948.

The counties of Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis produced $7,021,461, or approximately 70 per cent. Of the remaining eighty-three counties twenty made returns lower than the valuation of a year ago. The equalization did not raise the totals above last year's figures, and these twenty counties show decreases in personal property assessments. The counties in this list are Chisago, Dodge, Houston, Olmsted, Otter Tail, Pennington, Pine, Polk, Pope, Redwood, Scott, Traverse, Watonwan, Wilkin and Winona.

J. G. Armstrong, a member of the commission, gives as one of the explanations for the decreases the losses entailed in the agricultural sections by the drouth. Scarcity of pasture, he says, compelled the farmers to dispose of more of their livestock than they ordinarily would have done, and as a consequence there is less livestock on the books than there was a year ago.

BRUTAL HOLDUP.

Farmer near Minneapolis Victim of Thugs.

Minneapolis. — Beaten and tortured by two highwaymen who attacked him while in his barn, Robert Schultz, aged 61, a bachelor beekeeper living two and one-half miles northeast of Hamel, staggered into the home of J. C. Lewcock, his nearest neighbor, and gave an alarm that brought out the entire countryside on a hunt for the robbers, and then told the extraordinary story that his bees, answering a familiar humming sound of his lips, swarmed into the barn and settled upon the robbers, thereby scaring them away and saving his life.

Armed with shotguns, rifles, scythes and clubs, the women carrying brooms and rolling pins, forty people soon gathered and surrounded a heavily wooded place in which the robbers were thought to be concealed. Patrick Donohue, D. C. Hatcher, William Egan, Dr. A. Aubin, William Kluck, Edward Siefert, William Dolan, Gorge Hughes, Fred Eggert and Paul Raider led them on. Sheriff Otto Langum and three deputies made a quick run from Minneapolis to Hamel and Sheriff Langum followed footprints from the scene of the robbery to Robbinsdale, where they became confused with others and were lost in the village.

Schultz, who is a bachelor, lives on four acres of ground near the Soo line tracks and northeast of Hamel, and where he keeps 400 swarms of bees.

"I went out to the barn at 7 o'clock to milk the cow," Schultz said, "and I was sitting down on the stool and milking when I looked up and two men were in the barn. They had masks and one had a revolver and the other a club. They said they knew I had money and they wanted it.

"I told them I didn't have any except $20 that was in the house, and one of the men went into the house to get it, but my dog was at the door and he growled and the man went in through a window.

"He came back and said he had looked where I told him and that the money was not there, and then the other man said: 'Then we better kill him.'

Bees Answer Call.

"I did not know what to do. But I made the sound that I used to make to the bees when I used to sit on the front steps and call them, and they came in the door and began to light on the backs of the men.

"One of the men pushed me over and the other man struck me in the face and made it bleed, and they kept on striking, but the bees were flying in the barn thicker and one of the men started and ran out of the barn and then the other one went after him. I was stunned, and when I got up I was bleeding but I ran across the railroad tracks to Lewcock's house and told what had happened and Mr. Lewcock got his gun and rig and went out for other neighbors.

"The men left me and ran because the bees scared them, and that saved my life," Schultz said. "I have lived here all my life and nearly all my life I have kept bees."

METHODISTS AT WORK.

After the presentation of the memoirs, the sacrament of the Lord's supper was held, Bishop McIntire presiding assisted by District Superintendent Benjamin Longley, St. Paul; F. B. Cowgill, Mankato; G. A. Cahoon, Marshall, and J. C. Craig, Winona.

After the service the conference organized for business. The roll was called by Rev. E. C. Teachout, secretary, showing an attendance of about 160.

Election of officers was called, and E. C. Teachout of Stillwater was reelected secretary, with S. A. Cook, Red Wing; I. B. Wood, Albert Lea; I. C. Kern, St. Paul; B. L. Dr. Wiley Congratulated.

A telegram from the clubwomen was sent to Dr. Wiley at Washington, expressing delight at the exoneration and appreciation of his work for pure food.

Dr. Bracken gave a strong indorsement of medical supervision in the public schools in his talk on "The Citizen of Tomorrow." He said supervision was a more correct term than inspection and less offensive to parents, and pointed out its value in protecting children from disease in the early detection of defects and in affording opportunities to study children all the way through the grades. He said schools should not be closed in cases of contagious diseases longer than two days for cleaning the building. He said children were better in school under supervision during an epidemic than at large. Dr. Bracken indorsed the open air school and lower temperature in school buildings.

Dodge Center's invitation to hold the next annual state convention in that city was accepted, as was also the invitation from St. Paul to hold the mid-winter breakfast there.

GIRL'S LONG SLEEP

Young Woman in State of Como for 100 Days.

Physicians Attribute Miss Hazel Schmidt's Experience to Work Which Overtaxed Her Nervous System.

Vandalia, Ill.—Hazel Schmidt, after a sleep of 100 days, recently awakened, and is picking up the loose threads of life, reading the newspapers and marveling at the infinite number of things that can occur in so short a time.

"This remarkable sleep of a young and handsome woman is said by the doctors to be unprecedented in authentic cases of a similar nature. To be sure Rip Van Winkle was made to sleep 20 years by Washington Irving, but that story is fiction, while Hazel Schmidt's sleep is attested by hundreds who saw, and no one in this city will doubt its truth.

It was on April 25 that she entered on the long sleep. The permanent awakening did not occur until Thursday, August 3, making it exactly 100 days that she was practically withdrawn from the world.

During that 100 days the longest time that she could be kept awake was a period of two hours, and the longest period that she was asleep continually was 61 hours.

Despite the fact that during these 100 days, and for four weeks before they began, and for two or three days after they were ended, she did not leave her bed, she looks and feels just as well today as when she entered on this record-breaking sleep.

Her intellect appears just as keen as ever; she is interested in the world's doings, is eager for information, but is so sensitive about the remarkable experience that she has undergone that she will see no strangers, and she is loathe to discuss her case with even her closest personal friends and is even reticent when talking with her father and mother regarding it.

Hazel Schmidt is 21 years old and is remarkably pretty. She is a trifle above the medium height, is slender, weighing about 125 pounds, and is of a graceful carriage and figure.

Girl a Rip Van Winkle.

Five years ago she accepted a position in the telephone exchange in Vandalia, and for five years she was employed there. She became the chief operator, and had charge of the long-distance wires. At first the work did not appear onerous, but during the last months those who knew her best could not fail to detect she was decidedly more nervous than she was when she undertook the work.

Her father observed this, and he prevailed on her to abandon the work. She was ambitious, and after at first demurring she did give up the place, but accepted a clerkship in the office of the county clerk, and was employed on the arduous task of making out the tax books.

Her nervousness increased to so alarming an extent that a doctor was called, and he diagnosed her condition as a weakening of the nervous system, and that a complete rest and no mental exertion was necessary to restore her to her normal condition. She gave up work altogether and remained at her home and went into society but little. During the latter part of March her condition became such that her family was alarmed. "There is no cause for apprehension," the doctor said. "It is purely hysteria, and with careful treatment she will eventually recover, but it may be a long time."

During the first week of her strange sleep the girl was never awake to exceed a few minutes at a time. She appeared to suffer none. Her awakenings were calm and peaceful. They were preceded by no nervous manifestations of any alarming character. She would open her eyes and calmly ask some question, and apparently did not realize that she had been asleep to an unusual extent. The fact that she had slept so long was kept from her for fear that it would frighten her.

"Dad, bring me a glass of water," was the request and first intimation that George A. Schmidt received that Morpheus had relinquished his grip on the sleeping daughter.

Attending physicians say that she has gained weight during her long sleeping spell, and that she will fully recover.

MINISTER'S SALARY TOO LARGE.

Missourian Has Remarkable Reason For Resigning.

$2,000 a year was excessive considering the amount appropriated in charitable and other church work, Rev. Eugene F. Abbott of the First Presbyterian church here has resigned. He has accepted a call to a church at Fulton, Mo., where his salary will be $1,800 per year.

CHICAGO EXPRESSMAN BEATEN.

Chicago Man Robbed of $350 While Making His Calls.

Chicago, Illinois.—Frank Solomon, 21 years old, a driver employed by an express company, was beaten into unconsciousness and robbed of $350. The driver was making his rounds of manufacturing plants on the west side when he was attacked by two unknown men and beaten over the head with a piece of gas pipe. He was later found by the police and removed to a hospital. He will recover.

WINDOM HUNTER DROWNED

Wades for Shore in Shallow Water, Which Grows Deeper.

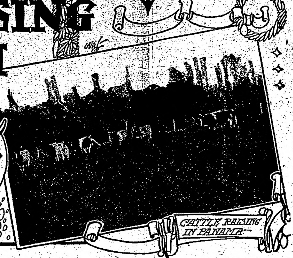
Windom.—While hunting on String lakes, five miles west of here, Mike Beverson was drowned. He and his partner were out in a boat and it sunk in about four feet of water. Rather than wait for help, Beverson started out for shore, but struck deeper water, and being exhausted and cold was drowned before reaching shore. A widow and four children survive.

Freeborn Hutner Killed.

Albert Lea.—M. J. Creegan, a prominent farmer of Newry township, was accidently shot and killed while out hunting. He and some neighbors met in the wood near his house, and all sat down for a visit, the firearms lying about on the ground. In some manner one of the guns was discharged and the load from each barrel struck Mr. Cregan in the head and killed him instantly. He was a young man and is survived by a widow and four children.

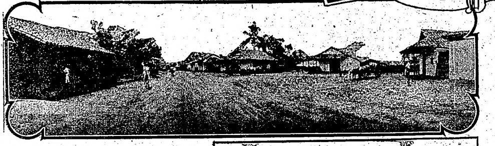
CATTLE RAISING IN CHIRIQUI

By FORBES LINDSAY



CATTLE RAISING IN PANAMA

THAT portion of the Province of Chiriqui lying on the Pacific side of the Continental Divide and extending westward from the Rio Tabasara, contains the richest lands in the Republic of Panama. Of this area, the choicest section is what commonly goes by the name of the "Divala country," including the districts of Alanje, Boqueron and Bugaba. This superlatively fertile region is situated between David, the capital of the province, and the Costa Rican border. There is no finer agricultural land than it in the world. Along its playas the coco palm thrives. A little farther inland the admixture of sand in the deep stratum of alluvial soil, combined with climate and drainage, make such perfect conditions for the growth of sugar cane that the yield is as great as anywhere in the tropics, although the fields are not irrigated, and tilled only in the most primitive manner. At somewhat higher elevations tropical fruits, tobacco, cacao, and rubber flourish, while in the mountain valleys the vegetables of the temperate zone and coffee of excellent quality are produced.



THE RANCH HOUSE IN CHIRIQUI

UP COUNTRY IN CHIRIQUI

This country is admirably adapted to the pursuit of cattle raising. The land is covered by light forest, locally termed "monte," which may readily be cleared with the machete. At intervals this growth gives place to level expanses of grass-covered llano, often several square miles in extent, dotted here and there with wild fig or other shade trees in small stands or solitary station. The prevailing herbage of the llanos is jenjebrillo, which bears a close resemblance to the famous "blue grass" of Kentucky.

The region is abundantly watered. Every few miles a river or creek intersects the forest, but in the dry season all but the largest of these fail. It is where the interval between streams is unusually great, say, seven or eight miles, that the monte gives way to open grassland. The slope of the ground and the porosity of the soil insure perfect drainage, and there is an entire absence of swamps, save for the inevitable manglare strips along the coast.

When the development of Chiriqui shall have fairly set in, irrigation will surely become an important factor in the agricultural industries. Good reservoir sites are plentiful, and the lay of the land is perfectly suitable to the installation of simple, inexpensive gravity systems.

The climate of this section is subtropical and somewhat like that of Florida. The mean temperature is about 75 degrees F., and the extreme variations do not exceed 15 per cent. in either direction. The heat of the day is usually tempered by breezes, and the night is cool at all times. The dry season extends over the first four months of the year, and recurs for a few weeks in September and October. During the remaining period there is almost daily rain which seldom extends through more than three or four hours in any 24, and is preceded and followed by clear weather. Excessive humidity is of rare occurrence. Destructive storms, hurricanes and tornadoes are virtually unknown.

The climate is distinctly favorable to man and beast. Few diseases, if any, are attributable to it. The inhabitants of Chiriqui enjoy exceptionally good health, and this statement applies to the natives of Europe and America, of whom there are a number settled in the province.

In the past 20 years, and perhaps much longer, no epidemic disease has appeared among men or animals in the province. Cattle are singularly free from the complaints which commonly afflict them elsewhere. Pleuropneumonia and anthrax have never been heard of. Blackleg once made its appearance, but was readily checked by vaccination.

The land in this portion of Chiriqui is of a generally level character, with a gentle, but constantly prevailing slope toward the ocean. The llanos may be traversed in any direction by the lightest vehicles with the ease which would be experienced in crossing a lawn. Cart roads are easily constructed through the forest stretches, in many cases nothing more being necessary than to clear the monte and remove rocks and the larger stones. The existing roads maintain communication between all centers of habitation and are quite equal to the requirements of any traffic which they may be called upon to support for some years to come. They are not macadamized, but the natural material of which they are composed is such as to pack well and erode but little. I have seen extremely heavy downpours of rain run off them without miring. It may be repeated that the drainage of the entire section under consideration is perfect.

In the Divala country all nonfordable streams are bridged. Telegraph and telephone wires connect all the principal points. Extensive improvements are being carried out, which will affect the highway system and other means of intercommunication.

The Pacific Mail and National Navigation company maintain a weekly service between Panama and David, carrying passengers, mail and freight, including live stock, and calling at way ports, on a journey occupying from three to six days. The length of time is mainly to be accounted for by the difficulty in navigating the rivers at low tide. A fast service has lately been introduced, with a schedule time of 30 hours between Panama and David, and an extension of the run to Punta Arenas, Costa Rica.

It is needless to say that after the opening of the Panama canal the facilities of Chiriquian products for water transportation will be greatly increased.

There is but one point upon the Pacific littoral of Panama at which vessels can approach the shore at low tide. This is a sea hole about eight miles from Divala. It is sheltered by the promontory of Punta Burica and thus lies in a natural harbor. A port could easily be established at Chorca Azul, or "Blue Pool," as the sea hole in question is called, and it would become the outlet for the exports of the Divala country and a point at which steamers could call without any unusual delay.

A railroad has been surveyed from Panama to David and will without doubt be constructed in the near future. It is probable that this line will ultimately be extended to Bocas del Toro on the Atlantic coast.

Stock raising is the principal industry of Chiriqui, and there are in the province more cattle than in all the rest of the republic's territory. There cannot be more than 50,000 head, all told, in Panama. Six or eight large ranches will account for nearly half the number, the remainder being scattered in small ownership.

The domestic supply of beef falls far short of the demand. Large quantities are shipped from the United States to the canal commission, the markets of Colon and Panama, as well as to the depot of the United Fruit company at Bocas del Toro. This concern has tried ineffectually to contract with ranch owners of Chiriqui for 200 head a month. About two years ago a representative of a packing company went through the province with a view to determining whether it would be feasible to establish a packing house there to supply the canned-beef trade of the west coast of South America. He soon determined that the available cattle would not keep a small factory running constantly.

Nevertheless, there is land in the republic that would sustain 5,000,000 head of cattle. There is no better country for economical cattle raising. One acre of its potrero will fatten a steer, whereas three acres of our western grazing land is required to support one. But the soil of Panama has not yet been touched by a plow and, although cattle raising is the most advanced of the country's industries, the scope for improvement in the methods of conducting it is extremely great.

The llanos are the public "commons," upon which any man is free to range his stock. Probably 30,000 head, in herds seldom exceeding 15, are pastured on these plains through the rainy months, during which the herbage is ample to keep the animals in good condition, though not sufficient to fatten them.

The llanos, or open grazing lands, are not saleable, nor alienable in any manner. There would be no inducement to purchase llano, except in the case of a large cattle owner who might design to range cattle in connection with potrero fattening, after the present method of our western country. Such a man would require a large extent of "commons" for his purposes. The only land worth having that is purchasable from the government is that covered with "monte." The reason for this is that wherever there is sufficient moisture to make the land cultivable such heavy growth will be found. The llano occurs where the interval between streams is unusually great and the land depends entirely upon rainfall for its moisture. In that case it will support none but the scantiest vegetation in the dry season. Crops could be raised on such ground satisfactorily only through the agency of irrigation.

Before the dry term has advanced far enough to parch the grass, the small owners sell their lean steers to the ranches, whence fatted cattle are sent to market in order to make room in the potreros for the new purchases.

A potrero is a fattening ground, made by clearing away the natural growth, save for a few shade trees, and, after burning over, planting in the several kinds of fodder plants suitable to the different soils. The varieties of grasses generally employed are guinea, savoya, para, and jujuca.

Para and jujuca are best adapted to cultivation in low-lying land and along river banks, because they readily absorb moisture and retain it for a long time. Guinea grass grows to seven feet and over. The objection to it is that the cattle are apt to eat only about half the leaf from the top, leaving the remainder in a stool which has to be cleared at the end of the season. On the other hand, it has the advantage over para of retaining greater vitality during the dry weather. Guinea and para must be planted. They cannot be sown with effect, for while they readily disseminate themselves the seeds will germinate only when gathered at perfect maturity.

Savoya is more spreading than guinea grass and does not grow to as great a height. It stools like the latter, but not with as much waste. Cattle must be put to savoya in good season, for they will not touch it in flower.

With these fodder plants the cattle raisers of Chiriqui obtain good results, the average steer yielding 400 pounds of meat, but there is no doubt that fattening might be contrived on more effective and economical lines.

Alfalfa should grow vigorously in many parts of the province, where the loose sandy character of the soil is admirably calculated to promote the deep-rooting habit of the plant. At least two crops of alfalfa could be secured during the rains and with irrigation a third in the dry season.

With a view to the introduction of alfalfa to Panama I sent, about two years ago, several packages of selected seed to Chiriqui and the canal zone, but there is every reason to believe that it did not receive proper treatment, and no conclusive deduction can be drawn from the experiment.

It would seem that resort should be made to other forage crops than the grasses. If the land designed for potreros, or certain portions of it, were plowed over and sown in cowpeas, velvet beans, and other leguminous plants, better results would doubtless be secured, especially if this food should be balanced with a proper quantity of starchy matter, such as cassava. Such a regimen would produce a heavier grade of stock in a shorter time than is possible under the present method of fattening.

The by-products of the reduction of sugar cane and cocoanuts, bagasse and press cake, respectively, are excellent fatteners, and under certain circumstances should be plentifully available.

There is room for much improvement in the breed of Chiriquian cattle. Blooded stock has been imported at great expense by a few ranch owners, and many experiments in crossing have been made. It cannot be said, however, that a satisfactory decision has been reached as to the strain best adapted to the climate and conditions of the country.

Although the purchaser of land for stock raising is required to have three-fourths of it in cultivation within four years, the same as with land for crop purposes, yet assurances are given by the authorities that a literal compliance with the law will by no means be required.

In the case of cattle land any degree of improvement that should indicate the intention of the holder of the land to put it to the declared purpose would suffice to insure title. To illustrate, if an entire tract of 4,000 acres were fenced, 1,000 acres turned into potrero, and 1,000 acres cleared for corrals, home pasture, buildings and other purposes, the authorities would deem the intent of the law to have been amply complied with.

It may be well to warn intending settlers against taking up land at a distance from existing centers of habitation or development. The man who should do so will entail upon himself the burden of constructing a road at considerable expense, not to mention a number of more or less serious inconveniences.

There is public land available all along the proposed Panama-David railroad line, but the best lands are in the "Divala country," to the west of David.

A REMARKABLE CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

Munyon's Stomach Treatment Performing Miracles.

MUNYON TELLS YOU HOW TO GET WELL FREE OF CHARGE

"A few days ago I received a letter from a young man, who states he is 28 years of age, and has occupied several important positions, but owing to indigestion and inability to sleep he has been unable to concentrate his mind upon his work and has consequently been discharged on the ground of neglect of duty. He goes on to say that he is a young man of steady habits, but for years he has suffered from dyspepsia, which has so affected his nerves that he is unable to sleep, and that it is not neglect upon his part, nor lack of interest in the business, but simply physical weakness. He asks my advice in this matter.

"For the benefit of a large number of those similarly situated I propose to answer this letter publicly, hoping that it may be the means of helping many who may be affected in this way.

"In the first place, the stomach must be made well before the nerves can be made strong. The nerves must be made strong before one can sleep well. No one is capable of doing his best who is in any way troubled with insomnia or any form of nervousness. The greatest generals have been men of iron nerve and indomitable will. They have had perfect digestion, being able to eat well, and digest all they ate.

"It is said that Napoleon lost the battle of Waterloo because of a fit of indigestion. Grant's enormous reserve power was due to a well stomach. Abraham Lincoln said that 'he did not know that he had a stomach.' Grover Cleveland, it is said, could work 18 hours a day, eat a hearty meal at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, go to bed and sleep soundly until 9 o'clock and get up refreshed, ready for a new day's work.

"Pres. Taft is another type of healthy manhood. Who thinks for one moment that he would be the President of the United States today had he been a dyspeptic or affected with some nervous ailment? I claim that two-thirds of all the failures in professional and business life are due to weak and deranged stomachs.

"No business house would care to employ a dyspeptic representative to sell goods for them on the road. One-half the men who stand behind counters today, earning from $12 to $15 a week, will never get beyond these figures, for the reason that they are physically weak. They lack the nerve power and commanding strength that come from a good, sound stomach.

"No one cares to hear a dyspeptic preacher. No matter how pious he may be, he is bound to reflect his bilious and jaundiced condition. He will unconsciously inoculate his hearers with his melancholy feelings.

"No one would think of entrusting an important legal case in the hands of a dyspeptic lawyer, any more than he would care to entrust his own life, or that of a dear one, in the hands of a physician who is nervous, irritable or a dyspeptic. Men must have good digestion, strong nerves and vital manhood in order to render a clean, clear-cut decision either in medicine, law or business.

"I believe that more than half of the divorces can be traced to ill health. I want every dyspeptic to try my stomach treatment, for it corrects nearly all forms of indigestion and nervousness. It makes old stomachs almost as good as new. Its marvelous power for digesting food and getting the best out of it makes for good rich, red blood. This, in turn, strengthens the nerves, builds up the general system, and will surely prolong life and make it a pleasure to live and do the things allotted to us."

TOO MUCH FOR SMALL BRAIN

Big Word Meant an Effort, but This Little Girl Made Brave Attempt.

This incident occurred just after a Jewish holiday. It was in a third grade school in Cleveland in a district of Russian and Hungarian Jews.

The teacher was explaining the meaning of the word judicious. She asked the children to give her stories about the word.

After several had given illustrations about the judicious use of money, the teacher said:

"Now give me a story about something judicious, without money in it."

A little girl finally volunteered. She said:

"On our holiday we had roast goose and a whole lot of other Jew dishes."

MOST LIKELY.

Miss Caustique—Well, her age is considerably marked down.

Mrs. Carter and her cook, says the Brooklyn Citizen, were discussing the murder which had harrowed the dusky citizens of the countryside.

"Will dey hang him fer killin' of his wife, Miss Cyarter?"

"We can't tell yet, Aunt Jinny. The court will decide. Of course, if they prove he did it on purpose—"

"Done it a purpose! Law, Miss Cyarter, in course he kilt his wife a purpose! Honey, ain't I done been married? Don't I know men?"

SOUND SLEEP

Can Easily Be Secured.

"Up to 2 years ago," a woman writes, "I was in the habit of using both tea and coffee regularly.

"I found that my health was beginning to fail, strange nervous attacks would come suddenly upon me, making me tremble so excessively that I could not do my work while they lasted; my sleep left me and I passed long nights in restless discomfort. I was filled with a nervous dread as to the future.

"A friend suggested that possibly tea and coffee were to blame, and I decided to give them up, and in casting about for a hot table beverage, which I felt was an absolute necessity, I was led by good fortune to try Postum.

"For more than a year I have used it three times a day and expect, so much good has it done me, to continue its use during the rest of my life.

"Soon after beginning the use of Postum, I found, to my surprise, that, instead of tossing on a sleepless bed through the long, dreary night, I dropped into a sound, dreamless sleep the moment my head touched the pillow.

"Then I suddenly realized that all my nervousness had left me, and my appetite, which had fallen off before, had all at once been restored so that I ate my food with a keen relish.

"All the nervous dread has gone. I walk a mile and a half each way to my work every day and enjoy it. I find an interest in everything that goes on about me that makes life a pleasure. All this I owe to leaving off tea and coffee and the use of Postum, for I have taken no medicine." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

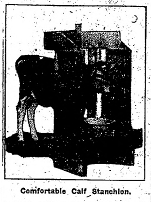
DAIRY

GOOD CARE OF YOUNG CALF

Prof. Redman Does Not Favor Pasturing Animals During First Summer on Account of Flies.

The Maine Farmer thus reports the address of Prof. R. W. Redman given on the Farming Special trip, on the subject of the dairy calf: His suggestions were the results of the best practical experience along that line. After some preliminary remarks along the line of selection of the cow and the use of a pure-bred bull, in which he emphasized the quite generally accepted assertion that the sire is half the breed, he spoke particularly of the treatment of the cow before calving. She should rest a few weeks and should be fed well but not high, and should have some succulent feed. She should have good care and attention and will respond with better offspring.

He suggested the following treatment of the calf: Leave it with the dam a few days and then take it away and teach it to drink. A clean pail should be used and the milk should always be the same temperature. After a few days of whole milk, the use of skimmilk may be commenced, with some substitutes for the fat which is taken out in the cream. The feeding of grain and clover hay may be commenced and gradually increased as the calf is able to assimilate it.



Comfortable Calf Stanchion.

Professor Redman said that the calf should be kept growing and not allowed to get a setback at any time, for it might never fully recover from it and would not be likely to make the high quality cow that it otherwise would.

Professor Redman did not favor pasturing the calves during the first summer, but rather keeping them inside and away from the annoying flies during the warm days, for often they lose more in fighting flies than they gain by the open air and pasturing. They might be turned out into a pen at night.

CARE OF THE YOUNG CALVES

Especially Susceptible to Ravages of Flies and Should Be Kept in Barn—Good Repellent.

(By W. W. KIMBALL.)

The young calves are especially susceptible to the ravages of flies and it will seldom prove profitable to allow them out of the barn except for exercise during the night when the flies will not prove troublesome. There are numerous remedies that may be used as fly repellents but the following formula recommended by Doctor Moore has given excellent satisfaction wherever used and where many of the expensive preparations have failed to perform what their manufacturers claimed for them.

Fish oil	100 parts
Oil of tar	50 parts
Crude carbolic acid	1 part

The cost of the mixture is about 30 cents a gallon and it may be applied with a hand sprayer every two days. Some prefer applying the mixture once a day, using lighter applications.

Loads of clover and other forage hauled to the stable every two or three days will keep the calves and cows in excellent condition and the manure thus made will nearly pay for the increased labor required in cutting and hauling.

When we consider the relationship between the comfort of the cows and calves and the amount of milk and growth we can hardly fail to see that we should do all in our power to improve their condition in fly time.

Learning Dairy Business.

The man who imagines he knows all there is to know about dairying without attending the short courses for dairying at the agricultural colleges or without reading a reliable farm paper is making a great mistake because no one man can hold all there is to know about the dairy business.

Temperature of Dairy.

Bacteria do not thrive in the cold, but in heat only. If you keep your milk below 40 degrees the bacteria will have small chance.

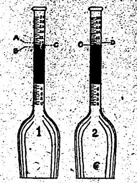
The dairy cannot be managed just right without the use of a thermometer—and it must be a good one, no 25-cent affair.

WAY TO READ CREAM TESTS

One Big Difficulty May Be Overcome by Adding Small Quantity of Fat-Saturated Alcohol.

In the Babcock tea-bottle the bottom of the fat column is practically a straight line but the top has a concave surface and the question as to whether the fat should be read at the top, the bottom, or some other point has been much discussed.

This uncertainty may be entirely overcome by dropping a small quantity of alcohol into the neck of the test bottle after the cream test is completed. The alcohol floats in the top and changes its concave surface to nearly a straight line. As the use of the alcohol dissolves the fat, therefore reduces the length of the column and gives too low a reading, this can be overcome by first adding to the alcohol all the fat it will dissolve and then pouring a small quantity of this fat-saturated alcohol on the top of the fat column in the test botle.



Reading Cream Tests.

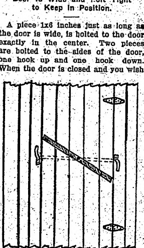
The diagrams in the figure show the difference. In bottle No. 1 it shows the top curve of the fat which occupies a space between A and B of nearly 1 per cent of the scale. The test should be read 19 or 20, depending on the selection of A or B as the point to which it is read.

In bottle No. 2 the alcohol makes a straight line at the top of the fat column, so that the test can be read at that point without any uncertainty.

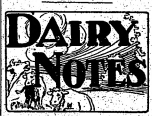
HANDY BARN DOOR FASTENER

Cross Piece Should Be as Long as the Door Is Wide and Bolt Tight to Keep in Position.

A piece 1x6 inches just as long as the door is wide, is bolted to the door exactly in the center. Two pieces are bolted to the sides of the door, one hook up and one hook down. When the door is closed and you wish to fasten it, pull down on the left and raise up on the right and the cross piece will fit in place. The bolt should fit tight so as to keep the cross piece in position.



A Handy Door Fastener.



DAIRY NOTES

Never allow the bull to run loose about the yard or fields.

The cream should be delivered not less than three times a week.

Watch the milch cows carefully, and see that they keep up their milk flow.

The value of milk for cheese making should be based upon the contents of both fat and casein.

Despite every effort, there is always more or less complaint of shrinkage of milk in the dry, hot months.

The example of a successful dairyman neighbor doesn't seem to have any impression on some farmers.

The woman who makes good butter and clean butter and puts it up attractively does not have to cut prices.

The man who gets his principal income from the dairy should breed his cows to registered dairy-bred sires.

Scours in young calves can be checked by feeding a teaspoonful of dried blood for each calf in two quarts of warm milk.

The average production of butter fat per year per cow is said to be between 140 and 150 pounds. This is far too little to be profitable.

The separator and all utensils should be kept clean and sweet by washing after each milking and then set in the sun to dry.

Nobody has yet discovered how to get all of the dirt out of milk. The only way to have absolutely clean milk is to prevent the dirt from getting into it.

Red Cross Christmas Seals.

A statement denying the recent reports about the abandonment of the Red Cross Christmas seal sale has been issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The statement declares that not only will the sale be held this year, as in the past three years, but that it will be conducted on broader lines than ever before. The only order issued by the postoffice department which bears on the sale of Red Cross seals was sent out on July 1, and prohibits the use of the mails to letters and packages bearing nonpostage stamps on the face, and also to any mail bearing seals which resemble postage stamps, if used either on the face or back. The Red Cross seal to be used this year has been submitted to the postoffice department and approved, and thus may be used, but only on the back of letters and packages. The design to be used this year depicts a pretty winter scene embossed in a heavy red circle. The corners are white, thus giving the effect when affixed to a letter or a package of a round seal.

"Well, t' missis and me, we've been married nigh on 50 years, and we've never had one quarrel."

These women are only a few of thousands of living witnesses of the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. Not one of these women ever received compensation in any form for the use of their names in this advertisement—but are willing that we should refer to them because of the good they may do other suffering women to prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a reliable and honest medicine, and that the statements made in our advertisements regarding its merit are the truth and nothing but the truth.

THEY ATE LEATHER.

The Way Morgan's Pirates Prepared Their Tough Food.

The infamous Captain Morgan and his piratical crew were sometimes in tight places at Panama and on one occasion were reduced to eating their leather bags.

"Some persons," says one of the company (Exquemelin, whose narrative is reproduced in "The Buccaneers In the West Indies"), "who never were out of their mothers' kitchens may ask how these pirates could eat, swallow and digest these pieces of leather, so hard and dry, unto whom I only answer that could they once experience what hunger—or, rather, famine—is they would certainly find the manner by their own necessity, as the pirates did.

"For these first took the leather and sliced it in pieces. Then they beat it between two stones and rubbed it, often dipping it in the water of the river to render it by these means supple and tender. Lastly they scraped off the hair and roasted or broiled it upon the fire. And, being thus cooked, they cut it into small morsels and ate it, helping it down with frequent gulps of water, which by good fortune they had right at hand."

Coquelin Made the Audience Wait.

The architect Binet was a friend of the elder Coquelin. He delighted to speak of a performance of "Cyrano de Bergerac" in which he went to praise the genial actor in his dressing room between acts.

"I admire you above all," he said to the actor, "in the couplets of the 'Cadets of Gascony.'"

At that moment word came to Coquelin that the curtain was rising for the next act.

"Wait, wait!" exclaimed Coquelin. "Leave me here alone with Binet."

"My friend," he said to the architect, "it is with pleasure that I am now going to repeat the passage which has pleased you. For me your approbation is worth more than the plaudits of the whole house."

And while the audience waited he gave anew for Binet alone the "Cadets of Gascony."—Cri de Paris.

A Famous Walking Match.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich was one of the characters made notable in a celebrated walking match which was got up by Dickens during his second visit to America. The match was a stretch of about six miles over the Boston milldam toward Newton Center. In the articles of agreement the signatures were stated to be:

The Boston Bantam	J. R. Osgood
Massachusetts Jemmy	James T. Fields
The Gadshill Gasper	Charles Dickens

At the dinner given by the contestants at the Parker House, in Boston, after the fatigues of the match were over there were present besides the above:

Hyperion	H. W. Longfellow
Hosea Biglow	J. R. Lowell
The Autocrat	O. W. Holmes
The Bad Boy	T. B. Aldric

Remembered the Accent.

"Queen Mary," said the teacher to the class in the history lesson, "loved France so much that she declared 'Calais' would be found written across her heart after she was dead."

Pausing a moment, the teacher looked at a boy steadily.

"Jimmy Smith," she said, "you were not listening."

"Oh, yes, I was," Jimmy replied.

"Well, what did Queen Mary say would be found written across her heart?"

"Kelly," was little Jimmy's triumphant reply.—Exchange.

Economizing.

"My dear, we simply have got to economize."

"Mercy sakes! Haven't I been economizing? Instead of letting Willie have money for car fare I'm sending him in the automobile to his dancing class."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Neighbors Listen When He Takes Down the Receiver—Grocer Who Failed to Deliver Coffee Offers Excuse, Which Is Not Satisfactory.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.]

IN the Bowser family Mrs. Bowser most always does the telephoning, and the central office has come to be her friend, but there are occasions when Mr. Bowser takes a hand in. When these occasions arise it is a treat to hear him. If the windows are up the neighbors begin listening at the first sound of his voice.

Mr. Bowser comes home to dinner and is told that he must drink tea, as the grocer forgot to fill the order for coffee. That's an occasion.

"Forgot the coffee, did he? Well, we'll see about it! I've been wanting to talk to him for some time."

"But be gentle," pleads Mrs. Bowser. "I heard that his wife fell downstairs the other day."

"Oh, I'll be gentle! I thought of coffee all the way home, and now there is none because he forgot! Some folks may stand it, but I'll be hanged if I do!"

"But I can send cook"—

"Hello, there! That you, Saunders?"

"'What is it? What is it?' I'll tell you mighty soon what it is!"

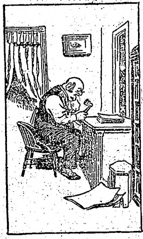
"'You don't catch me?' Well, I'll catch you before I'm done!"

"'Stand back a little?' I'll do nothing of the sort! No man can make me stand back!"

"'Who am I?' I am Bowser. Get that right into your head just as soon as you can."

Not Teaching Spelling.

"'How do I spell it?' None o' your business! If you didn't learn to spell at school I'm not going to play teacher now."



SAYING THINGS TO GROCER.

"'What am I roaring about?' Say, my friend, don't you get too gay with me! Some men have done it and had their necks broken! I'm speaking to you about that coffee you didn't send over. Get that?"

"No one said coffins. I said coffee."

"'What about it?' Where there's a good deal about it. I've traded with you about a million dollars a year for the last ten years, but I'll never buy another cent's worth! Get that right into your ear!"

"You say your wife fell downstairs? What is your wife to me? I never even saw her."

"'Upset,' eh? So am I upset. Don't try to plead that as an excuse. Mrs. Bowser falls downstairs three times a day, but my bills are always paid every Saturday afternoon. Coffee was ordered of you at noon today, and it isn't here yet. That settles it."

"Oh, being sorry and making promises for the future will do no good. Coffee was ordered. No coffee came. You have damaged me to the amount of $10,000. Yes, sir—yes, sir—and you and your old grocery can go to ballyhack!"

And then Mr. Bowser hangs up the trumpet and swells out his chest and tells Mrs. Bowser that when a man sets out to bulldoze him that man invariably gets the worst of it.

Shirts Not Delivered.

Mr. Bowser gets measured for some shirts, and delivery is promised for Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. They are not to come one second later. A point is made of this and thoroughly understood.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Bowser arrives home at 6 o'clock. No shirts.

"But you know you don't need them," says Mrs. Bowser.

It's another occasion. Mr. Bowser rises to it.

"That isn't the idea. It's the principle of the thing I look at. The shirtman has lied to me and I propose to resent it."

"But if the neighbors hear you shouting"—

"Hello! Hello! Is this Gibbs?"

"It is, eh? Well, Gibbs, I want to tell you that you are an infernal liar."

"Who calls you a liar? I do! My name is Bowser."

Not Responsible For Fire.

"'What about?' About those shirts that were to be here at 4 o'clock. Here it is after 6, and they haven't showed up yet!"

"'Had a fire in your shop,' eh? Well, what have I got to do with a fire in you shop? If you are fool enough to have a fire in your shop don't try to hold me responsible!"

"And your delivery boy dropped dead, did he? I'm glad of it! All delivery boys ought to drop dead. That's nothing to do with my shirts, however. When a man lies to me once that settles his case. I cancel the order for those shirts. Do you hear—I cancel it!"

"You will, eh? Well, you sue and be hanged to you!"

"What! What! What!"

"Say, Mrs. Bowser, that infernal pirate says I'm a swindler and a cheat!"

"Yes, dear, but you are roaring," she replies.

"And you take my word for it that I'll make that liar of a Gibbs roar before he is twenty-four hours older. Lie about my shirts and then call me a swindler!"

There are times when Mr. Bowser leaves a pair of shoes at the cobbler's to be repaired. He sets the day and hour for them to be sent home. They arrive ten minutes late.

Scares Delivery Boy.

"Young man, how is this," he thunders at the boy who comes whistling along.

"I had to go way up to Flatbush."

"Oh, you did! And what is it to me that you had to go way up to Flatbush, or way down to Round Bush? Those shoes were to have been here ten minutes ago."

"But it's such a little thing," says Mrs. Bowser as the boy takes to his heels in afright.

"It may be a little thing, but look at the principle of the thing. A cobbler that will lie about a pair of shoes will lie about greater things. He must be made to understand that we know he lies."

"But forgive him this time?"

"Never! Hello! Hello!"

"Yes, some one wants you! You are Schmidt, are you?"

"You fixed a pair of shoes for me—Bowser."

"Yes, I'm Bowser, and I want to say you are an old liar!"

"'What about?' Why those shoes. You sent them ten minutes late."

"'Oh, you fell off a car, did you? Well, why wasn't you tied on? I didn't cause you to fall, and don't try to make out I did!"

Ready to Whip Shoemaker.

"'Didn't think I'd care for the shoes at just the second?' That's got nothing to do with it. I might have had to go around barefooted for all you know. You said they should be delivered at a certain minute, and you lied about it. Yes, Schmidt, you are an infernal old liar!"

"'You can't understand?' I said you were a liar, and never again shall you have a cent's worth of work from me!"

"'What! You don't care!' Say, you old reprobate"—

"What! What!"

"Mrs. Bowser, old Schmidt calls me a jackass! By the piper that piped, I'll go around to his old shebang and knock his head off his shoulders!"

And Mr. Bowser hangs up the trumpet and roars out that he's a man of his word, and he proposes other men shall come to time, and thus makes a very pleasant evening for himself.

Good Listeners.

Senator Swanson of Virginia tells a good story on himself about the first political speech he ever made. He says:

"I jumped up and began, 'Gentlemen, Herodotus tells us'— 'Which ticket's he on?' yelled the man with the red shirt.

"'Herodotus tells us,' I resumed with a gulp, 'of a whole army that was put to flight by the braying of an ass.' The crowd applauded, and I felt fine. Then the man's voice rose above the din, 'Young feller,' he called, 'you needn't be afraid for this crowd. It's bin tested.'"—Buffalo Commercial.

MAKING A LAWYER.

It Took Patrick Henry Six Weeks to Prepare For the Bar.

Patrick Henry when he was a young married man of twenty-three was a complete failure. He had tried clerking, farming and keeping a country store, all with equally negative or disastrous results.

"Best of all," he said cheerfully to himself, "I will become a lawyer."

Six weeks he allowed himself as a matter of formality to prepare for the bar. During this time he read one book, "Coke Upon Littleton," supplemented by an equally strenuous perusal of the "Digest of the Virginia Acts."

His examiners, Wythe, Pendleton, Peyton Randolph and John Randolph, hardly knew whether to be more amazed at his ignorance of law or his profound knowledge of history. After no little deliberation he received his license.

"Mr. Henry," John Randolph exclaimed enthusiastically after his examination of the young neophyte, "if your industry be only half equal to your genius I augur that you will do well and become an ornament and an honor to your profession."—Green Bag.

Queen Bess' Wardrobe.

Royal annals have never recorded a more varied and extensive wardrobe than that which belonged to the "virgin queen." Even at the age of sixty-eight, when she might be supposed to have outlived her youthful vanity, she possessed 99 complete official costumes, 102 French gowns, 100 robes with trains and 67 without, 126 antique dresses, 136 bodices, 125 tunics, not to mention such trifles as 96 mantles, 85 dressing gowns and 27 fans. It is possible that she had an ugly foot, for she possessed only nine pairs of shoes, which, considering her extravagances in other articles of apparel, must have some meaning. At her death 3,000 articles were found duly catalogued in her wardrobe which had adorned her proud person.

Winter and Summer Sun.

The sun is nearer to the earth in winter than it is in summer. It is not distance that determines the amount of heat that we got from the sun, but the length of time the sun is above the horizon and the direction in which his rays strike us. In summer, although much farther from us, the sun is daily above the horizon much longer than when he is nearest, at the winter solstice, and this continued action produces the summer heat. In addition to this is to be reckoned the fact that, in summer the force of the sun's rays is more perpendicular to the earth's surface, while in the winter they are oblique. In the case of the perpendicular ray the heat stays, while in that of the oblique ray it "glances off," so to speak.

"Oh, Had I the Wings of a Dove."

The daily papers reported the other day a visit of the primate to a convict prison. The prison has been built by convict labor. Convict hands have done the carving. A convict played the organ, and it looks as if a convict selected the hymns. One of them, "Oh, Had I the Wings of a Dove," the convicts are said to have sung with great heartiness. It is easy to believe.—London Truth.

Billiousness is due to a disordered condition of the stomach. Chamberlain's Tablets are essentially a stomach medicine, intended especially to act on that organ; to cleanse it, strenghthen it, tone and invigorate it, to regulate the liver and to banish biliousness positively and effectually. For sale by all druggists.

THE NORTHERN LIGHTS

WORKING THE BEACHES FOR MINERAL

SIBERIA'S first gold placers were discovered about the middle of the eighteenth century in the rugged fastnesses of the Ural Mountains, frowning along the borders of Europe and Asia. Primeval forests and pathless tundras revealed but reluctantly their long hidden secrets. Nevertheless, some forty years ago, Russian miners, ever intrepid in their eastward quest of the precious metal, had reached the auriferous drifts in the valley of the mighty Amur that rolls from the heart of China grandly down to the lonely Okhotsk sea.

After the wonderful Klondike excitement of gold deposits throughout Siberia's over-responding latitudes of similar geological formations lent additional strength to the old tradition that the gold-bearing zone extended from Northwestern America to Northwestern Asia and that consequently the further shores of Bering Sea were well worth prospecting.

The first short-lived and barbaric, but, oh! so glorious splendors of Dawson and Nome had begun to pale, when a persistent and seemingly well-authenticated rumor of valuable nuggets having been found along the shores of Northeastern Kamchatka, fanned our smouldering imagination into brightest flames.

There's a race of men that don't fit in; they are always tired of things that be; they want the strange and the new and they don't know how to rest. My dear old "pard," Austin, and I belong to this legion of forelopers, never enlisted and never discharged. The fond hope that we were going to be numbered amongst the original "Forty-Niners" of a new California over yonder, "'crost the bay," lured us from the Yukon even to Siberia—to Vladivostok.

There we were joined by a kindred spirit, a young Russian mining engineer, Ivan Ivanovitch—soon enough he became plain Jack—fresh from an American college and ready for adventure.

Kamchatka, dependency of the maritime province and administrative district of Petropavlovsk, has been a Russian colony for over 200 years. From Cape Lopatka, the large peninsula's southmost point, lofty mountains, overtopped by many active and more extinct volcanoes, stretch northward far into the Arctic waste.

On the northeast coast, there where the mountain chain recedes over thirty miles from the low littoral, the Pankara enters the sea, opposite to the large island of Karaginsk. A gloomily beautiful thundercloud overshadowed the densly wooded shores when we landed at Ola, the little Koryak hamlet near the Pankara's mouth. In the course of a few hours our steamer, "Primorsk," had discharged our earthly possessions and the cargo consigned to the local agent of the Russian Chartered Company, who holds the furring privileges of Northeastern Siberia.

Open-mouthed natives gaped curiously and a thousand hostile-looking dogs snarled viciously. The Natchalnik, however, having minutely scrutinized our papers, received us with open arms, and Father Juvenal, the Pope, offered us the hospitality of his log cabin. We learned many interesting facts about this out-of-the-way neck of the woods that night. The peninsula's mongoloid aborigines, the rapidly decreasing Kamchadales proper—mostly fishermen—dwell around the water courses to the southward.

Their northern neighbors, our friends, the "dog Koryaks," mighty hunters and trappers, live in log cabins, dug-outs or skin tents. They belong largely to the orthodox church—at least nominally—are good natured and hospitable, but their notions of cleanliness are more than questionable. The occasional sight of our toothbrushes once caused a riot of an amazed mob. Both the women and the almost beardless men alike, braid their hair into two plaits, smoke the cheap Moharka tobacco, intermixed with birch bark, and wear nearly identical dresses of pelts or—in summer—gaudy calico.

Further on and up to Kamchatka's border, the strictly nomadic "reindeer Koryaks," addicted to weird shamanism, pitch their yourtes wherever good feeding grounds attract their herds. Beyond their territory we find, in the interior, Tunguse tribes, along the seaboard the unconquered race of the Tchuktches, that stoutly refuse the Yassak to this day.

The Pankara has a length of about 90 miles. The advanced season and a preliminary examination of accessible rock formation, combined with encouraging reports of white and native residents, prompted us to prospect the upper valley without delay. The Natchalnik placed the only three pack horses at our disposal, rather shaggy, but hardy Irkutsk ponies, able to shift for themselves even in winter. As guide and helper we engaged the Koryak, Peter, nicknamed Petrushka-Parsley—from his fondness for this wild plant. Petrushka of course was speedily pared down to Pete, as Ivan has surrendered to Jack long ago.

The village of Ola is happy. A sweet fragrance of fish and blubber permeates the air, for seal and salmon were plentiful.

Pete, very busy, very important, helps us with our preparations for the prospecting expedition. The Natchalnik invites us to a farewell dinner (deer tongue, ptarmigan, smoked and salted fish, much tea and more Vodka) and on the 17th day of August we set out.

On the third night we are encamped in the foothills.

Even here, at the threshold of boreal dreariness nature unfolds an almost pathetic beauty. Immediately before us are seen the snow-diademed mountain monarchs, robed in majestically flowing folds of glacial ermine—far behind the heaving billows of the ocean, aglitter in the evening sun—while all around is Siberia's virgin forest, the taiga, silent, untrodden, mysterious.

Owing to widely divergent conditions Siberia's fauna is not uniformly distributed, but within their chosen haunts animals are abundant. Of big game we have on the Pankara the agile, keen-eyed mountain sheep and the powerful brown bear.

Rocky mountain sheep are here replaced by congeners of slighter build, more slender horns and pure white color. Their bands spend most of the time above timber, remaining even during the severe Kamchatka winter amongst the heights whose irregularities of cliffs and gorges afford opportunity for shelter and exposed food supply. Sometimes when we had nearly stalked them the warning whistle of the watchful marmot would drive them to headlong flight. Their flesh is very palatable; when cold weather set in we killed and froze enough to last all winter.

The brown bears are of immense size, greatly exceeding the grizzlies of the western hemisphere. Their front claws are shorter, thicker and more abruptly curved than in grizzlies. As a rule they give us a wide berth; in close quarters, however, or when wounded, they are veritable fiends from hell. But Pete attacks them, boldly and unhesitatingly, with his formidable spear.

Tradition and training make all natives marksmen of the first order with firearms, bolos and arrows. Even small ermines and arctic squirrels stand no chance of escape at seventy-five yards; and the Koryaks have to shoot them in the head, at that, or their skins would be worthless.

* * * * * * * *

The ground was frostbound nearly to the surface, and bedrock, reached by thawing through the icy gravels, was ten to fifteen feet deep. Keeping three fires agoing, for which Pete rustled the wood, we made good headway. Lack of leverage, however, makes the Russian shovel, which has no bend at its neck, a most unwieldly and exasperating utensil. At the beginning we struck encouraging colors in addition to quartz, iron pyrites, often in the form of mispickel and all the products of its decomposition such as magnetic oxide and hematite. Despite these fair prospects we had worked our way up to the veriest headwaters without tangible results early in November. Near the source the soil was not frozen, due to warm volcanic springs, and sinking to bedrock became impossible. Therefore we crossed the divide leading southward to the Russakoff river to examine its course down to the sea and finally to sled to headquarters along the shore. On the Russakoff we found the same conditions; tepid springs above, a few colors below, paydirt nowhere.

Winter is now upon us in good earnest; in December our thermometer sinks to 57 below. The sheep are safe beyond the snowdrifts; bear, marmot and porcupine have retired for their long sleep; only willow grouse and rock ptarmigan remain with us.

Glorious winter stars, clear, large, unapproachable, glitter on the firmament. At midnight the Pleiades of Job and Homer flame from the zenith and then the Northern Lights, violet, silvery and rose come down and dance with the houseless snow.

Christmas eve finds us near the Russakoff's mouth and on New Year's day we drag our sled into Ola. Just in time; already midwinter sundogs loom ghost-like through the frost-mist in the south; for far to the northward the weather-witch of the Yaga-Baba Pass has been brewing her dread purga, the Siberian snow storm.

The blizzard's fury raged forty-eight hours, burying the roofs of the lowly cabins under mountainous drifts.

Quickly the late orthodox Christmas-tide approaches. In the morning the entire population—and with them we—attended church, Father Juvenal officiating in full canonicals of black and gold. Before the Russian New Year we were up and away once more.

We had secured two famous teams, each of fourteen big wolfish dogs.

We intended to follow the foothills into the interior up to the Alutora river that borders Kamchatka to the north, thence to circle seaward and to use the coast line on our home trip. We reduced our load to the utmost depending on barter for our needs. Pete and Jack took the lead, Austin and I the second sled.

A bitter cold had succeeded the purga and the hard snow trail was in splendid condition.

In full career we swept across the frozen Karuga, raced through the dog bedlam of Kitshiginsk and arrived at night in the Koryak village of Vivniksk, some sixty miles distant, on the shores of Baron Korff Bay. Over each of the dugouts was suspended a frozen dog, impaled under the chin on the sharp end of a pole, a sacrifice to the Fish God, to insure a good salmon run for the next season.

Next day we reached the first Yourtes of the wandering reindeer Koryaks.

Along the seaward mountains beyond we commenced against the monotonous toilsome winter routine of northern prospectors. But in the here prevailing sandstone formations we lost even all traces of the yellow metal. After three laborious months, entirely barren of results as far as gold was concerned, we dipped into the valley of the Alutora, ultimate northern border of Kamchatka, where the country of the Tchuktches begins. We followed this river to its mouth and thence slowly worked our way back south trying lower water courses and beach for minerals. Hope awakened us in the morning; disappointment bedded us at night. Having learned our lesson we now pay the cost. Nevertheless, we are a happy, vagabondish crew, caring little and knowing less, how the world may plod.

The Lure of the Lone Trail seldom pays its soldiers of fortune in cold cash. But there are other glorious compensations. In the glowing health of outdoor life, trail-hardened and the savage strength of brute in every thew, we have felt the throbbing pulse of life primeval and lain close to the loving heart of our mother, the earth.

Thus we kept on, and one bright Sunday morning in April our ice-worn Nartas drew up with a flourish in front of St. Andrew's little church at Ola, just as Father Juvenal was dismissing his fold. We encountered a perfect storm of affectionate, but terrific welcome kisses which we dodged as best we could.

The rest of sledding time we put in prospecting the upper Karuga which yielded a few colors. From its headwaters we scaled in May the Yaga-Baba Pass, 8,200 feet high, and saw in the far distance the Sea of Okhotsk, agleam in the vernal sunshine. But the "yellow stones" of native rumor proved slight sulphurous deposits of an ancient crater. After the spring breakup we sailed southward as far as possible with a Koryak fishing expedition, examining the shore sands, unearthing nothing, however, except a little souvenir amber.

In July, when our old friends, the annual steamer "Primorsk" hove in sight we camped already on the beach at Ola, waiting for deliverance. Caressing the rifle we had given him, Pete, faithful to the end, sat sadly beside us, loath to see us go. But Austin's mouth organ is singing softly. We know the tune and we know its words:

"Thank God! when I'm skinned to a finish,
I'll pike to the Yukon again;
I'll fight, and you bet it's no sham fight;
It's hell, but I've been there before;
And it's better than this, by a damsite—
So me for the Yukon once more!"

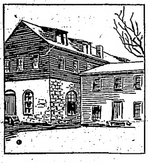
OLD GUN FACTORY

One of the Many Historic Places in Pennsylvania.

Where the Henrys Manufactured Small Arms for the War of 1812 and Later for the Civil War.

Nazareth, Pa.—One of the most historical places in eastern Pennsylvania is the Henry gun factory about three miles northeast of here. It was here that the Henrys manufactured rifles, muskets and pistols for the war of 1812, for the Civil war and for the North American Fur company, of which John Jacob Astor was at one time president.

Ever since the Henrys came to America from England, they have been identified more or less with government service, either as soldier, statesman or manufacturer of arms. The first of the Henrys in this country was Hon. William Henry of Lancaster. There he established a factory for the making of firearms in 1752. His muskets and rifles were in demand during the Revolutionary war, and he could hardly make them fast enough. He was in charge of small arms during the Braddock and Forbes expeditions in the French and Indian wars. He was present at the attack of Fort Duquesne. During the battle he saved the life of the Delaware Indian chief, Killbuck. According to an Indian custom, Henry and the chief exchanged names. It is said that to this very day the Killbuck family retain the name of Henry as the middle name, both male and female. William Henry was also active in the Revolution as deputy quartermaster general and superintendent of arms and military accoutrements. When Gen. "Mad" Anthony Wayne was contemplating the attack on Stony Point, he sent word to William Henry to "hurry up those guns." In 1784 and 1785 Henry was also a congressman.



Made Muskets Here.

His son, William Henry, Jr., came to Nazareth in 1780 and entered into a contract with the state of Pennsylvania and the United States government for the manufacture of muskets. He built a small factory at Nazareth, but the water power was poor and the demand for muskets much greater than the supply. It was to facilitate this work that he built the Henry gun factory at Bolton, about three miles northeast of Nazareth. It is situated in one of the most delightful spots along the Bushkill creek, formerly known by the Indian name, Lehicton. This was in 1812, when the government was pressing the factory with orders for the war then waging. A few years later the works passed into the hands of his sons, William Henry third and John Joseph Henry. They jointly conducted the business till 1822, when the latter became the sole owner.

The fame of the Henry rifle had spread along the whole frontier, and when John Jacob Astor organized the North American Fur company he ordered all his supply of rifles from the Henry factory. The rifles were to be of a certain style and the Henrys had the only factory at that time that could furnish them. Ramsey Crooks, afterwards president of the North American Fur company, was sent there by Astor to order the supply and personally compliment the gun manufacturers upon the satisfaction given by these rifles.

The manufacture of these rifles ceased when the fur trade died out and the North American company went out of existence. During these years, many rifles and pistols were manufactured by the Henrys for the militia of the south and west and figured very prominently in the Civil war.

RABBIT SWALLOWS A SNAKE

Hunter Finds a Colorado Cottontail That Has Taken to Strange Food.

Grass Valley, Colo.—While out hunting, Harry Seymour shot and killed a young cottontail rabbit. When he was about to pick up the dead animal Seymour noticed something protruding from its mouth. Upon investigation he discovered that it was a portion of a small bullsnake. Seymour removed the piece of snake, which was several inches in length, and threw it away. After cutting the rabbit open other portions of the snake were found in its stomach. The snake was at least a foot long. This is the first instance of the kind known.

Pie Breaks Man's Jawbone.

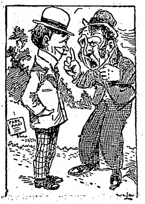
Plattsburg, N. Y.—While eating a piece of home-made apple pie Calvin C. Fisher dislocated his jaw and a doctor was called. Fiser did not blame his wife, the baker. The doctor said a quick movement dislocated the jaw.

SPLENDID CANADIAN CROPS

Wheat, Oats and Barley Universally Good Throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The reports that come to hand from the wheat fields of the western Canadian provinces show remarkably good yields in all parts. Yields are recorded of wheat going 35 and 40 bushels in many places, and oats from 60 to 100 bushels per acre. Barley and flax are splendid. The thousands of Americans throughout the United States who have friends in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta will be pleased to learn of the great success that has followed their efforts. Many of these have not confined themselves to the growing of grain, but have also gone into the cattle industry. On the luxurious grasses that are so abundant there, in almost all districts, make this industry safe and profitable. The land sales reported by the railway companies and by the different land companies show the great increase that will likely take place during the next year in farming operations. What has been said time and time again may now be well repeated, that there is no place on the American continent where the same opportunities are afforded the man looking for a home, for the young man starting out in life, the man with a growing up family, who desires wider scope for his ambition. The Canadian government agents located at different points in the states will be glad to advise the reader of the conditions, and relate to him instances of the great success that has followed farming in Western Canada.

THEN HE GOT WORSE.



The Angry Man—I see the scoundrel in your face.

The Calm Man—That's a personal reflection.

Some Msoquitoes.

"Yes," said the traveler who had just returned from South Africa. "I was one day so annoyed by mosquitoes that I was compelled to take refuge in an old iron safe which lay discarded on the veldt.

"My first emotions of joy at my happy deliverance were barely over when the mosquitoes, scenting me, began to drive their stingers through the safe. Fortunately, I had a hammer in my pocket, and as fast as their stingers came through the iron I clinched them, until at length such a host of them was fastened down in this way that, when they started to fly away, they carried me and that safe miles.

"Then, one by one, they died with the exertion, and I was able to come out with safety. Yes, wonderful things happen in foreign parts."—Ideas.

A FINE NIGHT-CAP

The Best Thing in the World to Go to Bed and Sleep On.

"My wife and I find that 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and a cup of hot milk, or some cream, with it, makes the finest night-cap in the world," says an Alleghany, Pa., man.

"We go to sleep as soon as we strike the bed, and slumber like babies till rising time in the morning.

"It is about 3 years now since we began to use Grape-Nuts food, and we always have it for breakfast and before retiring and sometimes for lunch. I was so sick from what the doctors called acute indigestion and brain fag before I began to use Grape-Nuts that I could neither eat, sleep nor work with any comfort.

"I was afflicted at the same time with the most intense pains, accompanied by a racking headache and backache, every time I tried to eat anything. Notwithstanding an unusual pressure from my professional duties, I was compelled for a time to give up my work altogether.

"Then I put myself on a diet of Grape-Nuts and cream alone, with an occasional cup of Postum as a runner-up, and sometimes a little dry toast. I assure you that in less than a week I felt like a new man; I had gained six pounds in weight, could sleep well and think well.

"The good work went on, and I was soon ready to return to business, and have been hard at it, and enjoying it ever since.

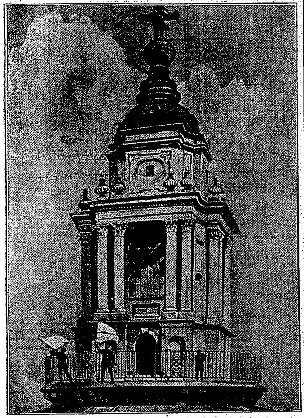
"Command me at any time any one enquires as to the merits of Grape-Nuts. You will find me always ready to testify." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

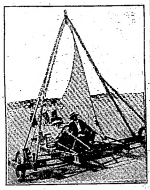
THINGS QUEER AND CURIOUS

Signalling From St. Paul's



During the great strike in England communication was kept up between the various detachments of troops on duty in London chiefly by means of telephone and telegraph; but, realizing the possibility of a breakdown in these services, the military authorities established also a chain of signalers, who conveyed orders from point to point by means of "flag-wagging" and heliographing in the daytime, and by means of lamps at night. The most remarkable of the improvised signal stations was at the top of the dome of St. Paul's, the men working in the Golden gallery. The cathedral, it may be remarked, occupies the highest point in the city, and the dome made, of course, an excellent signaling station.

BLERIOT'S NOVEL AEROPLAGE



M. Bleriot, the inventor of one of the most successful monoplanes, has built a new and strange-looking craft called the aeroplage, which runs on wheels and carries a sail similar to the mainsail of a yacht. He made it solely for his own amusement and that of his wife and five children, who love to scud along the sands at a tremendous pace at Hardelot in northern France, where the famous airman has built himself a chalet. M. Bleriot's eldest son has become quite an adept aeroplagist, and can tack and steer the machine with wonderful skill. In a high wind M. Bleriot has attained sixty miles an hour with it and claims that it is absolutely safe.

TEXAS SALT LAKE MYSTERY

By some peculiar chemical process that is not understood by scientists who have investigated the subject, nature is able to convert flood water into salt deposits upon a gigantic scale in the bed of Shafter lake, a body of water more than 2,000 acres in extent adjoining the little town of Shafter Lake, Texas. This lake is one of the wonders of the southwest. It is far removed from railroad transportation and is within 50 miles of the New Mexico line. For more than a quarter of a century and as far back as there is any historical record the Indians and white people of the territory within 500 miles of what is now called Shafter lake have obtained their salt supply from this storehouse of nature. Wagon trains still make their long journeys to and from the lake, carrying the crystal salt to ranches, mining camps and towns.

It is shown by repeated tests that there is no alkali in the soil of the scope of territory that uses the lake as its natural drainage basin, and this fact is borne out by the purity of the flood water. But within a few hours after the water enters the lake it becomes so impregnated with salt that a white crust forms upon the surface, resembling snow. In the shallow places the pure water is quickly replaced with a solid mass of salt. This manufacturing process goes on constantly, but is specially rapid during the hot months of summer, due doubtless to the effects of evaporation.

The basin which forms the bed of this remarkable salt lake has the appearance of being the crater of an extinct volcano. It is situated 150 feet below the surface of the surrounding country. The lake has no outlet, but the flood water that enters it is never sufficient to cause an overflow.

The method that is used to extract the salt from the bed of the lake is primitive. It consists of boxes to which are attached wire ropes that are operated by horses and pulleys upon the shore. Men with shovels fill these boxes with the salt and the loads are hauled ashore and dumped in piles to await transportation to the different markets. Each box has a capacity of about 500 pounds. In this way it is not unusual for one man to get out from one to three tons of salt daily. The depth of the salt bed ranges from six inches to six feet.

"CLIMBS" DOWN SKYSCRAPER

John Hassler, a steeplejack of Philadelphia, recently astonished the citizens of that town by ascending on the face of an 18-story building, without mechanical assistance of any sort, using only the grip that he obtained by hanging to the interstices of the stonework with the tips of his fingers and digging the tips of his toes into the spaces as he felt his way to the ground.

The building was the Morris building, a new structure at the corner of Broad and Chestnut street, Philadelphia's busiest center. The steeplejack, whose sole object in attempting the daring feat was to show that it could be done, swung himself from the roof by a rope, and, dangling at a giddy height from the sidewalk, felt for a safe spot on the sheer face of the building from which to commence his descent. When he had secured a good hold with the tips of his fingers, he kicked the rope out of the way and began his finger and toe descent.

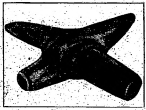
WOMAN'S STRANGE WILL

The will of the late Rebecca Ballinger, who died recently at her home in Moorestown, N. J., has caused some comment. The first paragraph directs the executor to have the body cremated and the ashes strewn upon the plants and flowers around the woman's residence. The will also creates a $5,000 trust fund, the income from which is to be paid to the National Woman's Suffrage association "until woman suffrage shall be fairly and firmly established."

CAT THAT DRINKS BEER

Twice a day the cat belonging to T. A. Kendall of Greeley, Colo., has to have his allowance of beer. The cat is a big fellow and has developed an amazing thirst. His peculiar appetite was discovered by accident when, as a joke, his owner poured out what was left in a bottle. The cat forsook his raw meat and milk and drank all of the beer, keeping up the habit ever since.

COLLISION BETWEEN BULLETS



It is not often that two bullets meet in midair. It undoubtedly has happened, but neither has left enough of itself to tell the tale.

Here, however, is a case of a bullet striking and piercing another bullet. It happened in a recent shooting contest at Grenoble, France, when a Belgian lead bullet was struck by a copper bullet fired from a new model Lebel rifle. The bullets were found sticking in the butt in the position in which the accompanying photograph shows them. The Belgian bullet had struck the target first and the French bullet had followed it.

LIGHTNING'S STRANGE FREAK

Lightning played a queer trick at the home of Mrs. S. E. West, at St. Paul, Minn., the other night. The bolt destroyed the chimney, tore holes in the walls of three rooms and broke plaster from all parts of the house. It then lifted the bedclothes from the bed in which Mrs. West and her young grandchild were lying. The crash which accompanied the bolt awakened Mrs. West and the boy and covered both with soot and plastering. They found the bedclothes against an opposite wall. Neither was in any way injured.

Voices Sealed For 50 Years

Some time ago Alfred Clarke of New York, now a resident of Paris, conceived the idea of preserving the voices of the greatest singers of the present day for the edification of future generations, and the plan is being carried out with the assistance of the phonograph, under the direction of Charles Malherbes, archivist of the Paris opera house museum. Recorded on indestructible rubber disks, the melodious tones of Caruso, Scotti, Plancon, Tamagno, Melba, Schumann-Heink, Calve and others have been sealed up and deposited in the museum to remain unopened for fifty years. The photograph shows the jury passing on the records before they were sealed. The records have been deposited also in the British museum.

PURELY FEMININE

TWO HANDSOME GOWNS

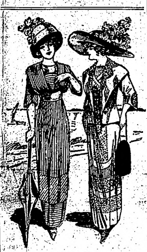
WITH NEW IDEAS FAVORED BY THE SMART SET.

Black and White Grenadine Advised for One—White Linen the Most Suitable Material for the Sister Gown.

The gown at the left is of black and white grenadine. The skirt is composed of two breadths, ornamented at the side with black silk butons. It is finished at the bottom with a deep flounce on which the stripes extend around the skirt. Over this falls another flounce, with stripes running diagonally.

The corsage has wide bretelles of the material, edged with bias bands of the same. The plastron is also of the material, the stripes running crosswise. The yoke and girdle are of green silk, the former ornamented with colored embroidery, the latter finished at the top with an edge of black satin. The elbow sleeves are finished with wide bias bands.

The other costume is of white linen. The skirt is trimmed in front with a wide band of beautiful madeira embroidery, and is finished with a deep flounce, which is cut in scallops at the top and made with tucks and bands of the embroidery.



The corsage, which crosses in fichu fashion, is trimmed with the embroidery. The tucked chemisette is of the material. The wide collar and the sleeves of the pretty jacket are trimmed with heavy raised embroidery. Two large, handsome buttons ornament the front.

Rubber Sandals.

In warm weather rubber sandals are apt to stretch if they are hung up by the strap at the back. To obviate this, keep them in a box on the floor, or hang them on a nail or hook by the strap that fits over the ankle. A good plan is to have a wall bag made and fitted with pockets in which to slip the overshoes after wearing.

FROM OLD KID GLOVE TOPS

Many Pretty and Serviceable Articles May Be Made If One Has Time to Give to It.

Have you ever thought of utilizing the kid tops of your discarded evening gloves? With little trouble they can be made up into many useful things that, as gifts, will delight the hearts of many women.

First of all, dainty bootees for the new baby are lovely when made of the soft kid cut from the top of light colored gloves. One pair of glove tops makes two pairs of bootees; or one top can be used in that way and a dainty bag for buttons fashioned from the other.

Rip the tops where they are joined together. A good pattern can be bought for 15 cents, and a few yards of narrow ribbon completes the gifts at small cost. After cutting the kid, stitch the edges together on the sewing machine and bind the tops with ribbon. Make small eyelet holes an inch from the top and run them through with ribbon, so they can be tied on around the little ankles.

If you are making a bag for buttons or one to hold your sewing implements, cut a circle in the glove top as large as it will allow and pink the edge or bind it with ribbon.

With a ticket punch make small holes one and a half inches from the edge and run through with ribbon twice, so it can be drawn up when both ends are pulled.

Glove tops also make pretty covers for books or engagement calendars. Embroider or paint a monogram on the center of these.

Scented pads for handkerchief and glove cases are also among the useful ways in which odd pieces of kid can be used.

These tops also make convenient means of applying powder to the face, neck and arms in place of chamois.

If the glove top is worn so that it cannot be used in any other way, then keep it to polish your windows and mirrors with after they have been washed in the usual way.

ALL IN GAYEST OF COLORS

Such a Thing as Quiet Hosiery Seems to Be Relegated Altogether to the Past.

Hosiery has assumed paramount importance lately in the general scheme of fashionable woman's getup and most varied assortments of color are on sale. It is mostly selected to match the trimming of a dress, but a costume or suit all of one color will mostly have hose and shoes to match—an arrangement particularly adapted for grays, light browns and biscuit shades.

One sees white shoes and white hose worn with navy blue costumes when faced with white. Black is very little worn, the contrast of ruby red, violet or emerald green being preferred for black gowns. With evening and any other very smart dresses it is the same, only in their case the shoes are of the same color, whereas only white, black, gray or brown are worn out of doors.

Some new hose have appeared in shaded colors; for instance, deep amethyst on the instep shaded to mauve at the knee, blue green shaded to turquoise, or bordeaux red to pink.

TO TAKE PLACE OF FLOWERS

Feathers Bid Fair to Resume Their Old-Time Popularity as Millinery Trimmings.

Flowers are to give place to feathers.

This is the latest decree of the arbiters of fashion.

Close fitting feather toques and outfits of muffs and stoles are to be popular wear when summer hats are discarded.

Peacock feather hats, muffs and stoles are largely shown in the shops and now golden pheasant muffs, stoles and toques are on sale to match.

The muffs are of medium size and adorned with a pheasant head, while the stole is similarly treated.

Cheap fowl feathers have also been dyed to imitate pheasants and other birds, and are made up into cheaper hats.

"Feather outfits are sure to be popular," said a smart milliner, "as they combine the qualities of lightness and warmth."

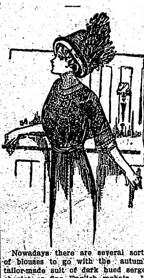
One feather cap was made with two points on either side, suggestive of donkeys' ears.

Feather trimmings which have been dyed and made up are shown in curious little knots with long quilly feathers shooting out from their centers.

A bunch of cock's feathers is wound round with old-fashioned knitting worsted and feathers are manufactured like flat owls with eyes of glass and long tails, the whole ornament being nearly a yard in length.

Monster wings in all colors are also being shown in shops for millinery trimmings.

EXTRA BLOUSE.



Nowadays there are several sorts of blouses to go with the autumn tailor-made suit of dark hued serge, cheviot or fine English mohair. In addition to the simple blouses of permo or linen it is a good plan to have one similar to this model in bronze brown mousseline de soie, boldly embroidered with self-toned silk floss and worn above a guimpe of tucked white net and all over Cluny lace. The chic looking little hat has a narrow rolling brim faced with white satin, edged with sable, and against the bronze brown satin crown is a fancy feather in brown and white.

Not in Circulation There.

An error of a new clerk in the mailing department of an eastern publisher was responsible, the other day, for the mailing of a prospectus to a world-famous statesman, who had been dead for some years. The letter was returned a few days later with the following indorsement: "In Heaven,—— 1911. Gentlemen: As your publications are not permitted to circulate here, I believe it would be useless for me to subscribe for them. Yours respectfully," and here followed the name of the famous statesman.

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

Itched So He Could Not Sleep

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to Cuticura," Dept. 14 K, Boston.

BLACK RIVER FALLS RUINED BY WATERS

RISING WATERS, CAUSED BY INCESSANT RAINS, RESULT IN THE BREAKING OF WEST DYKE OF DELLS DAM.

PEOPLE FLEE TO SAFETY

Wausau, Chippewa Fals, Eau Claire, Prescott, Spring Valley and Other Towns are Damaged by the High tSreams.

La Crosse, Wis. — More than half of the business section of Black River Falls is in ruins, the homes of scores of farmers have been swept away with probably loss of life and the main dam at Hatfield, Wis., momentarily is threatened with destruction which would release a flood that would carry death and destruction before it, as a result of the breaking of the west dyke of the upper Dells dam, following incessant rains which filled the immense reservoirs of the La Crosse Water company to overflowing.

The situation at Black River Falls, the prosperous little city of 2,000 people, is worse by far than was feared when the deluge burst upon the unfortunate city.

Half of the business section has been utterly destroyed, together with a considerable part of the residence district, and it is admitted by the townspeople who have taken refuge on the high lands, unable to make even an effort for the protection of their stores and homes, that the city will be utterly wiped off the map.

Whether or not lives have been lost is not yet certain, as the people have been scattered.

Business Houses Destroyed.

Between 25 and 30 business houses, comprising all the stores on both sides of two streets in Black River Falls, have been destroyed, together with an equal number of residences. The waters are still rising rapidly and the destruction of the stores on the other two business streets is predicted.

The water, flowing with resistless current and in tremendous volume, undermined one big building after another and as it collapsed and crumbled to pieces the debris was largely carried away. The Tremont hotel, a substantial three-story structure, was the first to go, and many others followed.

No precautions could be taken to stop the wrecking of the town, the residents finding it a difficult problem to secure safety or themselves, their families and their more valuable possessions. None of the stocks in the stores were saved and little of the heavier furniture in the houses; the people, although they knew of the overflowing of the Hatfield dam, showing little fear of its effects until the waters burst upon them.

City Is in Darkness.

The city is in darkness the elctric light plant being one of the first agencies to be put out of commission, adding to the excitement and confusion of the hour.

The disaster was caused by the sudden rise of the Black river behind the two dams o the La Crosse Water Power company, following rains which lasted almost a week. The dams withstood the pressure, but in each case the river washed around the side, taking out abig section of the river bank and coming down upon the country below in almost as great volume as though the dam had been swept away.

The $5,000,000 property of the water power company is not believed to be greatly damaged, the breaks on the side relieving the pressure, and the main dam, which is a concrete structure 100 feet thick at the base and 50 feet at the top, will probably stand all the force which may be directed against it.

Besides the damage at Black River Falls, a great tract of surrounding country was overrun. Effort was made to send warning to farmers, but the telephone wires were the first to go down and the fate of many settlers, who knew nothing of the flood until it struck their immediate vicinity, is the cause of apprehension.

Span of Bridge Torn Out.

The flood traveled from Hatfield to Black River Falls in one hour. Farm houses, fences, barns and other debris filled the waters and the strain of this this debris, pressing against the wagon bridge at that city by the rising torrent, tore out one span of this structure. Residents of Black River Falls were warned just after the break occurred and the contents of the business blocks were rushed to higher ground.

DAMAGE TOTAL IS $1,700,000

Efforts to Dynamite Dam, In Order to Revert River Into Its Old Channel, Fail—Supplies Being Rushed in, but More Needed.

Black River Falls, Oct. 9.—Looting, which follows all catastrophes, has begun, and two companies of militia are here guarding the ruins, with ball cartridges in their guns.

Stricken Black River Falls faces further complications in the piles of wreckage and debris, sickness from the backed-up sewerage and water rotting vegetation, and further shifting of the sands on which the city is built. Any one or all three of these dangers now confront the flooded community.

Lack of consideration on the part of hundreds of curious who came by wagon, auto and train to the city resulted in the establishment of armed guards to prevent looting of the deserted homes or salvage which is piled high in the streets and yards.

A relief committee, composed of prominent citizens and merchants, is in charge of the stores which are being dealt out zealously and only to those who are in need and who have families.

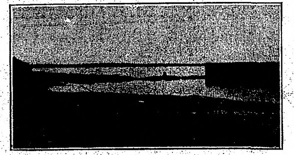
The Black River Falls Advancement association, a permanent organization of business men, held a meeting in the town hall to devise ways and means to cope with the condition.

The back water in the southern part of the city receded far enough for parties to search the ruins. This portion of the city presents the most pitiful sight of the flood. About the site of the wiped out business section, the damage is not so apparent except along the edge of the torrent which tenaciously holds its new channel above the foundations of half a hundred buildings.

Workmen have repaired some of the sewers and water mains so that a part of the town is now being served by these.

A contribution of $100 was wired in by citizens from Ripon, Wis., and $200 was received by Mayor McGillivray from Senator Isaac Stephenson.

HATFIELD DAM AFTER WATER SUBSIDED.



DREARY WASTE IN WAKE OF THE TORRENT.

The above picture, taken after the flood had run out of the lower Hatfield pound, shows the concrete dam at the right, the shore at the left, while the break in the middle was once the core-wall which was supposed to anchor the dam safely to the higher ground.

The steel wagon bridge which connected the island with the mainland was carried down stream to the bend of the river, where it brought up against some tall pine trees in Brights Grove, a former picnic ground, which now has the appearance of a junk pile. Everywhere the ground is covered with the white sand and mud brought down from German Hill.

Great damage was done by a long chain of boom logs which was carried by the water above the frame cottages like a huge net. The string of logs chained end to end, toppled over many buildings, shaved some off at the first story and carried other along with it. It finally wrapped itself among a group of tall pine trees in Brights Grove and stopped. All of this section of the city is wired off, and under constant guard.

On the edge of Main street the postoffice and several other buildings are about ready to collapse before the water, which continues to eat the foundations from beneath them.

A Minneapolis firm sent 600 loaves of bread and that the Washburn-Crosby Milling company had offered to send a carload of flour. One carload of flour, billed to John Dunn, is now on the track here. Mr. Dunn ordered the flour before the flood wiped out his store and left him without funds. It is probable that the city will confiscate the flour and assume the payment for it.

The city's money and other deposits from both the First National and Jackson county banks, amounting to about $50,000, are in the courthouse under guard.

The total damage is estimated officially at $1,700,000.

DUMAS IS GUILTY

BELTRAMI COUNTY JURY RETURNS VERDICT AGAINST CASS LAKE MAYOR.

FOR THE PUPOSKY AFFAIR

Attorneys for Physician to Appeal Case —Heated Argumentation by Counsel Mark Closing Hours of Trial.

Bemidji. — Dr. D. F. Dumas, the mayor of Cass Lake, was found guilty of arson in the third degree by the Beltrami county grand jury. Dr. Dumas was charged specifically with having attempted, with Mike Davis and Martin Behan, to burn the postoffice building at Puposky early in the morning of June 17.

Dr. Dumas returned with his wife to Cass Lake in their automobile after the verdict was read. He took the verdict without any show of emotion and refused to comment on it.

Attorney Freeman P. Lane of Minneapolis, of counsel for the defense, announced when the verdict was read that steps would be taken to have the case appealed to the supreme court. Dr. Dumas was allowed his liberty on his original bond. Sentence was deferred pending the outcome of the appeal.

Probably never before in Bemidji, and possibly not in the state, was there so much dramatic excoriation as marked the closing arguments of both Assistant Attorney General Alexander L. Janes of St. Paul, for the state, and Attorney Lane for Dr. Dumas. This was the first criminal case of unusual importance in which Mr. Janes has made an argument to the jury since he became a member of the attorney general's staff, and the courtroom was visibly impressed with the manner in which he reviewed the evidence and the eloquence which punctuated his remarks.

Attorney Lane, for the defense, charged that the Dumas case had cost Beltrami county $20,000. He characterized the case against Dr. Dumas as a put-up job, and was unsparing in his denouncement of Assistant Fire Marshal Sam Fullerton.

Assistant Attorney Janes, for the state, not only defended Robert A. Smythe, whose maneuvers led up to the arrest of Dr. Dumas, and whom Attorney Lane repeatedly referred to as a "dirty little liar," but he also upheld the state's course in the case and all the men connected with the prosecution.

WEBSTER PROSECUTION HALTS.

Thirty Days' Time Granted for Defense to File Bill of Exceptions.

Oregon, Illinois. — Action by the Ogle county authorities in the prosecution of Harry Elgin Webster, the interne accused of the murder of his third wife, Bessie Kent Webster, has been halted for at least a month. The accused man pleaded "not guilty" when arraigned and his attorneys asked that the indictments be quashed on the grounds of insufficiency of the testimony upon which they were founded.

When this motion was overruled, a petition for a delay of 30 days was presented that the attorneys for the defense might file a bill of exceptions to the court's ruling. This was granted.

Another woman appeared in the group whose names have been brought into the case because of their relations with Webster, when he received a letter, signed only "Rose," bearing a message of cheer and encouragement and swearing undying fidelity and love. Webster declared he did not know who "Rose" was.

The letter was dated and mailed from Chicago, Oct. 7.

Webster was returned to the county jail after his arraignment, to remain until his case comes up for trial in December.

Blast Kills Four In New York.

New York, N. Y.—Trapped in a rock shaft sixty feet underground, four men were killed and six injured in an explosion. The shaft is one of a score or more being sunk at various places in the city in preparation for the new acqueduct. The dead men were laborers who went down to drill holes for dynamite charges. Inaccessibility of the shaft and the darkness delayed rescue work, but finally workmen, lowered in buckets, brought up the dead and wounded.

SUPREME COURT

JUSTICE RESUMES WORK WITH 781 ACTIONS AWAITING DECISION.

MINNESOTA RATE CASE UP

Committee of Governors Will Appear in Behalf of the State—Important Anti-Trust Cases to Be Heard.

Washington, D. C. — When the Supreme Court convenes Monday after its summer vacation it was confronted by an exceptionally heavy docket, consisting of 781 actions, as compared with 696 a year ago. Transportation rates will be the principal questions that the court will have to decide, and although the cases are by no means so important as the Standard Oil and tobacco trust suits, the decisions are eagerly awaited by the railroad interests throughout the country.

Perhaps the most important of these suits is the Minnesota rate case, in which Judge Sanborn of the United States circuit court held that the state had no right to regulate rates within its borders. This decision was based on the theory that interstate commerce might be affected by such action. During the recent conference of governors at Spring Lake, N. J., the attention of the entire country was called to the matter by the speech of Governor Aldrich of Nebraska, who attacked Judge Sanborn's decision and said that the federal courts were trespassing on the rights of the states. A committee headed by Governor Harmon of Ohio was appointed to appear in the supreme court on behalf of the state.

Important Anti-Trust Cases.

Next come several anti-trust cases whose hearing has been held up pending the tobacco and Standard Oil decisions. These actions all involve the interpretation of the Sherman law, and the decisions rendered are expected to mark definitely the bounds of the trust decisions of last spring. The clerk of the court has announced that this litigation has been advanced on the court docket. Among these cases are included the "hard coal case," the "cotton corner case," the "St. Louis bridge case" and the "turpentine case."

The "hard coal case" constitutes an attack by the government on the principal anthracite coal carrying railroads and coal mine owning companies in Pennsylvania. It is alleged that since 1895 these companies and railroads have been parties to a conspiracy and combination to end competition among themselves in the transportation and sale of anthracite coal, and to prevent the sale of an independent output in competition to their own.

In the St. Louis bridge case the government contends that the agreements whereby the Terminal Railroad association of St. Louis acquired the ownership, control and operation of the Eades' bridge and the merchants' bridge across the Mississippi violate the Sherman anti-trust law. The United States circuit court for eastern Missouri dismissed the bill.

Cotton Corner Cases.

Nothing like the cotton corner case has ever before come before the Supreme Court. The government will ask the Supreme Court to overrule the action of the United States circuit court for southern New York in striking out an indictment against James A. Patten, Eugene G. Scales, Frank B. Hayne and William P. Brown. Three counts charged that these men conspired to monopolize the interstate trade and commerce in available cotton by acquiring enough of that commodity on the New York cotton exchange to give the alleged conspirators power to fix arbitrary and excessive prices.

The decision of the interstate commerce commission will claim the attention of the court in the so-called "grain elevator cases." There is a long series of these cases and it is expected the highest tribunal in the country will decide the question as to whether the interstate commerce commission possesses the power to prohibit railroads from paying to operators of elevators compensation for "elevating grain in transit."

The orders of the interstate commerce commission principally effect Mississippi river cities, and the boards of trade of these cities have joined with the railroads terminating there to test the validity of the commission's action. The United States circuit court for western Missouri decided that the commission is without the power it sought to exercise, and the matter comes before the Supreme Court on an appeal from this decision.

ANOTHER R. R. MERGER

M. & ST. L. ROAD TO ABSORB IOWA LINE.

Decision of Directors, If Carried Through, Will Give Mileage of 1,585.

Minneapolis, Minn. — The Iowa Minneapolis, Oct. 6. — The Iowa Central railway will lose its identity and disappear from the railroad map and the financial records, according to a plan adopted by the directors' meeting in New York by which, if acceptable to Iowa Central bondholders, the Minneapolis & St. Louis road will absorb it. The Iowa Central has been controlled by the Minneapolis & St. Louis since 1900. Newman Erb, who recently entered the Minneapolis & St. Louis directorate, perfected the plan.

The Minneapolis & St. Louis road now operates 1,027.02 miles of road in Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota, and the total length of the Iowa Central is 558.43 miles, and the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, when the Iowa Central has ceased to exist will be 1,585.45 miles in length. The lines are not parallel at any place, but one is a continuation of the other.

If the plan goes through it will be the second time that a local railroad has disappeared from the map, as to existent name, the Soo road having made the Wisconsin Central over into the Soo line's Chicago division after it leased that property.

WAR MINISTER CASTRO RESIGNS.

Royalist Uprising in Portugal Is Causing Premier Chagas Much Anxiety.

Lisbon, Portugal. — War Minister Castro has resigned as a consequence of the bitter criticism directed against him for the manner in which he has dealt with the royalist uprising in the north.

Premier Chagas asserts the uprising had been completely suppressed, but royalists insist the monarchists have complete control of the north. There is much speculation as to the whereabouts of Manuel.

That the government is far from possessing the confidence it affects is shown by the determination of Premier Chagas to summon an extra session of parliament to consider special measures for dealing with the situation.

Thirty feet of the wall of the power house was blown away following a report heard for miles. Live wires, carrying from 5,000 to 15,000 volts were blown down and these hampered the work of rescuers.

G. O. P. CALLED

SELECTIONS OF NATIONAL CONVENTION CITY AND CHAIRMAN TOPIC FOR DISCUSSION.

DEMOCRATS MEET SOON

Progressives Urge Presidential Primaries Before Convention to Ascertain Preference as to Nominee.

Washington, D. C. — The issuance of the call for the meeting of the Republican national committee in Washington on Dec. 12 precipitates discussion of the next presidential campaign and, first of all, the selection of the convention city. It is expected that the call for the meeting of the Democratic national committee will be issued soon and that committee also will meet in Washington in December.

The selection of the national campaign chairman and the influence of politics in different sections of the country upon the choice of the convention city will be discussed by the Republicans. Chicago, St. Louis, Buffalo and Philadelphia are in the field to entertain the national convention.

President Taft's popularity and the strength he has among the business men of St. Louis gives that city considerable prestige in the race for capturing the convention. It is believed the Democrats will hold their convention in Chicago, and that they will endeavor to gain favor among the insurgent opponents of President Taft in the states of the Northwest.

Urges Presidential Primaries.

The National Progressive Republican league has issued from its headquarters here an open letter asking the committee to put in the call for the national convention a suggestion to the Republicans of the different states that the state committees call presidential primaries thirty days before the Republican national convention to obtain expressions in each of the states as to the nominee of the convention.

It is believed the chairman of the Republican national committee for the next campaign will be selected at the December meeting. Much will depend upon the wishes of the nominee of the convention, and, while it is generally conceded that President Taft will be nominated, it often is regarded wise to await the result of the convention before organizing for the campaign.

Since the entry of Chairman Hitchcock of the last campaign into the cabinet as postmaster general, the chairmanship has been filled by John F. Hill of Maine. The two names now most frequently mentioned here in connection with chairmanship for the campaign are Secretary to the President Hilles and Collector of Customs Loeb, who was secretary to President Roosevelt. The impression is becoming general here that Hill may be selected.

Salt Lake, Utah. — The movement to make Charles D. Hilles, secretary to President Taft, the chairman of the national Republican committee for the campaign of 1912, formally was launched here at the banquet tendered to President Taft by the Commercial club of Salt Lake City. Senator Reed Smoot, one of the close friends of the president and one of the stalwart Republican leaders of the senate, declared himself in favor of Mr. Hilles and that he was well fitted for the place.

BERLIN II WINS THE RACE

GERICKE LANDS IN WILDERNESS UNINJURED, BUT FAR FROM HAUNTS OF MAN.

Has to Travel Long Before Being Able to Find a Telegraph Station. Escapade Is Similar to Two Others Which Befell Him.

Kansas City, Mo. — In winning the James Gordon Bennett trophy by traveling 408 miles in the international balloons race which started from this city, Lieutenant Hans Gericke, pilot of the Berlin II, was lost to the world for the third time.

After all the other entries in the race had been located, a telegram was sent by the Aero club of Kansas City to Fred C. Ainsworth, adjutant general of the United States army, asking that all life saving stations, signal corps and others in government service in the Great Lakes region be requested to look for the German balloon and give assistance to its occupants when found.

Shortly after this telegram was sent a message was received from Lieutenant Gericke telling of his landing at Ladysmith, Wis. Gericke and his aide, F. O. Dunker, who came from Germany with the pilot, landed in a wilderness uninjured.

Lieutenant Gericke was also considered lost last year in the international race which started from St. Louis. In the German balloon Dusseldorf II, he was in the air 42 hours, traveling 1,100 miles and landing in the wilderness of Canada, from which he and his aide emerged four days later after a thrilling adventure and narrow escapes from starvation.

Gericke's second escapade of this kind occurred last summer when he went up from Berlin in the German elimination race and drifted out over the North sea. He was sighted in England, but was again lost from view and finally landed in France.

The nearest rival of the German balloon in this year's race was the Buckeye, piloted by Lieutenant Frank Lahm of the United States army. It landed near La Crosse, Wis., 370 miles from Kansas City. Lahm and his aide, J. C. Wade, Jr., landed in a swamp, suffering greatly from the cold. After having passed over Chicago and drifted out over Lake Michigan, they met a southward current which changed their course completely. They tried to rise above this, but succeeded only in finding a current which carried them westward. They were both exhausted with their nine-hour vigil and it was decided that they land.

Hunnewell, who went up as aide to Arthur T. Atherholt, pilot of the Pennsylvania, says that when they decided to come down their valve failed to work and they resorted to the rip cord at a height of 3,000 feet. The balloon fell like a rocket and hit the ground with terrific force.

In winning this year's race, Germany has taken the Bennett cup from America, who would have held it permanently if this country's representatives had been victorious. America had won the championship for two successive years and a victory this year would have ended this international series with a clean sweep for American balloonists. The next race will be held in Germany.

SHIPMENT OF ORE

SIX MILLION MORE THAN EXPECTED FROM THREE STATES, BUT BELOW THE MARKS OF 1910 AND 1909.

TOTAL 31,000,000 TONS

Minnesota's Share, 22,500,000, Will be Increased is Corporation-Hill Mine Is Extended to the State's Section 16.

St. Paul.—That ore shipments from Minnesota, Wisconsin and Northern Michigan in 1911 will aggregate approximately 31,000,000 tons, 6,000,000 tons more than expected two months ago, was the opinion expressed by J. P. Funk, clerk of mineral lands in the state auditor's office. Increased shipments in September and prospects for their continuance next month are the basis of the estimate.

This rate, however, will fall behind the records of 1910, when 43,442,397 tons were shipped, and 1909, when 42,386,369 tons were sent out. Last year 60 per cent of the output came from the Minnesota mines, 30,040,937 tons, but it is thought that this year's shipments will not be much in excess of 22,500,000 tons, or 75 per cent as much as last year.

Decided Increase if Section 16 is Opened.

All October and half of November remain, however, and if the United States Steel corporation opens the state's section 16, adjoining the Corporation-Hill mine at Marble, Minn., there will be a decided increase, not only in the shipments from the state's mines, but in the total shipments for the season, according to Mr. Funk.

Royalties from section 16 belong to the state school fund, and it has an immense ore tonnage, computed at 40,000,000 tons by the Iron Age, and will ultimately yield to the fund $10,000,000 The Corporation-Hill mine has been worked right up to section 16, which also is under lease to the corporation, and it has been persistently rumored that operations would be extended to it this fall.

Shipments from the state's own mines in 1911 probably will be proportionate to those from the entire district. Last year the output reached 1,100,000 tons, but only 400,000 tons have been shipped so far, and the aggregate, it is estimated will be about three-fourths of the 1910 shipments.

Great Northern Hauls Nearly Half.

"At the present outlook it would appear that the Great Northern's haulage of ore this year will approximate 10,000,000 tons or almost half of the season's entire output." Mr. Funk said yesterday, "exceeding that of any other road, due to the road's noted contract made with the steel corporation in 1907. Much of this total comes from the western end of the Mesabi range, a comparatively new district, and one of the leading shipping mines in the Steel Corporation-Hill mine near Marble."

SPECIAL HIGH SCHOOL COURSE.

Eighty-eight Are Profiting by Legislature's Liberality.

Liberal appropriations by the last Legislature of state aid for schools offering agricultural and kindred courses has resulted in importing great impetus to the spread of the movement in Minnesota for such special instruction, and this fall 88 high schools in the state, 30 under the Putnam act and 58 under the Benson-Lee law, are giving special courses in agriculture, manual training and domestic science, according to P. C. Tonning, assistant state superintendent of public instruction.

All of the schools are in addition to the extension work undertaken by the state agricultural college, and 68 of them are new this fall. Twenty of these new schools were established under the Putnam act, which for state aid of $2,500 a year, requires the employment of three special instructors, one each in agriculture, manual training and domestic science.

The 58 under the Benson-Lee act, for which the Legislature last winter appropriated $50,000 for the school year 1911-1912, and $75,000 for 1912-1913, are all new, and are required to furnish two special instructors, one in agriculture and the other in either manual training or domestic science. The state aid for these schools amounts to $1,000 each year, the surplus expenditure being distributed out of other funds.

All eighty-eight of the schools will offer special short courses in the three subjects this winter, one of three or four months for the farmers' boys who are unable to attend at any other time, and also one of a week for the farmers themselves. Other short courses not yet determined may also be offered.

STATE CASE FINISHED.

Prosecution Completes Its Evidence in the Dumas Case.

Bemidji. — The state in the case of Doctor D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, charged with arson in the third degree, rested its case after Martin Behan, who was wounded and captured at Puposky on the night of June 16, and retold his story of the alleged plot with Dr. Dumas to rob and burn the Puposky postoffice.

No sooner had the state rested its case, than former Judge Marshall A. Spooner of counsel for the defense, began an effort to have the case taken from the jury and the defendant set at liberty. He entered a motion to discharge the defendant and dismiss the proceedings on two principal grounds, one that the indictment is fatally defective and the other that the testimony offered by the state did not prove or show facts sufficient to constitute a public offense.

Behan testified that he had confessed in the county jail because he had heard that Dr. Dumas had said he was a "yap and ought to go to the pen." On cross-examination, he said that his confession was taken down on a typewriter and that he afterwards signed it.

The hearing during the morning session was delayed when a legal dispute arose after the state had secured from Behan the story of how he had been called to Bemidji from East Grand Forks and had met Mike Davis and then gone with him to Puposky, where, that night, Behan testified Davis unlocked the door of the postoffice and they both entered.

Sherman C. Bailey, former chief of police of Bemidji and now game warden and the man in whom Robert E. Smythe confided the news of Dumas' alleged scheme, was on the stand before Behan testified.

Sheriff Alvin B. Hazen testified of a conversation with Former County Attorney Funkley at the latter's request, at which Attorney Freeman P. Lane of the counsel for the defense, was present and that he had been asked questions as to the sobriety of Behan on the day Dr. Dumas is alleged to have plotted the Puposky affair in a Bemidji saloon with Robert E. Smyth, Behan and Davis.

The sheriff told of his part in the Puposky affair and said that he, with his men, were in hiding in a rear room of the postoffice building; that he was armed with two shotguns and a revolver; that on the night of the alleged attempt at arson he was on guard at a door with a peephole in it and saw Mike Davis enter; that one of the detectives knocked a box off in the dark; that Davis ran out and that he (Hazen) heard shooting outside and ran out to find Behan wounded and that Davis had disappeared.

Hazen Story Substantiated.

Deputy Sheriff Nosman Helmer, who stood with Detective Fielding on the sidewalk at Puposky the night of the battle with Behan and Davis, gave practically the same version of the affair and the events leading up to it as did Sheriff Hazen. He said he had known Davis for some time previous to the battle and had positively identified him at Puposky the afternoon before the shooting. Helmer said positively that the first to shoot was Davis and that he and Fielding immediately returned the shots.

The real surprise was the very brief examination given Detective Fielding, for 30 years a resident of St. Paul. Mr. Fielding said briefly that he came to Bemidji June 5; that he had known Mike Davis alias "Manchester Curly" for ten years, and identified the state's photo of Davis as being the man whom he designated as being a "safe burglar."

ROYALTON BANKERS PLEAD.

Cashier, and President of Institution Answer to Indictments.

Little Falls—H. J. Schwartz and Henry A. Schwartz, pleaded not guilty to indictments returned by the grand jury here and were released on $2,000 bail. The former is cashier and the latter president of the State bank of Royalton, which recently was declared to be insolvent.

H. J. Schwart was arraigned on four counts, two charging him with accepting deposits after the bank was insolvent, and two accusing him of larceny in the first degree. He is charged with embezzling funds belonging to E. E. Crome while acting as his agent, and with the larceny of $12,000 from Joseph Woltman also while acting as agent.

Henry A. Schwartz was indicted on two counts charging him with accepting money when the bank was insolvent. The cases have not been set but probably will not come up until next January owing to other business of the court.

MY LADY OF THE NORTH

The Love Story of A Gray Jacket

by RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "WHEN WILDERNESS WAS KING"

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. Gen. Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important message to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sergt. Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. The two, after a wild ride, get within the lines of the enemy. In the darkness, Wayne is taken for a Federal officer who came to keep an appointment.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

The lady! Heavens! What odd turn of fortune's wheel was this? The lady. I heard Craig's smothered chuckle, but before I had sufficiently regained control over my own feelings to venture upon a suitable reply, the entire party had drawn forward, the leader pressing so close to my side that I felt safer with my face well shaded.

"Where is your escort, major?" he asked, and the gruffness of his tone put me instantly on defense.

"Just behind us," I returned, with affected carelessness, and determined now to play out the game, lady or no lady. I was extremely sorry for her, but the cause outweighed her comfort. "The sergeant and I rode out ahead when we heard you coming. Where is the lady?"

He glanced around at the group huddled behind him.

"Third on the left."

"All right, then. Nothing else, I believe;" for I was eager to get away. "Sergeant, just ride in there and lead out her horse. We will have to be moving, gentlemen, for it is a rough road and a dark night."

"Beastly," assented the other, heartily.

I fairly held my breath as Craig rode forward. If one of them should chace to strike a match to light a pipe, or any false movement of Craig's should excite suspicion! If he should even speak, his soft southern drawl would mean instant betrayal. And how coolly he went at it; with a sharp touch of the spur, causing his jaded horse to exhibit such sudden restlessness as to keep the escort well to one side, while I ranged close up to our unwelcome guest, and laying firm hand upon her horse's bit, let forth to where I waited. It was quickly, nobly done, and I could have hugged the fellow.

"Well, good luck to you, major, and a pleasant ride. Remember me to Brennan. Deuced queer, though, why he failed to show up on such an occasion as this."

"He was unfortunate enough to be sent out in the other direction with dispatches—goodnight, gentlemen."

It was sweet music to me to listen to their hoof-beats dying rapidly away behind us as we turned back down the dark road, the sergeant still riding with his one hand grasping the stranger's rein. I endeavored to scan her figure in the blackness, but found the effort useless, as little more than a shadow was visible. Yet it was impressed upon me that she sat straight and firm in the saddle, so I concluded she must be young.

"Madam," I began, seeking to feel my way with caution into her confidence, "I fear you must be quite wearied by your long ride."

She turned slightly at sound of my voice.

"Not at all, sir; I am merely eager to push on. Besides, my ride has not been a long one, as we merely came from General Sigel's headquarters."

The voice was pleasantly modulated and refined.

"Ah, yes, certainly," I stammered, fearful lest I had made a grave mistake. "But really I had supposed General Sigel was at Coulterville."

"He advanced to Bear creek yesterday," she returned quietly. "So you see we had covered scarcely more than three miles when we met. How much farther is it to where Major Brennan is stationed?"

I fear I was guilty of hesitancy, but it was only for a moment.

"I am unable to tell exactly, for, as it chances, I have never yet been in the camp, but I should judge that two hours' riding will cover the distance."

"Why," in a tone of sudden surprise, "Captain Hale certainly told me it was all of twenty miles!"

"From Bear creek?" I questioned eagerly, for it was my turn to feel startled now. "The map barely makes it ten."

"It is but ten, and scarcely that, by the direct White Briar road; or, at at least, so I heard some of the younger officers say; but it seems the Confederate pickets are posted so close to the White Briar that my friends decided it would be unsafe to proceed that way."

This was news indeed—news so unexpected and startling that I forgot all caution.

"Then what road do they call this?"

She laughed at my evident ignorance, as well as the eagerness of my tone.

"Really, you are a most peculiar guide," she exclaimed gayly. "You almost convince me that you are lost. Fortunately, sir, out of my vast knowledge of this mysterious region, I am able to enlighten you to some extent. We are now riding due southward along the Allentown pike."

Craig leaned forward so as to look across her horse's neck to where I rode on the opposite side.

"May I speak a word, sir?" he asked, cautiously.

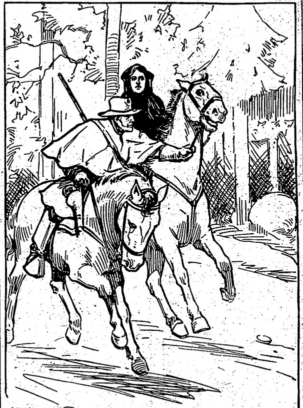
"Certainly, sergeant; do you make anything out of all this?"

"Yes, sir," he answered eagerly. "I know now exactly how we missed it, and where we are. The cut-off to the White Briar I spoke to you about this afternoon cannot be more than a hundred yards below here."

"Ride ahead carefully then, and see if you can locate it. Be cautious; there may be a picket stationed there. We will halt where we are until you return."

He swung forward his carbine where it would be handy for instant service and trotted ahead into the darkness. The woman's horse, being comparatively fresh and restless, danced a little in an effort to follow, but I restrained him with a light hand on the bit, and we sat waiting in silence.

I was eager to be off, to make up by hard riding the tedious delay of this night's work, and constantly listening in dread for some sounds of struggle down the roadway. But all remained silent until I could dimly distinguish the returning hoof-beats of the sergeant's horse; and so anxious was I to economize time that I was already urging our mounts forward when his shadow grew black in front, and he wheeled in at my side.



Laying Firm Hand Upon Her Horse's Bit, Led Forth to Where I Waited.

"No picket, sir."

"Very well, sergeant; when we come to the turn you are to ride a few rods in advance of us, and will set a good pace, for we must make up for all this lost time.

"Very well, sir; here is the turn—to your right."

I could dimly distinguish the opening designated, and as we wheeled into it he at once clapped spurs to his horse and forged ahead. In another moment he had totally disappeared, and as I urged our reluctant mounts to more rapid speed all sound of his progress was instantly lost in the pounding of our own hoofs on the hard road.

CHAPTER IV.

A Woman With a Temper.

I think we must have been fully an hour at it, riding at no mean pace, and with utter disregard of danger. Although I knew little of where we were, and nothing as to the condition of the path we traversed, yet so complete was my confidence in Craig that I felt no hesitancy in blindly following the pace he set. Then a black shape loomed up before us so suddenly that it was only by a quick effort I prevented a collision. Even as I held my horse poised half in air, I perceived it was Craig himself who blocked the way.

"What is it, sergeant?"

"A picket, sir, at the end of the road," he said, quietly. "I kinder reckoned they'd hev some sort o' guard thar, so I crept up on the quiet ter be sure. The feller helped me out a bit by strikin' a match ter see what time 'twas, or I reckon I'd a-walked over him in ther dark."

"Had we better ride him down?" I asked, thinking only how rapidly the night hours were speeding and of the importance of the duty pressing upon us.

"Not with ther woman, sir," he answered in a low, reproachful voice. "Besides we never could git through without a shot, an' if by any dern luck it should turn out to be a cavalry outpost—an' I sorter reckon that's what it is—why, our horses are in no shape fer a hard run. You uns better wait here, sir, an' let me tend ter that soger man quiet like, an' then p'raps we uns kin all slip by without a stirrin' up ther patrol."

"Well," I said, reluctantly, yielding to what I felt was doubtless the wiser course, and mechanically grasping the rein he held out to me, "go ahead. But be careful, and don't waste any time. If we hear the sound of a shot we shall ride forward under spur."

"All right, sir, but there'll be no fuss, fer I know just whar ther feller is."

Time seems criminally long when one is compelled to wait in helpless uncertainty, every nerve on strain.

"Hold yourself ready for a sudden start," I said, warningly to my companion. "If there is any noise of a struggle yonder I shall drive in the spurs."

As I spoke I swung the sergeant's horse around to my side, where I could control him more readily.

There was no reply from the woman, but I noticed she endeavored to draw together the flapping cape of her cloak, as though she felt chilled by the wind and her figure seemed to stiffen in the saddle.

It came at last—not the sharp flash of a musket cleaving the night in twain, but merely the tall figure of the sergeant, stealing silently out of the gloom like a black ghost, and standing at our very horses' heads.

"All clear, sir," he reported in a matter-of-fact tone. "But we shall hev ter move mighty quiet, fer ther main picket post ain't more nor a hundred yards ter the right o' ther crossin'."

He did not remount, but, with reins flung loosely over his arm, led the way slowly forward, and carefully we followed him.

What had become of the sentinel I did not know, respecting Craig's evident desire for silence; but as we drew nearer the White Briar road I sought in vain to pierce the dense gloom and note some sign of a struggle, some darker shadow where a body might be lying. There was nothing visible to tell the story.

The sergeant walked without the least hesitation across the open space, directly into the deep shadows opposite, where the cross-road continued to hold way. Crouching low in the saddle, we followed him as silently as though we were but spirits of the night. Up the road I caught the red gleam of a fire almost spent, and a black figure crossed us, casting an odd shadow against the face of the rock where it was lighted by the flickering red blaze. It was all over in a moment, a mere glimpse, but it formed one of those sudden pictures which paint themselves on the brain and can never after be effaced. I recall yet the long shade cast by the man's gun, the grotesque shape of his flapping army overcoat, the quick change in the silhouette as he wheeled to retrace his beat. But there was no noise, not even the sound of his footsteps, reaching us. Even as I gazed, lying open at full length upon my horse, we had crossed the open, and a perfect tangle of low bushes hid us as completely as if we had entered the yawning mouth of a cavern.

A hundred yards or more of sharply curving road densely lined with shrubbery on either hand, and then Craig swung into saddle and again gave spur to his horse.

"We must ride for it now," he said, tersely. "When thet patrol makes their round, them fellers will be after us hot."

I urged my tired horse to a gallop, pressing upon Craig's heels as closely as I dared; nor did I glance back, for I knew well that a dead picket was lying somewhere by the cross-roads, and that his comrades would be heard from before dawn. We were moving bravely now; for the road under foot grew better as we advanced, and gave back the dull thud of soft earth instead of the rattling clang of the rocks we had been so long accustomed to. Then, suddenly, my horse was jerked almost to a standstill, the hand upon his bit seemingly as hard as my own, and I wheeled in the saddle, pressing my knees tightly to prevent being thrown, only to perceive the woman tugging desperately at the lines.

"What now?" I asked sharply, and in sudden anger I forced her to release her grasp. "We must ride, and ride hard, madam, to be out of this cordon by daylight."

"Ride where?"

She faced me stiffly, and there was a slight sting in her voice, I felt.

"Where?" I repeated; then partially gathering my scattered wits: "Why, to the camp we are seeking, of course."

I was conscious that her eyes were striving anxiously to see my face in the darkness—that her suspicions were now fully aroused; yet her quick retort surprised me.

"You lie!" she said, coldly. "That was a Federal picket he killed."

It was no time for argument, and I knew it. Craig, noting our pause, had ridden back, and reined in beside us without a word.

"You are right," I said, tersely. "In one sense of the word you are a prisoner, for the time being, at least, but not through any wish of mine. We do not make war on women, and your being in this situation is altogether an accident. However, be that as it may, we must, first of all, protect ourselves. I would very gladly leave you with your friends, if possible, but as things have shaped themselves there remains but one alternative—you must ride as I order."

"You—you are not Major Brennan's friend then? You were not sent by Frank to meet me?" The questions burst from her lips so rapidly that I scarcely caught their import.

"I am Captain Phillip Wayne, —th Virginia cavalry, at your service, madam," I said, calmly, "and to the best of my knowledge I have not the pleasure of Major Brennan's acquaintance."

She suddenly lifted the heavy riding whip that was clenched in her right hand, struck me with it full across the face, and then, as I quickly flung up my own arm to ward off a second blow, she sent the lash swirling down upon the flank of her horse. With one bound the maddened animal wrenched the reins from out my hands, nearly dragging me from the saddle, and swerving sharply to the left. There was a shock, a smothered oath, a moment's fierce struggle in the darkness, the sharp ping of the whip as it came down once, twice—then silence, broken only by deep breathing.

"I've got her, captain," chuckled the sergeant, softly, 'b'ut dog-gone if I know what to do with her."

There was small sentiment of mercy in my heart as I drew up toward them, for my cheek burned where the lash had struck as though scorched with fire; but when I saw her leaning helplessly forward on her horse's neck, all bravado gone, her hands pinioned behind her in the iron grasp of the sergeant, my fierce resentment died away within me.

"Let her hands go, Craig," I commanded, briefly.

She lifted her body slightly from its cramped, uncomfortable posture, but her head remained bowed.

"Madam,"—I spoke sternly, for moments were of value now—"listen to what I say. We are Confederate soldiers passing through the Federal lines with dispatches. In order to save ourselves from discovery and capture we were compelled to take you in charge. It was the fortune of war. If now we could honorably leave you here we would most gladly do so, for having you with us adds vastly to our own danger; but these mountains are simply overrun with wandering guerrillas who would show you neither respect nor mercy. We simply dare not, as honorable men, leave you here unprotected, and consequently you must continue to ride in our company. Now answer me plainly, will you proceed quietly, or shall we be compelled to tie you to your horse?"

I knew she was crying; but with an effort she succeeded in steadying her voice sufficient to reply:

"I will go," she said.

"Thank you," and I gravely lifted my hat as I spoke. "You have saved me a most unpleasant duty. You may ride on, sergeant; this lady and I will follow, as before."

She scarcely changed her posture as I spurred forward, riding now so close to her side that I could feel the flap of her saddle rise and fall against my knee. Whatever of evil she may have thought of us, I felt that she was sorry enough now for her hasty action, and I forgot the pain that yet stung me, and longed, without well knowing how, to tell her so.

CHAPTER V.

A Disaster on the Road.

To me she was merely a woman whom it had become my duty to protect, and whatever of chivalrous feeling I may have held toward her was based upon nothing deeper than this knowledge. She had come to us undesired and in darkness, her form enveloped in a cavalry cloak, her face shrouded by the night. As to whether she was young or old I had scarce means of knowing, saving only that the tone of her voice and the graceful manner of her riding made me confident that she had not lost the agility of youth. But beyond this vague impression (it was little more), and a fleeting gleam of the starlight in her eyes as she faced me in anger, I was as totally unaware of how she really looked as though we had never met. Her very name was unknown to me. Who was this Major Brennan? Was he father, brother or husband? and was her name Brennan also? For some reason this last possibility was repugnant to me. Yet I knew not why.

"You ride as though born to the saddle," I said pleasantly; and although I spoke low, we were so close together that my voice carried distinctly to her ears. "We have been sufficiently conceited to suppose that to be an accomplishment peculiar to our Southern women."

"I have been accustomed to ride since childhood," she replied rather shortly, and I was conscious of a restraint in her manner far from pleasing. Yet I ventured upon one more effort at conversation.

"Is Major Brennan an officer on Sheridan's staff?"

"I was not aware"—and I could not mistake the accent of vindictiveness in her voice—"that prisoners were obliged to converse against their will."

"I ask your pardon, I am sure," I returned soberly. "But my question was not altogether an idle one. I have chanced to meet several of General Sheridan's staff, and thought possibly Major Brennan might have been of their number. Seeing that we must associate for a time, I naturally felt it would prove pleasanter for both of us if we might discover some mutual tie."

There was no response.

The road we were following here took a sudden trend downward, and we could tell from the sharper ring of the hoofs, and the spitting of flinty sparks beneath us, that we were among rocks once more. Then our horses suddenly splashed into water, and I held them up long enough to drink. I felt thirst strongly myself, and slipping out of the saddle filled my canteen.

"Would you care for a drink?" I asked, stemming the stream to reach her side, and holding the vessel within easy grasp of her hand.

I actually believe her first impulse was to refuse haughtily this proffered civility from an enemy of her country, but the deep sense of need conquered her to accept the offering. Another hill followed, and then another, and finally we swept swiftly down a long slope densely bordered by trees and with irregular piles of rock uprearing ugly heads on either hand. I caught a swift glimpse of a rough log house on the right, so set back among trees that I half doubted its real existence, when—there was a slip, the crunching of a stone, a long stumble forward that fairly wrenched my hand loose from the woman's rein, and then, hopelessly struggling to regain his feet, my horse went down with a crash, head under, and I was hurled heavily forward upon my face. Craig, startled at the sudden crash behind him, spurred back to learn the full extent of my disaster. By this time I had regained my feet.

"I'm all right, I think, sergeant," I said hastily, "but the sorrel has broken her neck."

He began to swear at our ill luck, but I stopped him with a gesture he knew better than to ignore.

"Enough of that," I commanded, sternly. "Bad fortune is seldom bettered by hard words. First of all, help me to drag this dead body out of sight."

MUNYON PREACHES HOPE PHILOSOPHY

New Association Gaining Many Members.

FAITH'S CURATIVE POWER

NOTED HEALTH EXPERT GIVES REASON FOR BIG SUCCESS IN MEDICINE

Tremendous success has attended the organization of the new Munyon "Hope Cult." Professor Munyon claims that he has secured more converts than he even anticipated, and says that his "Hope Cult" is growing in leaps and bounds. It is said that the total membership of the association throughout the United States is now well over the half million mark.

In a statement for publication Prof. Munyon said:

"I want to talk to every sick, ailing and despondent person in this city. I want to preach my new creed to them. I want to tell them about my new philosophy of health, which is the fruit of a lifetime of study and experience in dealing with sick folk.

"I want to expound the Great Truth that I have learned that there is more curative power in an ounce of Hope than in pounds of Dope. That sick people should not take medicine except as a medium through which the great curative power of Hope may be made effective. Medicines are necessary in the present state of the world's progress because they give a patient physical support and strength and renewed vigor with which to brace up the will power. One knows, from the action of the proper medicines, that he or she is feeling better by this inspired hope and faith, which complete the cure.

"I think that probably a million persons at least in the United States have declared themselves cured by my medicines, and I know that these people have had the best remedies medical science had to offer. I have always contended that if there is any virtue in medicine my followers should have the best, but I verily believe that more than one-half of those who have been lifted to health from the bondage of chronic illness, through taking my medicines, have been really cured by the knowledge that they had the utmost in medical lore at their command, and the Hope this inspired.

"I am not in any sense a practicing physician. I employ at my laboratories in Philadelphia a large staff of expert physicians and chemists, and I have many other physicians in various cities of the United States detailed to give free advice to the sick and afflicted. My headquarters are at Munyon's Laboratories, 53d and Jefferson Sts., Phila., Pa., and I have there a staff of duly registered physicians and consulting experts, and to all who desire it I offer the best of medical advice absolutely free of charge."

Write today, addressing Prof. J. M. Munyon personally and your letter will have a special care.

The Awaking of the Older Nations

Palestine and High Politics—A Deep Discontent Pervades the People and Myriads of Them Have Emigrated to the United States.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Jerusalem.—Of all the old nations, Palestine is the one in which the world is most interested. Over these comparatively few square miles have swept most of the forces that have made history. Here were given to the race those influences which have done most to change the history of the past two thousand years. Ruins of half a dozen civilizations strike the eye of the traveler through the land. Yet, notwithstanding all, the life of the Syrian peasant is not greatly different from what it was in the time of Abraham.

Wonder of Wonders, this old order is now undoubtedly passing away. This is the most interesting of all the sights here for the discerning traveler. It is a revolution wrought by the return to this land of forces which had their inception here. After affecting most of the surface of the globe, they have come back to do their work in the place of their birth.

Palestine is more deeply traveled by the prevailing unrest of the times than any other nation I have yet visited. Pressed upon from many sides by the most modern influences, made sensitive to human rights by centuries of oppression, it is small wonder that the Syrians were most enthusiastic in hailing the new regime, with its promise of "Liberty, Justice, Fraternity, Equality." In those phrases is embodied all that the people have coveted in vain for generations. Now they want these boons, and they want them right away. Failing their immediate realization, they turn their faces toward America.

From One Land of Promise to Another.

One morning I witnessed the weekly exodus of Bethlehemites at the Jerusalem station of the Jaffa railroad. It was a scene for a painter's brush. The young people who were leaving for America were dressed in foreign style; only the young men still wore the fez of Turkish subjects. This they would exchange for hats as soon as they got on board ship. The stern-visaged old men, clad as their fathers had been clad before them for generations, grimly tried to suppress all signs of grief; they must abide the old conditions to the end. The women did not wail aloud, as is the usual oriental way, over the departure of sons and daughters; for these fine-looking, strong-featured women are almost Anglo-Saxon in their appearance, thanks to the strong strain of Crusader blood in their veins. The flight from Bethlehem to America has been unusually large because of these traditional qualities of aggressiveness and independence. The loss to Syria is great; for the Bethlehemites are famous workmen, especially in the carving of mother of pearl.

The magnitude and importance of the migration to America from Syria can hardly be overestimated. More than a quarter of a million are now in the new Land of Promise, to which so many more have their faces turned. The government sent the conscription officers after 150 Christians in Jerusalem; it could find only 20, the others having fled, mostly to America.

The return of emigrants to America and their letters home have a powerful influence in increasing the unrest here. All over the Lebanon, which has an autonomous Christian government, and where property is therefore safe, the returned emigrants have built fine houses—and then, in a surprising number of cases, have left them and gone back to America, usually taking a number of their neighbors along. The town of Zahleh, in the Lebanon, has 30,000 of its people in the United States, where they have created a new village with the same name. More remarkable still in the case of Hammana, which now has 800 of its native born remaining here, while 1,200 are in America.

American Oil "the Light of Asia."

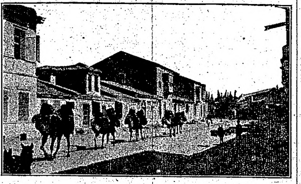
In other ways America is contributing directly to the awakening of this old nation. Probably the most typical single accessory of the life of Palestine is the water jar, carried on the heads of women. As it was in the days when Rebecca went to the well with a clay jar upon her head, so it continues until now. But a change is coming. The water jar, as an institution, is beginning to crack. Standard Oil tins are taking its place. I saw a woman at Jacob's well at Sychar carrying water on her head in one of these square tin cans. The water, by the way, was used in making mortar for the building of the new Greek church over the well. At the fountain of the Virgin, in Nazareth, I have watched the village women fill their jars and carry them off on their heads, just as Mary used to do at the same spring; but some, I noticed, carried the square cans of the Standard Oil company.

These same cans furnish most of the tin that is used in Asia. As I have watched long caravans of camels bearing cases of Standard Oil into the interior I have recalled the hundreds of little tin-smithing shops I have seen all over Asia, wherein the native workmen were beating out these tins and fashioning them into a score of articles for domestic use. In Egypt I once secured a mummified cat; how to carry it without breaking was my problem. I put it up to the first tinsmith I met, and in ten minutes he had transformed part of an American oil can into a well-made coffin for pussy. "The Light of Asia," Standard oil is called out here, because it has displaced olive oil and candle dips as an illuminant.

The School Teacher and Statesmanship.

There is no novelty in the statement, which has been repeated by every observer that has ever been in Turkey, that the greatest part America has in the awakening of this empire—and no other nation has had a greater—is through the American schools, which have leavened the whole lump with American ideals. These are breaking down, to some degree, the religious sectarianism which is the curse of the country. They are even making the new generation of Moslems tolerant. A case in point is that of the Maronites, who were so bitter that they would not even let a foreign traveler pitch his tent in one of their villages. Now the people themselves are forcing their religious leaders to admit or provide schools.

It is in a stiff Maronite district, outside of Beirut, that the only woman physician in Turkey who possesses a license from the government to practice has her headquarters. Dr. Mary Eddy is a wonderful American woman, of tireless energy, masculine initiative and extraordinary skill, whose experiences in itinerating among the Arabs and throughout Syria read like a romance. Now she has opened the first tuberculosis sanitarium in the empire, and she plans a nation-wide anti-tuberculosis campaign. In this she is supported by the American Red Cross at Beirut, established by Consul-General G. Bie Ravendal. Thus it may be seen how the American influence in Turkey is working in humanitarian and inspirational ways.



Camels Laden With American Oil.

Europe's Designs on Palestine.

In contrast with the altruistic labors of America for Turkey and especially for the Holy Land, is the conduct of the great European powers, who are playing a skillful game for the ultimate control of this land, and even making use of religious prejudices to that end. Russia fosters and supports pilgrimages. As one instance of her interest in this direction, it may be said that she maintains in Jerusalem a hospice where 10,000 pilgrims may be entertained at one time. She stands behind the Greek church, and, equally important, the Greek church stands behind her. A wide-spread ecclesiastical support is of more value out here than a warship. France is no longer allied to the church, but just the same she is the protectress of all Roman Catholic interests. Nobody is so blind as to suppose this interest represents religious zeal.

Both these nations, as well as Great Britain also, seem to be hopelessly outdistanced by Germany. The kaiser impartially supports Protestant and Catholic, anl also goes out of his way to throw elaborate, if artificial, buoquets to Islam, all in the interest of Germany's schemes here. The German name has been written large all over Syria. Up in the famous ruins of Baalbeck, which Emperor William visited in 1898, may be seen an incongruous marble and inlaid mother-of-pearl tablet, recording his sentiments of appreciation of the ruin and of Abdul Hamid—both ruins significantly coupled. On the tomb of Saladin the Great, who drove the Crusaders from Palestine, is still preserved a faded wreath of flowers, laid there by the Christian emperor of whose eulogy of Islam the Mohammedans have made so much. A gold wreath, with a pendant which is apparently a posthumous decoration, was presented to the tomb by William. But as the decoration contains the figure of a cross, its presence is counted sacrilege by the more fanatical Moslems, and it is necessary to keep two guards always on duty in the tomb to prevent the forcible removal of the wreath.

The most conspicuous objects in the landscape of the Holy Land, except Mount Hermon, are the two towers, or steeples, erected on the Mount of Olives by the Germans and Russians. These are the first objects that meet the traveler's eye, from whatever direction he comes. They may be seen from far over the Jordan; by them the Holy City's site may be located from Mount Nebo. Local residents point to certain features about these towers which indicate that in time of war they could be readily used for other than religious purposes. Naturally, the object of the present activities of the powers which have ambitions of their own for Syria is to be ready for all eventualities.

An American Communistic Experiment.

The only communistic experiment of which I have knowledge that has not come to an early and inglorious end is what is known as the American colony here in Jerusalem. It has existed for more than a score of years, and outwardly appears to be more prosperous than at any other time in its history. It numbers more than a hundred persons, none of whom, strange to say, is a socialist. They claim to be merely a big family, with no particular theories to work out. They have all things in common, and each does the work for which he or she seems best qualified. While a large percentage of the American colony are Swedes, the majority of the group hold American citizenship. They do an extensive business in pressed flowers and olive wood articles, and their store is admittedly the foremost in the city, showing that even in the Orient the one-price principle can be made to pay. An official at the American consulate said to me, when we were discussing the colony, "I notice that when anybody in the city wants anything done he usually goes to the American colony." Thus the American trait of efficiency has come to be the dominant characteristic of the community.

Like the ill-fated American colony at Jaffa, this one was started on a peculiarly religious basis. A Chicago lawyer and his wife came out here to wait for the return of the Messiah. They held extreme views on many subjects, including the making of money. Hard times eventually drove them to work, and now, while the religious aspect of the colony has fallen very much into the background, it is a notable commercial success. There was no marrying or giving in marriage in the earlier years of the community, and frequent and grave charges were made against it, especially in the matter of free love. The members themselves, and their friends, have always hotly denied these, and called them slanders. At present the members marry, although all eat at the same table and share the same life. They seem uncommonly happy, and are in especially good repute with the natives, to whom they show hospitality. Certainly their life is in lovely contrast to the bitter religious sectarianism here.

Lighthouse Without a Keeper.

"What do you think of a perpetual lighthouse, needing no keeper and yet as regular in its flashes of light as one maintained by the government?" asked Albert D. Van Wyck.

"This natural light never fails, and that means much for navigation. It is a volcano on the island of San Salvador. This volcanic lighthouse is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla. It is a veritable pillar of cloud by day and the flash of its light by night has been valuable to mariners for years: It can be seen far out at sea and a burst of flame has gone upward every seven minutes without the variation of a second for many years.

"A lighthouse fee is collected of all vessels that put in at the harbor nearest the volcano and no skipper objects. He knows that the volcano is more reliable than the lighthouses kept by human beings on other coasts and the novelty of the light is worth the price charged by the government."

The Jews in Palestine.

A wonderful result is following the opening of Palestine to the Jews, by proclamation of the Turkish constitution. The influx now in progress is enormous. Jews are reckoned by tens of thousands in Tiberias, Jaffa, Safed and Haifa, while the Hebrew population at Jerusalem now numbers at least 100,000, or four-fifths of the whole population. Thousands are flocking from Persia and Russia. The Jordan valley, which was the property of the ex-sultan, Abdul Hamid, is being bought up by Jewish syndicates. So is the large and beautiful and fertile plain of Esdraelon. The value of land is already quadrupled. One day the world will wake up and rub its eyes with wonder when it discovers what is going on.

A Scotchman and his wife were visiting in a wild, beautiful part of the country. While driving one day with their host, the two men sitting together in the front seat while the lady sat behind, they crossed a high bridge which spanned a roaring torrent. is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

A Reader Cures His Constipation—Try It Free

Simple Way for Any Family to Retain the Good Health of All Its Members.

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which, strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels has looked the whole field over, has practised the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong cathartics and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowel muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure. Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 98 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City and thousands of others. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a free sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.

The Plummer Pioneer,

By Alex F. Lattimore,
Editor and Proprietor.

Entered as second-class matter December 24 1906, at the post office at Plummer, Minnesota, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

The Plummer Pioneer is published every Saturday at Plummer, Red Lake County, Minnesota. Subscription Rgtes: $1,25 per year in advance, 65 cents for six months, and 35 cents for three months.

Local advertising 5 cents a line for each insertion.

Judging from the tone of public sentiment expressed through the press of the state, the railrdads will hear something drop when the legislature meets again.

The big yield of grain reported from all the threshing rigs, with the correspondingly big prices presage plenty of money in circulation. the coming fall and winter and good business in all lines. In anticipation thereof the merchants are all stocking up big. The rush of business will not commence until sleighing comes, but meanwhile there will be something doing all the time and business men are wearing satisfied smiles.

Railroad Prospects.

In its last weeks issue the Bemidji Sentinel is very enthusiastic over the prospect of a railroad to be built from the Twin Cities to Warroad by way of Bemidji. The Minneapolis and St. Louis Co. seems to be the company that is taking the most active interest in the proposed line. The line, as proposed. will run Northwesterly from Bemidji passing lower Red Lake, thence northerly near the east line of Pennington County. This proposed line would pass through the richest farming lands in the state and there seems to be no doubt but what the line is seriously contemplated and we may possible have railway facilities within a year.

Dr. Dumas Convicted.

Bemidji, Minn, Oct.— After being out an hour and a half the jury last night at 10.50 convicted Dr. D. F. Dumas of arson in the third degree. The penalty is an indeterminate term in state's prison not exceeding seven years

Dr. Dumas still faces a charge of conspiracy which has been lodged against him by the federal goverment and which will be considered by the federal grand jury at a term to be held in Fergus Falls in November. He has given a $10.000 bond for his appearance when wanted in this case, with his father and J. W. Johnson of Cass Lake as sureties.

THE FIRST NUMBER

Congressman Victor L. Berger, The First Socialist in Congress Will Speak Monday.

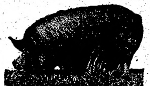
The people of the northwest will have an opportunity next Monday, to hear a speech by one of the most remarkable men now in the public eye. when Victor L. Berger of Milwaukee, will appear at the large auditorium in Thief River Falls as the first number on the list of five attractions comfrising the Lyceum course for the season of 1911—1912 Mr. Berger holds an unique position before the American public. He is the first Socialist member of that great legislative body—the U. S. congress. He is commonly referred to as the "Father of Milwaukee." Social democracy in that city is what it is, whether good or ill chiefly because of Mr. Berger. He is its pioneer, its propagandist, its sponsor. Its history is mainly his biography as a citizen of Milwaukee. He rocked it in its cradle, reared it and now, exults to see his bantling in control of that great city. During his first term as a member of Congress, Mr. Berger achieved renown as being the author of the now famous "Old Age Pension Bill," and it is in that connection that he is best known to the American public. As a lyceum speaker Mr. Berger has few equals, and his topics, "Why Milwaukee Became Socialist," "The Socialistic View of the Trust Question," and "The French Revolution from a Socialist Point of View," are ranked as masterpieces.

This sterling attraction has been secured for Monday evening, October 16, at the Auditorium. Thief River Falls, at a great expense by the local committee. Season tickets for the course of five numbers, now on sale and can be secured by notifiying H. O. Kjomme or Oscar Sponheim. Thief River Falls extend a hearty cordial invitation to the citizens of the Northwest to attend any or all of the course of entertainments.

RAISING TWO LITTERS A YEAR.

When the farmer expects to raise two litters of pigs a year he must handle his sows in such a way that will accomplish this result, writes a South Dakota farmer in the American Agriculturist. "For the first litter I breed so the sows will farrow before the weather gets cold in the fall and then again for spring pigs as soon as possible. Of course this requires the raising of pigs in the fall without much succulent feed. However, this is not such a difficult task if the farmer goes at it right.

"The boar is given a small amount of corn and some oats to keep him in good flesh during the fall. He should not be too fat, but in a thrifty condition. During the summer most of his living is secured from good pasture. and therefore he requires but little care and attention.



There is one class of farm animals that should be given a prominent place upon every farm where alfalfa or other forage crops can be grown, says Professor P. N. Flint of the Kansas Agricultural college. There is no need for me to tell you that this animal is the pig and that, with the exception of the chicken, when properly fed and handled he becomes the most profitable meat producing animal on the farm. A litter of pigs dropped today will be in condition for the market in six months. These very pigs will make a pound of gain from less feed than will the beef steer, and the meat which they furnish you will go further than a like quantity of beef. The Berkshire sow herewith shown was a grand champion last year. The illustration is reproduced from the Country Gentleman.

"The sows get about the same kind of feed, but they require more of it, especially when they suckle a bunch of pigs. In that case they receive corn during the summer, even when on good pasture.

The little pigs are fed skimmilk and corn in an adjoining pen. Small runways are left in the fence just so the pigs can get through and help themselves. They are accustomed to look for feed at this place, and it does not take long until they are great feeders, and after a few months they are weaned.

I do not believe it a good plan to breed gilts under a year old unless they are very large and vigorous, in which case nine or ten months is best When sows are with pigs the board should be taken away, and by the time she is to farrow it will be well worth while to watch her very closely. The sow should be separated from the herd and kept in a pen until the pigs are strong and able to get about. The successful hog raiser remembers that a little care at this time will save pigs, sometimes a whole litter, if not the mother.

Ration For a Bull.

A ration for the bull should be rather rich in protein. One rich in carbohydrates tends to fatten and to impair his procreative powers, says Hoard's Dairyman. Silage is not considered a good feed for the bull. If it is fed it must be given in very limited quantities. Where it is possible a liberal allowance of clover and timothy hay should be given and then enough concentrates, such as a mixture of bran, oats and corn and oilmeal. The corn, oats and bran may be mixed in equal parts by weight and then feed enough of this mixture to keep the animal in good physical condition, besides giving him from one-fourth to one-half pound of oilmeal daily. With timothy hay as roughage the concentrates should contain the higher percentage of protein. A mixture consisting of 100 pounds bran, 200 pounds oats, 100 pounds cornmeal and 100 pounds oilmeal would supplement the timothy very well, using enough of the combination to keep the animal in good physical condition.

Succulent Feed For Lambs.

Recent experiments at the Iowa station show that with corn at ordinary prices, cheaper gains on lambs may be made with dry feed than with roots or silage. When corn and silage are low in price the gains made with silage are a little cheaper than those made with dry feed.

The largest total gains were made by the lambs getting sugar beets, and the finish of this lot was also a little better. The lot getting turnips and cabbages required the largest amount of dry matter for each 100 pounds gain. Silage and dry feed came next.

The least amount of dry matter was required where sugar beets and mangels were fed. The chief objection to mangels and sugar beets is the large amount of hand labor required to raise them.

Grading Up the Dairy Herd.

If you cannot have pure bred dairy cows breed to some pure bred male and secure good grade animals. There is an ever increasing demand for good grade heifers and cows. Keep all of the heifers for your own use or for sale. Buyers will come to your door for them if you have any good ones.

DAIRY WISDOM.

Each cow's udder should be thoroughly cleansed before milking, and the hands of the milker should be absolutely clean and dry.

The milk should be strained through one thickness of clean white flannel and then should be quickly cooled and well aired.

Pouring or dipping the milk several times from one can to another rapidly accomplishes this purpose.

Warm milk should never be poured into cold milk, nor should the night's milk be mixed with the morning's milk.

Milk should never be exposed to foul air in the cow stable or in dirty tanks before it is delivered to the creamery.

Tainted, musty or moldy feeds should never be served in the dairy herd rations.

An accessible supply of pure cold water should always be available for the herd.

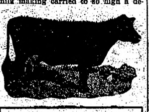
Bloody milk or that from a sick cow should never be mixed with the wholesome milk.

DUAL PURPOSE COWS.

Under Certain Conditions They Are Profitable to Handle.

A great deal has been and is being written about dual purpose and special purpose cows. Each class has a place. The more any part or function of an animal is developed the more delicate the animal becomes, the better care it needs and the better feed it requires, writes W. C. Palmer of the North Dakota Agricultural college in the Breeder's Gazette. The highly developed beef animal or dairy animal is unbalanced from the standpoint of nature, and nature left to herself does not produce them. When man produces them nature leaves it for man to care for, feed and provide the conditions necessary for maintaining this unbalanced creature. When these highly specialized animals are given the requisite feed, shelter and care, they serve man's wants much better than the animal nature made; in fact, one of them will do the work of a dozen or more of nature's kind. And they are profitable animals to raise, providing all their wants can be satisfied. If, however, they cannot be given the proper care, the less highly specialized animal may be more profitable.

That is the place that the dual purpose cow fills. This animal is, from the standpoint of nature, quite well balanced. The fleshing properties are not so extremely developed, nor its milk making carried to so high a degree. Here is a cow that can be a fairly good milker—sometimes a record breaker—and at the same time has good fleshing properties, so that a steer from her would make a fairly good beef animal and sometimes a prize winner.



The modern Red Poll cow is a result of the combination of the old Norfolk and Suffolk strains, and probably all the herds in existence have more or less blood from each. Individual animals still differ considerably in size, form and quality, according as the Norfolk or the Suffolk type predominates, but it is the aim of the most successful breeders to combine the good qualities of both the old strains and produce a cow of medium to large size, blood-red in color, of fine bone, smooth, compact in form—a heavy body on short legs—hardy, docile, fattening easily, producing meat of high quality and giving a good flow or rich milk the year round. The Red Poll cow shown herewith is an excellent specimen of the breed.

The dual purpose animal, while it will respond to the best feed, good stabling and fine care, yet can get along without these better than can the highly specialized animal. Dual purpose cows are less liable to disease, so that they should prove best for the farmer to raise who does not feel that he can give as much time and attention to his stock as the best kind of stock might require. Whether this is profitable or not is another question; the point at issue is what a man is going to do, and this be will likely do to quite an extent regardless of profits.

Economy In Feeding.

When feed is short it is economy to feed night and morning in the mangers. The manger saves feed. It makes a little more manure in the barn, but that in itself is worth while. You are more likely to haul the barn manure on to the fields. A feed night and morning in the manger enables you to give the dairy cows a little extra treatment, and this, with the foraging they do during the day with the stock cattle, will give the dairy cows a chance commensurate with the work you expect them to do.

Feed New Corn Slowly.

Commence feeding the new corn crop by very slow degrees. Even after the stock become accustomed to eating it scours are apt to be the result of too generous feeding. Mix a little old grain of some sort with the new product and thus guard against various digestive disorders which may be caused or aggravated by the loosening effect of the new corn.

"I Suffered Intense Pains in My Left Side."

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

MRS. C. C. GOKEY, Northfield, Vt.

If you have any of the symptoms Mrs. Gokey mentions, it is your duty to protect yourself.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre, of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake County is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this comming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

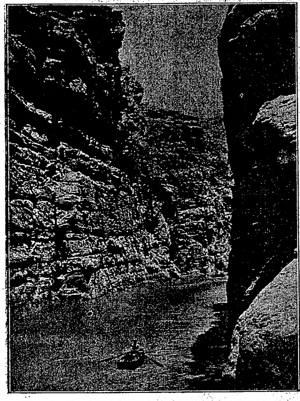
Things Queer and Curious

Gorge of the River Arnon



The gorge of the River Arnon is one of the chief points of interest about the Dead sea, for it can boast the finest natural scenery in Palestine. The vari-colored sandstone sides of the canyon rise perpendicularly to a height of 300 feet in places, and at some points are only about 20 feet apart. Should there be any truth in the assertion that Germany is coveting the Dead sea and its neighborhood, here, surely, her tourists would find a veritable Mecca, to which pilgrimages of pleasure would be made.

MONUMENT TO BLACK HAWK

On the banks of the Rock river in Illinois, at a beautiful spot known as Eagle's Nest, stands a remarkable monument to Black Hawk, the famous Indian warrior. The statue is the work of Lorado Taft, the well-known sculptor, and is the first ever constructed of reinforced concrete. It is 45 feet high.

DEATH FORETOLD IN DREAM

A fatal accident that was foretold in a dream was described at an inquest at Oak Hill, near Birmingham, on the body of a miner named Benjamin Westwood, who was killed at the Fly colliery, says the London Chronicle.

His brother, William, said that on Tuesday night he had a dream, and in it he saw his brother killed. He added: "I did not go to work on Wednesday morning, for my dream made me so ill that I was unable to leave my bed, and have been unable to do any work since.

"In my dream I saw a considerable quantity of coal fall from the roof onto my brother, knock him down and kill him, and from what those who witnessed the accident have told me, my dream was fulfilled. I did not go to my brother's house to warn him, as I was too ill to leave home."

SHEEP DOG'S GREAT FEAT

Left one night on Wagontire mountain, Scotland, with 3,086 sheep by the death of John Sagoday, her master, one female shepherd dog two weeks later delivered to Manuel Saunders, owner of the sheep, 3,085 of the animals, having lost only one during two weeks of privation. The dog's achievement was carried out despite the fact that she was the mother of puppies only a few days old when her master died.

CAPTAIN ROGERS' SLIDE

Bald Mountain or Rogers' Rock on the west shore of Lake George rears its ponderous bulk of granite to an almost perpendicular height of 1,100 feet, being matched by a similar bulk and height on the east, half a mile away. Here Captain Rogers and his small army on snowshoes were defeated by a large army of French and Indians. The small remnant were scattered through the forest at the top of the mountain, and a party of Indians tracked the marks of the snowshoes of the refugees. When Rogers became aware that he was likely to be driven over the precipice, he made his way to the brink, threw his pack and accoutrements down the slide to the lake. He then turned his snowshoes around and, after stealing along the edge of the hill, made his way down the lake, picked up his pack, reversed his snowshoes and sped southward to the Narrows, where he was met by Captain Stark with reinforcements and provisions. The Indians followed Rogers' tracks to the brink, where, seemingly, were two tracks to the precipice. They concluded that two white men had slid down to the ice below. While gazing, they saw a mile away the form of Rogers. But considering him under the special protection of the Great Spirit, they made no further pursuit.

SHE FED ON HARDWARE

The London Lancet reports an extraordinary case of swallowing foreign bodies on the part of a mulatto woman admitted to one of the Missouri state hospitals. From the time she was admitted, suffering with dementia, until she died in the hospital, she never showed the least sign of disease of the digestive system. The attendants often saw her picking up nails and pins, but no one had seen her swallow any. After death, in addition to the foreign bodies in the stomach, there was a needle in the aesophagus and another at the base of the left lung. The foreign bodies in the stomach weighed five pounds, avoirdupois, and consisted of 453 nails, 42 screws, 136 ordinary pins, 115 hairpins, 105 safety pins, 62 carpet tacks, 63 buttons and a miscellaneous collection of bolts, metal nuts, teaspoon handles, thimbles, needles, beads and all sizes and shapes of similar objects, the total number being 1,446.

LIGHTNING CALCULATORS

The clerical staffs of many of the big insurance companies have of late years been considerably reduced by the employment of mechanical calculators.

One of these, the invention of a German, is a compact little affair resembling a music box. It may be made to perform almost instantaneously the most portentous sums in addition, subtraction, multiplication by one or two factors, division, squaring and cubing. It is required, for instance, to multiply 531,975 by 924. The first factor is set by touching little knobs representing 531,975.

To multiply by the other factor you turn a handle four times, push a long slide one place and turn the handle twice, then push the slide another place onward and turn the handle nine times. The long multiplication is now done without the possibility of error so far as the machine is concerned and the dial shows 491,544,900. In the same mechanical way may be done all the other arithmetical processes.

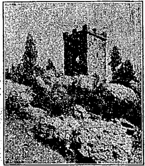
NOVEL WEDDING CEREMONY

To the long list of weddings in automobile, on horseback, in balloons and in other surroundings selected because of love of notoriety, has been added the marriage ceremony by telephone. Out in Iowa a minister yielded to the novel request to declare a man and a woman husband and wife "by wire." The three were separated by a very few miles. There is nothing in the accounts of the affair to show that they might not have met and gone through the ceremony in something like the usual manner. But they earned notoriety.

SNAKES FOND OF HONEY

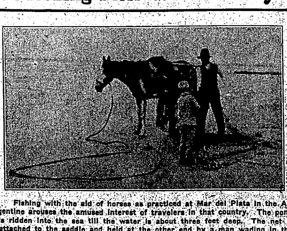
Three men in cutting down a bee tree in Venango county, Pa., discovered in opening it that a big black snake had devoured almost all the honey. The bee hole was forty feet from the ground and the men averred that the snake, attracted by the honey, had climbed the tree, had its feast, and when discovered by the bees they set upon him to drive him away, and literally covered the snake when found.

"GOLDEN GATE" NAMED HERE



Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, has erected several interesting memorials on his estate near San Francisco, and among them is the tower here pictured. It stands on the spot from which General Fremont first saw and named the Golden Gate, the strait that connects the Pacific ocean and the Bay of San Francisco. The tower faces due west and has an unobstructed view of the strait. To the spectator, looking from it, the sun seems to set at the Golden Gate.

Catching Fish With a Pony



Fishing with the aid of horses as practiced at Mar del Plata in the Argentine arouses the amused interest of travelers in that country. The pony is ridden into the sea till the water is about three feet deep. The net is attached to the saddle and held at the other end by a man wading in the surf. After dragging the net some distance, the pony gradually comes to the shore and the fish are brought to land.

The AWAKING of the OLDER NATIONS

"To Knowledge" Cry Which Progressive Party in Turkey Placards Highways—Governments Seek to Enhance Own Prestige by Schools.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Beirut.—If a visitor in this city has sufficient curiosity to inquire the meaning of the Arabic inscriptions which he sees emblazed upon the walls, he will be told that they are a motto of the Progressive Party—"To knowledge" and "Juryman, seek knowledge! Ignorance is shame."

That points straight to the underlying problem of awakened Turkey. However, farcical the present constitutional government may now appear, it must ultimately rest upon the education of the people. Not at the Sublime Porte and in the inner offices of the administration, but in the schools of the Empire, the destiny of Turkey is to be worked out. A constitutional government is simply impossible without popular education.

The prevailing idea of education in old Turkey was the memorizing of the Koran in four tones. The Koran is in Arabic and so even where memorized, utterly unintelligible to most of those who study it. These mosque schools were little else than hot-beds of bigotry and hatred of Christians. They effected no change in the economic conditions, nor did they broaden the intellectual horizon of their students. Traditions concerning the Prophet were of little help to the peasant in raising a living from the ill-treated soil of his land. One of the hopeful signs of the new day is that everybody seems to realize that education must have the right of way.

Religious Schools the Rule.

When the constitutional era was proclaimed there was at once a great flocking of children to existing schools, especially to those kept by foreigners. There has been some reaction in this respect, as the Moslems and Greeks and Armenians have, by means of threats and other pressure, compelled the parents to send children to their own schools however inferior these may be. The latter have been forced to improve their standing perceptibly, even at the cost of taking Christian teachers from the foreign schools. One office of the educational institutions maintained by foreigners in Turkey is to stimulate the native schools to emulation.

While the Young Turk leaders have designed a scheme of non-religious schools, yet practically the religious schools are the prevailing ones. The people here have such varying religious beliefs, and religious ideas hold such a supreme place in their thought, that nobody is satisfied with non-religious schools. The result is that the youth of Turkey is largely being educated in schools which put the church above the state. The empire is divided into great national groupings which are also religious classifications.

Educationally, the result is chaos. The government is trying to find itself in this matter and to adapt itself to the educational conditions of the new order.

Diplomacy and Education.

In the great game for the possession of New Turkey, the school is freely used by foreign governments. France has heartily supported and championed the Jesuit colleges and primary schools for they teach the French language and French history and inculate the French view point. They are visible reminder of French nationality and naturally enhance the prestige of that government which has strongly supported the rights of these schools with diplomatic representatives. These French schools maintained by the Jesuits are enormously successful.

Germany has tried, but with poorer success, to give the German language the right of way in Turkey, but the German tongue does not succeed in corresponding ratio with the other German triumphs here. So, along the Bagdad railway, the Germans are obliged to use the French language. Great Britain has belatedly come to realize the advantages of the educational agency in promoting her prestige. In Constantinople an English High School for Boys has been opened with a fine staff of teachers out from England. The education given is in the English language and along English lines. The teachers avow that they are promoting the British type of education as a matter of imperial policy. On this basis they are supported by the British press and British officials, and they look forward to a grant from the British government, just as an appropriation would be made for the maintenance of a Consulate.

Where America Leads.

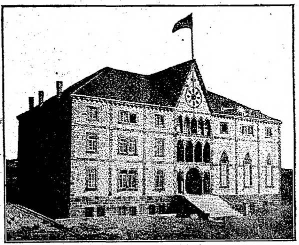
It is only of recent years that the American government seems to have awakened to what may be called the diplomatic significance of the American schools in the Levant. Broadly speaking, America has been kept from being a negligible factor in the Turkish empire by the schools maintained here by the foreign missionary societies of the United States. These schools are admittedly the foremost in the land. As a result, of all the nationalities to be found in Turkey, America is the most popular. Three out of four emigrants seek the shores of America.

The entire cause of the English speaking people has been profoundly benefited by these institutions, established with no thought of statecraft. In all parts of the Levant one may find English speaking graduates of these schools, to whom American history and American ideals have been made familiar. There is doubtless warrant for the statement that the American schools in the Levant have done more to honor the American name and flag in these parts than all the embassies at Constantinople.

Some Remarkable Results.

It is a curious and anomalous situation that the greatest educational institutions in the Ottoman empire should fly the flag of another nation. This is unquestionably the case. It is a source of immense pride to traveling Americans that the Syrian Protestant college at Beirut and Robert college of Constantinople and the American College for Girls in Constantinople, are the educational mountain peaks in Turkey. None of these is, strictly, speaking, missionary, but all are entirely American being supported by American money and conducted by American teachers.

The potency of all this is difficult to make clear to persons who do not understand oriental conditions. The finest buildings, the largest institution, and the most celebrated in all Beirut, is the Syrian Protestant college, which has a magnificent site on the Mediterranean with the purple Lebanon mountains in the distance. This is said to be the finest college campus and prospect in all the world. There are from 700 to 900 students yearly, of many colors and races and the graduates may be found in influential places in all parts of the empire. Especially numerous are they in the British service in the Sudan. The cosmopolitanism of this college and Robert college is shown by the way its students scatter over the entire world.



School for Boys of the Presbyterian Mission.

This great American college was born within the missionary circle and its teachers have been drawn hither by the missionary impulse, yet it receives no aid from any missionary society, but is managed directly by a board of gentlemen in New York. Recently the issue as to religion was raised by the Moslems, who objected to attendance upon chapel services. There was no little discussion, but the end was at no time in doubt because the American public, whatever its religious belief, would not care to support an institution that simply made Islam more potent. The present condition is that the students are obliged to attend chapel daily.

Robert college on the Bosphorus, to which many have assigned a large part of the credit for the new order of things in Turkey, has some 400 students. It laid the corner stone of a new dormitory recently, and instead of a lot of speeches, the occasion was celebrated by a baseball game between tutors and a nine from the crew of the "Scorpion." So high is the reputation of Robert college that cabinet ministers and other leading Turks send their sons to it. It has got out of the acute financial difficulties which beset most of these altruistic educational institutions in the Levant, through the receipt of the Kennedy bequest of nearly two million dollars.

American Women in New Turkey.

Thanks to gifts from the Rockefeller and Sage funds, the American College for Girls in Scrutari is enabled to move to more commodious quarters on a hill overlooking the Bosphorus not far from Robert college. The site is a beautiful one, and the building will be worthy of a great educational institution.

Temporarily, a part of the college is housed in an old palace on the Bosphorus. The head of this institution is Miss Patrick, a noted educator, who has elected to give her life to Turkey. She has a staff of upwards of a dozen American women teachers. The graduates, who from many nations, frequently go into teaching work. The college is an influential center of the new educational movement, and Moslem teachers are on close terms of friendliness and co-operation with the American faculty. It is no small matter that in this cosmopolitan institution Turkish, Greek, Armenian, Bulgarian, Syrian, Koordish and girls of other nationalities are learning American ideals of life. The international college for boys, the American school for girls, at Smyrna, and other notable institutions.

More than twenty-five of these American schools are maintained by missions in different part of the empire. Their teachers are American and an exceptionally large percentage of their pupils become in turn teachers of local schools or engage in religious work. There are many parts of Turkey that are honeycombed with the influence of these mission schools.

The Printing Press Lever.

A study of the forces responsible for the wonderful awakening of Turkey leads investigators into many interesting fields. Here I have run across the significant fact that within four years the Presbyterian Mission press at Beirut has issued at a nominal price a large stock of d'Aubigne's "History of the Reformation." This was done originally to get rid of a surplus of books. The demand for this work, which has in it the seeds of both political and religious revolution, grew amazingly and still continues. Remembering how comparatively small the number of educated readers in Turkey has been, it does not seem an impossible task to touch the majority of them with some such influential book as this.

Similarly the newspapers and books issued from this historic press, despite the censor's vigilance, has been scattering the seeds of new thought widely over the empire. Here more truly than in any other part of the world of which I have knowledge, the printing press has been a lever of Archimides to overturn the old order. The primary output has been the Bible in Arabic. The entire Arabic-speaking world has been supplied with Bibles from this press more than a million and a half copies of the Bible in whole or in part, having been issued up to date. Even the Georgian churches have accepted the translation of the Bible into Arabic which has come from this press. The Russian schools within the Ottoman empire, have taken their book supply from the Mission Press, and the Russian government is at present the largest single customer of the Press.

Modern maps have been a valuable output, for in the skillful war with Islam which Christianity is waging, modern geography, modern history and the physical sciences are powerful weapons against the teaching of the Prophet. The entire Moslem world has no printing outfit to match this one. A better style of Arabic is used than in the Mohammedan books. By the scholarly works that have come out a spirit of higher criticism has been created within the circle of Islam and this is a more insidious foe to the latter than the frontal attacks of Christianity.

Citizens of Old Philadelphia and American Missionary.

The Mission Press makes its own type, and when each letter may have four vowellings and twenty-five different forms making one hundred in all, it is not a small matter to run a printing establishment in Arabic. Nevertheless, the missionaries count it well worth while for this institution is cutting away the foundations of the old order. As Turkey goes to knowledge, it goes to a new life in reality.

MY LADY OF THE NORTH

The Love Story of A Gray Jacket

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. Gen. Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important message to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sergt. Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. The two, after a wild ride, get within the lines of the enemy. In the darkness, Wayne is taken for a Federal officer who came to keep an appointment, and a young lady on horseback is given in his charge. She is a northern girl and attempts to escape but fails.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

On one side of us the bank fell away with such precipitancy that when we once succeeded in dragging our load to the edge, we experienced no difficulty in sending it crashing downward. The body plunged through the thick underbrush at the bottom of the oggre, where I knew it would be completely hidden, even in the glare of daylight, from the spying eyes of any troopers riding hard upon our track. As we rapidly worked on this disagreeable task, I thought and planned; two horses and three riders—one of these a woman in need of protection—a dispatch to be delivered by daylight, at all hazards. It was indeed a difficult proposition, and I saw only a single possible solution. One of our number must press on; two of us must remain behind. Which one? what two? If I rode with the dispatch (and how eagerly I longed to do so!) and succeeded in bringing Lee's message safe to Longstreet, it meant much to me—promotion, distinction, honor. On the other hand, if I remained behind, and Craig successfully carried out the duty which had been especially intrusted to me, I should be fortunate indeed to escape with a reprimand instead of more serious consequences. If failure resulted, it meant certain and deserved disgrace. Yet I could absolutely trust him with the dispatch; he was a soldier, and would faithfully perform a soldier's duty. More, he would carry the message with even greater certainty than I, for he knew the roads much better, and—I write the words hesitatingly—I could not trust him there alone with the woman.

I glanced aside at him as I thus turned the perplexing situation over in my mind—a tall, gaunt mountaineer, whose sole discipline of mind and body had been the army; hardened by service until every muscle in his lean, sinewy frame was like steel, a cavalryman who would follow his leader into the very jaws of hell.

"Sergeant," I asked, flinging aside the improvised brush, "how far do you suppose we are from Longstreet's picket line?"

"Ten miles at the very best, sir," he answered promptly, "an' I reckon with another Yankee outpost atween."

"With fair luck and good riding it might be made by daylight?"

"I reckon as how it might, captain, if we only hed sum fresh hosses," he said glumly; "but it's bin mighty hard on my nag; I've looked fer him to roll over like yer sorrel did fer the las' two mile."

"Well, Craig, you shall have both horses. Ride the woman's. It is the fresher of the two; but you are to get through if you kill them both and then walk."

"I remain with the woman; there is no other way. Wait here a moment while I speak with her."

I left him standing there, and moved back to where she waited. As I came up she faced me, and for the first time (for the night had lightened somewhat) I could see her eyes and discern some faint outline of her face where the night wind flung back the upturned cape. It was a winsome sight to soldier vision, but with a certain semblance of pride and reserve about it that caused a hesitancy in my speech strange to me.

"Madam,"—I rested my hand upon her horse's mane and looked at her with a glance as proud as her own—"it might be as well for you to draw the cape closer about your face at present. There are rough men in all armies who would consider your beauty a lawless prize. The life we lead is not conducive to gentleness; virtue is not born in camps, and it would be better not to provoke a danger which may be so easily avoided."

"You claimed, I believe, to be an officer and a gentleman," she said coldly.

I smiled, even as I felt the full chill of her words, and my purpose stiffened within me.

"Even as I yet claim, and trust to be able to prove to your satisfaction,"—my eyes looked unfalteringly into hers—"but unfortunately, I have one with me tonight who is neither. I would that he were for my own sake. However, madam, let that pass. The fact is here, and we have no time to argue or quarrel. I have already told you that we ride with dispatches for Longstreet. These must go forward at all hazards, for thousands of human lives depend upon them; yet I dare not leave you here alone and unprotected to the mercies of the wolves who haunt these hills."

"You are exceedingly kind."

The tone in which she spoke was most sarcastic.

"I thank you for your approbation," and I bowed again; "but I venture to tell you this merely because I have already fully determined to dispatch the sergeant forward with the message, and remain behind myself to render you every protection possible."

"Very well, sir; I simply yield to what I am powerless to avoid, and will obey your orders however distasteful they may be. What is your first command?"

"That you dismount. The sergeant must ride your horse, as he is the more fit of the two."

Greatly to my surprise and relief she placed her gauntleted hand in mine, and, without so much as a word of protest, permitted me to swing her lightly from the saddle to the ground.

"Craig," I called, "come here.

"You know your work," I said to him briefly. "And now the sooner you are at it the better. Ride this horse and lead your own. As soon as you deliver Lee's message at headquarters, hunt up the cavalry brigade commander and report to him my position. Get a detail, insist upon one, and be back here by to-morrow without fail. That is all."

He saluted, wheeled about, swung lightly into saddle and rode off on a rapid trot, grasping, as he passed down the hill, the rein of his own mount, and leading it, lagging behind him, until the night swallowed the figures, and even the sound of the hoof-beats could be no longer heard. We were alone.

CHAPTER VI.

A Struggle in the Dark.

I have seldom been more deeply embarrassed than at that moment. I knew not what to say or now best to approach this young woman, left so strangely to my protection. The very fact, which I now realized, that she was both young and fair, added some indefinite burden and complicated the delicate situation. I saw no safety for us but in careful hiding until Craig could return, a squad of hard-riding troopers at his back. To permit the girl to venture forward alone through the desolate country we were in, overrun as I knew it to be by irregular bands whose sole purpose was plunder, and whose treatment of women had made my blood run cold as I listened to its recital, was not to be so much as thought of.

There was no help for it, and but one way out, disagreeable as that might prove to my lady. She stood there before me, motionless and silent as a statue, exactly where she had alighted when the sergeant took her horse, and it seemed to me I could plainly read righteous indignation in the indistinct outline of her figure and the haughty pose of her head. To her at that moment I was evidently a most disagreeable and even hated companion, a "Rebel," the being of all others she had been taught to despise, the enemy of all she held sacred. "Could any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

"The time has come when it becomes my duty to look after your comfort and safety," I said, striking to disguise all self-consciousness. "Every moment we delay now merely increases the danger of our remaining here."

"I imagine I might very easily dispense with any further care on your part."

Her reply nettled me, and I answered with an earnestness which she could neither ignore nor check: "Possibly you may think so, but if you do it is merely because of your utter ignorance of the disorganized conditions which prevail in these mountains. Your pride is almost ridiculous under all the circumstances. You have no just cause to feel that I am forcing myself unnecessarily upon you. Our being compelled to take you in charge has proven as disastrous to us as to you. Personally I can say that nothing will relieve me more than to be able to place you uninjured into the care of your own people. I would willingly assume great risks to that end. But while you remain here and in my care, I shall perform my full duty toward you as though you were my own sister. Now please listen to me, and I assure you I shall speak nothing for the mere purpose of alarming you, but simply that you may better comprehend the facts which must influence our present relationship. I have sent forward Sergeant Craig with the message especially intrusted to me for delivery, and thus, if it fails to reach its destination, I have laid myself open to the charge of a grave military crime. In doing this I have not only periled my own future, but the lives of my comrades and the faith of my commander. Yet I have deliberately chosen to do so because I feel the impossibility of leaving you here unprotected, and because I was unwilling to trust you alone with my companion. I dare not permit you to traverse these roads alone. The mountains all about us, deserted as they now appear, are filled with wandering bands of desperate and hunted men whose tenderest mercy is death. Any rock may be the hiding place of an outlaw, any dark ravine the rendezvous of as wild a gang as ever murdered for plunder."

"But the Sergeant said there was a Federal picket post at the crossing of the White Briar."

Her voice trembled as she spoke.

"He merely supposed there would be; but even if it were true, we have no positive means of knowing that the men stationed there would be of the regular service. Doubtless those thieving, murdering bands—such as that headed by Red Lowrie, of whom you may have heard—are sufficiently organized to keep patrols posted, and may, indeed, be utilized at times by both armies for that purpose. Were you to go to them you might be simply walking into a den of wolves."

"But could you not go with me?"

I smiled at the naive innocence of her query.

"I wish you to feel that I have never thought so much about my own danger as about yours," I returned quietly. "But would it be a pleasure even to you to behold me swinging from the limb of a tree, hung as a spy without trial, merely because I ventured to walk with you into a Federal camp?"

I could see her eyes now resting full upon me, and much of the hardness and doubt seemed to have gone out of them as she scanned my uncovered features in the dim light. I scarcely think I was ever considered a handsome man even by my friends, but I was young then, frank of face, with that about me which easily inspired confidence, and it did me good to note how her eyes softened, and to mark the perceptible tremor in her voice as she cried impulsively:

"Oh, no! Not that!"

"Your words yield me new heart," I replied fervently, determined, now that ice was partially broken, to permit no excuse for its again forming, "for if you but once fully realize our situation you will certainly feel, that I am merely endeavoring to perform my plain duty."

"I will, of course, bow to the inevitable, sir," she said, "and shall endeavor to adapt myself to the requirements of my unfortunate situation. May I venture to inquire what you now propose to do?"

To the right of where we stood the ground sloped rapidly downward until the dense darkness at the foot of the steep defile shrouded everything from view. The descent appeared rocky and impracticable, and I could distinguish the sound of rapid water far below. On the opposite side stood a dense wood, the outer fringe of trees overhanging the road, and through the waving leaves the moonlight checkered the ground with silver, while the dense mass beyond seemed to flow back up the steep side of the mountain, thick with underbrush. Just below us, and possibly fifty feet from the highway, I could perceive a small one-story log cabin, as silent, gloomy, and deserted to all outward appearance as were the somber woods of which it formed a part.

"There seems small choice," I said, speaking as cheerfully as possible. "But I propose to investigate the log hut yonder, and learn if it may not afford some degree of shelter. If you will rest here, in the shadow of these trees, I will soon discover whether it has inmates or not."

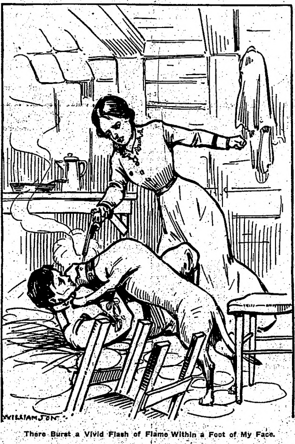
She followed me in silence across the road to the spot designated, but as I turned to leave her seated upon the grass, and well protected from prying eyes, she hurried quickly after me, and in her agitation so far forgot herself as to touch my sleeve with her hand.

"Oh, please do not leave me here alone. I am not naturally timid, yet everything is so gloomy I cannot stand it. Let me go with you, if you must go!"

"Most assuredly you shall if you desire," I returned heartily.

There appeared before us a dim, little-used path leading in among the trees, and following its erratic curves we were soon before the cabin, which grew even more uninviting as we drew near. As I paused a moment before the closed door, in order that I might listen for any possible sound within, I could hear her quick breathing, as though the terror of the moment had driven all else from her mind. The wooden latch yielded readily enough to my pressure, and pushing wide open the door, which creaked slightly upon its rusty hinges, I stepped across the puncheon threshold onto the hard earthen floor. There was no window visible, and the slight reflection of moonlight which crept in through the doorway scarcely revealed the nature of that dark interior. I could dimly perceive what I believed to be a table directly in front of me, while certain other indistinct and ill defined shadows might be chairs pushed back against the wall. At least this room was without occupants; yet it was with every sense alert that I entered, pressing slowly past the table toward where I felt the fireplace would naturally be, knowing that my companion was yet with me, her hand clutching my arm.

"Oh!" she cried sharply in terror, "what was that?"



There Burst a Vivid Flash of Flame Within a Foot of My Face.

It was something certainly—a deadened, muffled, shuffling sound directly in our front, followed by a strange noise of scraping, as if with a dull knife on wood.

"Wait here," I said sternly. "Probably it is nothing more dangerous than a rat."

I felt my way carefully around the table, a revolver ready in my hand. There was nothing to be found there—nothing, indeed, in the room; for from my new position I could look backward and distinguish in the moonlight the details of that simple, squalid interior. I ran my hands along the rough logs of the further wall. Ay! here was a break, doubtless a door; and groping along the crack I found the latch.

There was no longer any noise audible, and I drew the door inward, never dreaming of danger. Suddenly, with a fierce, wild spring out of the dark, a huge body hurled itself directly at my throat, striking with such headlong impetus that I went backward as if shot, crashing against the table, then to the floor, dropping my weapon as I fell. There was no noise, no sound, while for an instant, with strength of sheer desperation, I held back the snapping jaws that breathed hot fire into my very face. With a bound backward of its great body the beast jerked free from my grip, and the next instant had sunk its dripping fangs, deep and hard, into the flesh of my shoulder. As the intense pain shot through me, my right hand, driven with all the force I could muster, caught the monster once, twice, full in the throat, but tighter and tighter those clinched jaws locked, until it seemed as if every bone between them must be ground to powder. Even as I grasped the lower jaw, seeking vainly to wrench it loose, I heard the girl scream in sudden afright.

"Quick!" I gasped desperately. "Get my revolver there on the floor, and use it—but for God's sake keep down; don't let the brute see you."

She must have heard, but there was no response, although her crying ceased. Yet my own struggle to rid myself of that crushing weight and those iron jaws drowned all other sounds, drove all other thoughts from me. Every muscle of my body began to weaken from the strain, my eyes blurred, faintness swept over me, I felt my brain reeling, when there burst a vivid flash of flame within a foot of my face, singeing my forehead; then followed a deafening report, and the huge brute sprang backward with a snarl of pain, his teeth clicking together like cogs of steel. Then he stiffened and fell prone across me, a dead, inert weight, pinning me breathless to the floor.

For the moment I could do no more than lie there helpless, gasping for breath, scarce conscious even of my deliverance. Then, as sufficient strength returned for action, I rolled the body of the dead brute off me, and lifting myself by aid of the wall against which my head rested, looked about. Two broken chairs overturned upon the floor, and the shapeless, huddled body of my late assailant, alone spoke of the violence of that deadly struggle; but the cabin was yet full of smoke, and I could perceive the figure of the girl leaning against the frame of the open door, the revolver still grasped in her hand. Her posture was that of a frightened deer, as her terror-filled eyes sought the dark interior.

"It is safely over," I said weakly, for my breath yet came to me in gasps. "The brute is dead."

I could scarcely mark her coming across the narrow streak of moonlight, moving toward me as a frightened bird might, startled at everything, and passing as far from the lifeless mass on the floor as the small space would allow. As she bent anxiously over me her face was so in shadow that I could distinguish nothing of its features.

"What is it? Are you indeed severely hurt?"

"Not seriously, I think, yet I have lost some blood, and am in great pain. There is brandy in the inner pocket of my jacket, but I am unable to move my arm in order to reach it. Would you endeavor to draw the flask out?"

I felt her bend over me, her soft breath coming almost in sobs upon my face, as with trembling fingers she undid the buttons of my trooper's jacket and extracted the small flat flask I had been thoughtful enough to store away there.

The fiery liquid seemed to put new blood into my veins, and with it there returned all my old-time audacity, with that intense hopefulness in which I had been trained by years of war and self-reliance.

"I trust you realize," I said, "that I am neither thoughtless nor ungrateful. Years of war service make one careless of life, but I know it was your shot that saved me. You are a brave girl."

Her overtaxed nerves gave way at my words, and I knew she was crying softly. The sobbing was in her voice as she strove to speak.

"Oh, no, I am not; you do not guess how great a coward I am. I scarcely knew what I was doing when I fired. That horrid thing—what was it?"

"A huge mastiff, I imagine; one of the largest of his breed. But whatever it may have been, the beast is dead, and we have nothing more to fear from him."

"Yet I tremble so," she confessed, almost hysterically. "Every shadow frightens me."

I realized that no amount of conversation would quiet her nerves so effectively as some positive action; besides, I felt the hot blood constantly trickling down my arm, and realized that something needed to be done at once to stanch its flow, before weakness should render me equally useless.

"Do you think you could build a fire on the hearth yonder?" I asked. "I am afraid I am hardly capable of helping you as yet; but we must have light in this gloomy old hole, or it is bound to craze us both. Take those broken chairs if you find nothing better."

She instantly did as I bade her, moving here and there about the room until she gathered together the materials necessary, but keeping carefully away from where the dead dog lay, until in a brief space of time the welcome flame leaped up in the wide black chimney, and cast its red glare all over the little room. The activity did her good, the light flooding the gloomy apartment yielded renewed courage, and there was a cheerier sound in her voice as she came back to me.

Relieves Backache Instantly

Sloan's Liniment is a great remedy for backache. It penetrates and relieves the pain instantly—no rubbing necessary—just lay it on lightly.

Here's Proof.

"I had my back hurt in the Boer War and in San Francisco two years ago I was hit by a street car in the same place. I tried all kinds of dope without success. Two weeks ago I saw your liniment in a drug store and got a bottle to try. The first application caused instant relief, and now except for a little stiffness, I am almost well."

A Fly Paradise.

First Housefly—Howdy, old pal? What sort of a season have you had?

Second Fly—Much the same as usual. Didn't take any outing this year. I'm at my old quarters in the livery stable.

First Fly—Pretty dull, I should say. I've been in clover. That's right. If there ever was a fly Eden, I found it. Listen. No screens, baldheaded owner, baldheaded baby, flypaper easy to eat and three fat women who couldn't swat an elephant. I'm going back there next summer.

The Angler's Bait.

A well-known angler at Peterborough having obtained a wasps' nest containing a large number of grubs, placed the nest in the kitchen oven to kill the grubs so that he could use them for bait.

The next morning he went to get the grubs, but on opening the oven door a swarm of wasps flew out. The oven was not hot enough to kill the grubs, but was sufficiently warm to hatch them.—London Daily Mail.

FROM TEXAS

Some Coffee Facts From the Lone Star State.

From a beautiful farm down in Texas, where gushing springs unite to form babbling brooks that wind their sparkling way through flowery meads, comes a note of gratitude for delivery from the coffee habit.

"When my baby boy came to me five years ago, I began to drink Postum, having a feeling that it would be better for him and me than the old kind of drug-laden coffee. I was not disappointed in it, for it enabled me, a small, delicate woman, to nurse a bouncing, healthy baby 14 months.

"I have since continued the use of Postum for I have grown fond of it, and have discovered to my joy that it has entirely relieved me of a bilious habit which used to prostrate me two or three times a year, causing much discomfort to my family and suffering to myself.

"My brother-in-law was cured of chronic constipation by leaving off coffee and using Postum. He has become even more fond of it than he was of the old coffee.

"In fact, the entire family, from the latest arrival (a 2-year-old who always calls for his 'potie' first thing in the morning), up to the head of the house, think there is no drink so good or so wholesome as Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DRY FARM MEET

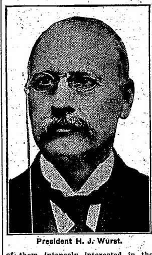
SIXTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS IS OPENED IN COLORADO SPRINGS.

EMINENT MEN PRESENT

Large Exposition of Machinery and Products—New Organization of Women Begins Its Sessions Tomorrow.

Colorado, Springs, Colo.—When Dr. J. H. Worst, head of the North Dakota Agricultural college, called to order national Dry-Farming Congress, of which he is president, he faced a gathering of distinguished men, eminent agricultural authorities and practical farmers, so large as to assure the biggest meeting the congress ever has held.

There are in attendance seven governors of states, ten presidents of agricultural colleges, fifty professors of similar institutions, fifty members of the staff of the United States department of agriculture, a half hundred agricultural authorities from foreign countries, and more than 2,500 prominent farmers and business men, all of them intensely interested in the great problem of reclaiming the so-called arid districts of the world. These delegates actually own and operate farms to the extent of nearly six millions of acres, and the problems they have met to consider are vital to sixty-three per cent of the American continent and to more than fifty per cent of the entire earth's surface.



President H. J. Wurst.

The congress is a unique organization. Its avowed objects are the cooperative, scientific study of agriculture and the development of better farming methods in the sub-humid or so-called "dry" districts of the world. It has no country to colonize. It has no lands to sell. Its work is utterly impersonal, and, as such, it has been officially indorsed by the agricultural authorities of many countries.

The sessions of the International Congress of Farm Women begin tomorrow and promise to be as interesting as those of the men. The plan originated in the mind of Mrs. John T. Burns of Colorado Springs, whose husband is secretary-treasurer of the Dry Farming Congress and who has worked with him in directing the destinies of the men's organization for the last five years. Mrs. Burns saw that much is being done for the men folk on the farm; nothing for the women, whose needs are infinite because of the confinement of their lives.

Mrs. John T. Burns.

The women's program includes frank discussions of proper equipment for the farm home, laws of physical life in relation to the family, the cash value of rest, labor saving devices, the economic value of the farm woman, the country church and the country school; together with demonstrations in cooking, home hygiene, emergency nursing, and the care of infants and young children. TRAINS COLLIDE; SEVEN DEAD

MISSOURI PACIFIC PASSENGER TRAIN HITS FREIGHT.

Misunderstood Train Orders Caused An Accident in Which 28 Were Injured.

Omaha, Nebraska.—Seven persons were killed and twenty-eight injured, four of them seriously, in a collision between Missouri Pacific Passenger Train No. 105, northbound, en route for this city, and a fast freight train at Fort Crook, ten miles south of this city. The accident resulted from a misunderstanding of orders on the part of the freight crew.

A passenger train, due to leave this city for the south about the time of the accident, was converted into a relief train and sent to the scene of the accident.

Governor Gilchrist, of Florida, who was a passenger on the northbound train, was uninjured.

Passenger Train No. 105 out of Kansas City in charge of Conductor F. R. Travers was running late. Conductor L. P. Gross of the freight passed South Omaha at 8:30. He had "signed off," but evidently did not check the train register as to the whereabouts of No. 105.

At the point of collision the track makes a sharp curve, shutting off the view of the Fort Crook station, where Engineer E. C. Crawford of the freight first caught sight of No. 105, which was coming at high speed. Engineer Crawford had no orders in regard to No. 105, but he whistled and slackened speed. When the passenger did answer he concluded that it was a train on the adjoining Burlington tracks which are within a short distance of each other. Both crews realized the danger and reversed their engines. The momentum of the passenger, however, was so great that it was piled high upon the freight engine, which almost had stopped. The crews of both engines jumped and were not injured seriously.

The impact derailed both engines and telescoped the mail cars upon the passenger coach, in which about forty people were riding.

Shrieks and groans mingled with the sound of escaping steam and the crackling of the cars brought the passengers in the Pullman rushing to the front of the train, to find the coach a mass of wreckage at the forward end and the dead and dying lying in every position from the top of the car down.

The dead and injured were all residents of Nebraska and Kansas.

GIANTS WIN THE FIRST.

38,281 Fans See First Game in World's Series.

New York, N. Y.—In the presence of what was probably the greatest throng of baseball enthusiasts ever gathered together, the National league pennant winners, the New York Giants, defeated the American league title holders, the Philadelphia Athletics, by a score of 2 to 1 in the first game of the series for the world's baseball championship of 1911 at the Polo grounds. The battle was hard fought throughout with the final honors doubtful up to near the end. The National commission announced that 38,281 persons had paid admissions to witness the contest and the gross receipts were $77,359.

$5,000,000 LOSS BY FLOODS.

Part of Denver & Rio Grande Railway Swept Away.

Denver, Colorado.—With telephone and telegraph service crippled and more than 300 miles of railroad out of commission, only meager reports are being received from the flood-swept district of southwestern Colorado and northeastern New Mexico, comprising an area approximating 100 by 75 miles. There are rumors of heavy loss of life, but the verified death list so far is comparatively small.

Melilla, Mor.—The Moorish tribes which recently have made several attacks upon the Spaniards, assaulted the positions at Izhafen and Ymarufen, but were driven back with severe loss. HARLAN IS DEAD

SUCCUMBS TO A SUDDEN ATTACK OF BRONCHITIS AT HIS WASHINGTON HOME.

ON BENCH THIRTY YEARS

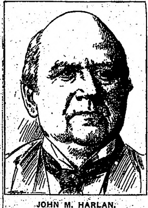
Wrote the Famous Dissenting Opinion on "Reasonable restraint" in the Recent Standard Oil Case.

Washington, D. C.—Associate Justice John M. Harlan, senior member of the supreme court of the United States, 78 years old, died at his home here following a brief illness of bronchitis. He sat on the bench when the October term of court opened Monday, but on Tuesday was confined to his home with a cold which gradually grew worse.

The aged jurist won extraordinary fame last spring when he dissented from the opinions of the remainder of the highest court in the Standard Oil and tobacco trust decisions, asserting that his associates were amending the law by reading the word "reasonable" into the Sherman anti-trust law.

Harlan served thirty-four years on the bench, which, with one exception, is the longest term in the history of the country.

The death of Justice Harlan gives President Taft the duty of electing his fifth appointee to the supreme bench which will make a majority on the bench of men selected by Mr. Taft. In addition, he elevated Associate Justice White to the position of chief justice, which, in reality, makes six appointments by President Taft. The court is composed of nine members.



JOHN M. HARLAN.
Associate Justice U. S. Supreme Court.

Justice Harlan was born in Boyle county, Kentucky, June 1, 1883. He practiced law in Kentucky and was a whig candidate for congress in 1859. In 1861 he raised the Tenth Kentucky infantry regiment and served under General Thomas.

Owing to the death of his father in the spring of 1863, although his name was before the senate for confirmation as a brigadier general, he felt compelled to resign, was elected attorney general by the union party in 1863, and filled that office until 1867, when he returned to actual practice in Louisville, Ky. He was a candidate for governor in 1871, his name was presented by the republican convention of his state in 1872 for the vice-presidency, in 1875 he was again the republican candidate for governor, was chairman of the delegation from his state to the republican national convention in 1876, declined a diplomatic position as a substitute for the attorney generalship, to which, before he reached Washington, President Hayes intended to assign him; served as a member of the Louisiana commission, was commissioned as associate justice of the United States supreme court Nov. 29, 1877, and took his seat Dec. 10, same year; received the degree of LL.D. from Bowden college and the University of Pennsylvania, was a member of the Behring sea tribunal of arbitration which met in Paris in 1893, was vice moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America in 1905. For more than twenty years was a lecturer on constitutional law in George Washington university.

Cyclone Wipes Out Village.

Danville, Illinois.—Hillsboro, Indiana, a village of 880 population, in Fountain county, 12 miles from this city, was wiped from the map by a cyclone. No one was killed and only a few were injured. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

New Orleans, La.—A combination of a large number of commercial organizations, including the Coffee Roasters' Association, sent an urgent petition to the department of justice urging that the government investigate the coffee trust.

DEPOT BLOWN UP; ONE KILLED

Another Man Fatally Hurt at Lacombe, Alberta; Two Held.

Winnipeg, Man.—A terrific explosion wrecked the Canadian Pacific depot at Lacombe, Alberta, killing E. G. McLeod, baggagemaster, and fatally injuring Wallace Bickford, his assistant.

The roof and sides of the building were blown out. Two Italians had left two trunks in the building. The Italians have been arrested and admit having chemicals in the trunks.

CARRY WAR TO DESERT

TURKISH TROOPS ARE TO BE ATTACKED IMMEDIATELY.

Constantinople Government Demoralized and Change in Rulers Is Talked.

Tripoli, Tripoli.—General Caneva, commander-in-chief of the Italian expedition, has decided to act quickly and the troops under him will march immediately against the positions occupied by the Turks. A reconnoisance of the desert disclosed the central body of Turkish troops not far from the city.

Nineteen more Italian transports escorted by warships and carrying the second division of the troops arrived and the men were landed hastily, making a total of 22,000 Italian soldiers on the coast of Tripoli.

It is reported that the Arabs have accepted the Italian occupation joyfully, but some of the warships remain in the harbor in readiness for emergencies. Troops were landed also at Beghazi, Derna, Todruk and Bomba. General Caneva has addressed a proclamation to the inhabitants, assuring them they have not been enslaved by Italy, but have been liberated from the yoke under which they have been laboring for years. They will be ruled by their own chiefs under the patronage of the king of Italy.

Religious and civil laws will be respected and taxes will be reduced or abolished.

The proclamation concludes by announcing that Italy desires that Tripoli shall remain the land of Islam under the protection of Italy.

No Armistice Arranged.

Rome.—That an armistice has been arranged between Italy and Turkey, as reported from Berlin, strenuously is denied by the Italian government.

A dispatch from Tripoli to the Giornale d'Italia says that the Turkish government, being unable to communicate directly with Munhir Pasha, commander of the former Turkish garrison at Tripoli, has telegraphed to the Turkish consuls at Tunis and Mattao to instruct him to resist as long as possible.

London.—The Daily Telegraph's Constantinople correspondent, in reviewing the situation, says that Turkey lacks a government, practical leaders, or a policy, and that she is floundering hopelessly.

"The problem of reconciling Islamism and constitutionalism," says the correspondent, "has proved insoluble, and the young Turkish regime is sick unto death. It is not impossible that present events may lead to the deposition of the sultan, the military section of the committee of union and progress being in favor of placing the heir-apparent, Prince Yussof, on the throne. Yussof is credited with an iron will and great political sagacity."

Chicago.—Many Jews of Chicago are alarmed at stories printed that the cession of Palestine will be demanded by INtaly in settlement of claims raised by the disturbances in Tripoli, and, furthermore, that the Holy Land will then be turned over to the pope as a temporal domain. Such a change, it is feared, would not only destroy the Jewish movement of colonization in Asia Minor, but also forbid residence or travel in the land of the Jews to anyone except Christians.

ORDER COMBINE DISSOLVED.

Electric Trust Must Separate Its Constituents.

Toledo, Ohio.—Declaring that their desire was to comply with all of the provisions of the statutes and that they did not think their acts had been unlawful, the General Electric company, the Westinghouse Electric company, and thirty-four other electrical companies, engaged in the manufacture and sale of incandescent lamps and lamp machinery, threw themselves upon the mercy of Judge Killits in the federal courts when they withdrew their answers to the government suit charging a monopoly in restraint of trade.

The government's suit was filed six months ago in Cleveland. It charged that all the defendant companies, through contracts, agreements and conspiracies were restraining trade and asked the dissolution of the combine. Judge Killits ruled that the concealment of the interest of the General Electric in the National Electric company was unlawful, in that it had been pretending to be a separate and competing company. The court ordered that the National company and all its subsidiaries be dissolved and that the General Electric be enjoined from conducting business except in its own name. Judge Killits' ruling was a complete breaking up of the trust, providing that:

All factories, plants and selling departments shall be made known to the public as the property and business of the General Electric company.

ROBBERS GET TEN THOUSAND.

Good Haul Made in Kansas Village Postoffice.

Pittsburgh, Kansas.—Robbers who entered the post office at Mulberry, 15 miles east of Pittsburgh, escaped with several packages of registered mail. One package contained $10,000, being sent to the Sheridan coal company to pay its miners. Neither the officials of the company nor the postmaster will talk about the loss.

ATC. DISSOLUTION

FILES DETAILED SCHEME WITH U. S. DISTRICT COURT AT NEW YORK.

TO SEPARATE COMPANIES

Claims That the Various Constituent Organizations Will Actually Become Independent Competing Concerns.

New York, N. Y.—The American Tobacco Company's plan of reorganization was filed with the clerk of the United States circuit court. In addition to outlining the previously published plan of disintegration the corporation and its subsidiaries pray for an extension of sixty days for perfecting the reorganization.

A scheme purporting to show the control of reorganized companies was submitted with the petition. Under the head, "Relative ownership of the voting stock held by twenty-nine individual defendants in the aggregate—both from what they now own and what they will receive from the carrying out of this plan—and the public," the following table was submitted, the name of the company being given, the first column showing the per cent of voting stock owned by the defendants, and the second column showing the per cent of voting stock owned by others.

American Tob. Co.	35.16	64.84
Liggett & Meyers Co.....	40.76	59.24
American Snuff Co.	38.65	61.35
George W. Helme Co....	28.49	71.51
Weyman & Bruton Co...	28.49	71.51
Conley Foil Co.	33.88	66.12
Johnston Tin Foil & Metal Co.	33.73	66.27
McAndrews & Forbes....	39.77	60.23
J. S. Young Co..........	43.87	56.13
R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co..	37.53	62.47
United Cigar Stores Co..	37.65	62.35
British American Tob. Co	34.46	65.54
Porto Rican A. T. Co....	45.31	54.69

The fate of the old companies doing business under the wing of the trust, the petition states, will be as follows:

The Conley Tin Foil Company will be divided into two companies, having no interest whatsoever the one in the other, and neither in a dominant position in respect to the tin foil business.

The licorice business now done and controlled by McAndrews & Forbes Company will be divided into two independent companies.

The American Stogie Company will be dissolved and its business disintegrated.

The American Cigar Company will be disintegrated and it will have no dominant position in any branch of the cigar business.

The business of the American Snuff Company will be divided among three companies, each independent of the other.

As for domination of the new concerns by the American Tobacco Company the petition says that, under the plan, the trust will have surrendered all interests in and control over the tin foil, licorice and snuff industries; will have severed all relations with the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, the Porto Rican American Tobacco Company, the British-American Tobacco Company, limited, and the Imperial Tobacco Company, limited, and the United Cigar Stores Company.

All covenants with the British concerns named, forbidding them to extend their business into America, and all agreements not to engage in the tobacco business, made by the other vendors and others here, will be terminated, leaving them free to engage in competition.

PHILADELPHIA WINS SECOND.

Trounces the Giants to the Tune of 3 to 1.

Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Pa.—Finer weather than that which favored the two great teams of the American and National leagues for their second battle for the baseball championship of the world could not be desired. The sun was shining brightly as the teams took the field. The wind was but a gentle breeze and not strong enough to bother the fielders. The crowd was on hand early and when the umpire-in-chief called "play ball" there was not a vacant space for a spectator anywhere in the park. The final score of 3 to 1 convinced the home fans that the day was perfect.

Turkey and Italy Unable to Reach an Agreement.

London, England.—The Chronicle's Vienna correspondent declares that all diplomatic efforts made at Rome to bring about peace have failed utterly. Another attempt at peace intervention, says the correspondent, may be made later.

DYGART TELLS ALL

SAYS HE KILLED MRS. BOLTON BECAUSE SHE WOULDN'T ELOPE WITH HIM.

THIRD MURDER IN WIS.

Confesses He Slew John Hefstedt, Douglas County, Wis., June 27—Flung Body in Well and Escaped.

Minneapolis. — Two confessions clearing up the murders of three persons were secured by the police from James P. Dygart, who was identified as "Jim," the hired man wanted to explain the murders on the Bolton farm, Anoka county, Sept. 12.

Dygart confessed to the murders of Mrs. Amelia Bolton, and her cousin, Frank Edward Rhodes, on the Bolton farm. Three hours later he confessed to the killing of John Hefstedt, a farmer near Popular, Douglas county, Wis.

The murders of Mrs. Bolton and her cousin were committed Tuesday morning, Sept. 12, according to the police, and the sheriff.

Wanted Woman to Elope.

Mrs. Bolton was killed as she stood before her kitchen range churning butter. Just why he shot Mrs. Bolton then, Jim could not explain to the police who attribute the three murders to an insane desire for blood. Neither could he explain why he killed Hefstedt. Dygart told the police that he had killed the woman because she had spurned an offer he had made to elope with him, although he said the two had been intimate ever since he went to work on the Bolton farm.

Shortly after he had shot Mrs. Bolton, Rhodes returned home and as he entered the door of the barn Dygart shot him. The bullet struck Rhodes in the right thigh. Rhodes fled thru the back door of the house, past the body of Mrs. Bolton, lying on the kitchen floor, and upstairs into the garret. Dygart went into the barn and waited. In a few minutes, Rhodes jumped from a front window of the house and started to run across the road into the potato field.

As he reached the side of the road, Dygart shot him twice. Rhodes fell in his tracks and Dygart, dropping the rifle, ran across, dragged him past a big oak tree and down to a dead furrow, where earlier in the morning Rhodes had dug potatoes. He had dug his own grave, for there it was that Dygart dragged him, covering him with a few handfuls of earth and sand.

Dygart then went back to the house, dragged the body of Mrs. Bolton down the cellar stairs, staining the walls of the passageway with blood. He dropped her at the bottom of the steps on the dirt floor of the basement. Dygart denies he assaulted her there.

About 3 o'clock, with the Bolton mandolin under his arm and the two watches of his victims, he started to Wyoming where, later, he tried to sell the mandolin.

The watch of Mrs. Bolton was recovered from the pawnshop of M. Wolfson, here, after his confession.

Tells of Wisconsin Murder.

After admitting the killing of Mrs. Amelia Bolton and her cousin, Frank E. Rhodes, on the Bolton farm, near Wyoming, Dygart made a detailed confession of the murder of John Hefstedt at Poplar, Wis., on June 27th.

The confession was made to Sheriff Edward McKinnon of Douglas county, Wisconsin; Archibald McKay, district attorney of the same county; Night Captain Ferm and Detectives Brundage and Regan of the local police. It was made without the slightest coercion.

He told how he had shot the Wisconsin farmer from ambush, dropping him dead with the first shot; how he then had dragged him for several rods to an unused well and thrown the body into it to cover his crime; how he then had gone to the Hefstedt farm with the intention of killing Mrs. Helstedt and her son, a young man of 20; but had decided not to do so, as he was unable to get them separated and feared to attack the two of them when they were together.

Dygart said he was unable to give any motive for the murder of Hefstedt when first questioned, but when pressed, admitted he had made an indecent proposal to the farmer's wife, who repulsed him with indignation.

EARLY HEARING SOUGHT.

Simpson Submits Motion for Advancement of Express Case.

Washington, D. C.—Attorney General Simpson submitted a motion to the supreme court for the advancement for early hearing of the case of the United States Express company against the state of Minnesota, on appeal from the state supreme court. LAW PROTECTS WHITTIER.

Reform School. Superintendent Has Right to Whip Unruly Boys.

St. Paul. — C. Louis Weeks, the assistant attorney general, in an opinion given the state board of control, held that Superintendent Whittier of the state training school for boys at Red Wing could not be removed from office for error of judgment in the infliction of corporal punishment to the inmates under his charge if such punishment were given without malice.

This opinion is considered a point in Mr. Whittier's favor, and is taken to mean his exoneration at the hands of the board of control. Mr. Weeks attended the hearings of the Red Wing investigation before the board of control, and after its completion the board submitted a series of questions covering the legal points of the case. The principal questions were on Mr. Whittier's rights as guardian of the state's charges, his right to inflict corporal punishment and an interpretation of the state law governing corporal punishment. The specific question was asked whether Mr. Whittier could be considered a guardian or a parent over his charges or whether his relations to them were that of a jailer or a warden.

Mr. Weeks holds that his relation is that of a parent and that he has the right to inflict corporal punishment, and that he could not be held liable for inflicting such punishment if it were used in a reasonable and moderate manner or if it were used to excess, but without malice.

The board asked the question point blank whether Mr. Whittier could be removed from office if, in the judgment of the board, a lesser punishment in kind and degree would have been sufficient, provided that no malice were shown and no permanent injury resulted. This question was answered in the negative. Mr. Weeks said that to do so would be substituting the judgment of the board for the rule of law under which Mr. Whittier was entitled to protection. Mr. Weeks also held that Mr. Whittier could not be held responsible for the unlawful act committed by a subordinate.

CALEDONIA FIRE LOSS $50,000.

Block of Frame Buildings in the Business Center Burned.

Caledonia.—Fire wrecked a business block and for a time threatened the entire town. The loss is estimated at $50,000. The origin of the fire, which was discovered in a storehouse, is not known. Immediately after the alarm was sounded, but before the volunteer fire department arrived, the two-story building was enveloped in flames, which were communicating to other structures in close proximity.

The Hill sisters' millinery store, L. Deters' general store, the principal business house in town, H. Deters' restaurant, the Lyric theater and Union hall were destroyed. Except the theater the buildings burned were frame structures. Several of them were old and the loss was principally upon the contents. The heaviest loss was sustained at the Deters general store. This is estimated at $10,000. At 3:30 the fire was under control.

FAKE HOLDUP IS CHARGED.

Farmer Alleged to Have Devised Scheme to Get Employe's $890.

Moorhead.—F. M. Rice, a wealthy farmer of Clay county, is in jail here on a grand larceny charge, the police holding him responsible for an alleged conspiracy, involving an alleged holdup in which R. M. Patterson, an employe on the Rice farm, was relieved of $890.

Patterson was paid the $890 by Rice and the two started for this city. They were stopped about two miles from the city limits by an armed man who demanded their money. Patterson shoved the roll of bills under the seat cushion of the buggy. Later he was unable to find the money.

The man who held up the two has been identified, it is said, as S. Lindey, also an employe of the Rice farm, and it is said by the police that the holdup was a frame-up on the part of Rice and Lindey to get Patterson's money.

ADVICE FOR DAIRYMEN.

The use of the state score card in determining the conditions of dairies was discussed at a meeting of state dairy officials and Ramsey county dairymen in the office of Dr. Howard Lankester, health commissioner. The score cards will be used by the St. Paul dairy inspector, H. Burnham, in checking up dairy conditions in Ramsey county, and the dairymen were told how the scoring will be done. The condition of the stables, how the herds are kept, and how the milking is done are factors in determining the points. The use of these cards also will enable the health department to make accurate comparisons of dairies.

Dr. Lankester said last night dairy conditions in St. Paul are fairly satisfactory and he believed the dairymen are co-operating with the department in making them as clean as possible.

TO PAY BREN DEFICIT.

Bonding Company, Says John Lind Will Meet Debt.

The United States Bonding and Fidelity Company, which bonded Joseph D. Bren as cashier of the State University for $40,000, will make up the shortage in the university accounts, according to a statement by John Lind, president of the Board of Regents.

Mr. Lind conferred with Governor Eberhart yesterday, and after the conference, said that the company had agreed to pay approximately the amount of which Bren alleges he was robbed early last June.

The regents have maintained that the company is liable whether Bren was robbed or whether he embezzled the money, as is charged in indictments pending against him. According to the report of the public examiner's office the shortage in the accounts amounts to approximately $14,400, while Bren says he was robbed of about $14,000.

DR. DUMAS IS CONVICTED.

Mayor of Cass Lake Found Guilty of Arson.

Bemidji.—Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, was found guilty of arson in the third degree. Dr. Dumas was charged specifically with having attempted, with Mike Davis and Martin Behan, to burn the postoffice building at Puposky early in the morning of June 17.

Dr. Dumas returned with his wife to Cass Lake in their automobiles after the verdict was read. He took the verdict without any show of emotion and refused to comment on it.

Attorney Freeman P. Lane of Minneapolis, of counsel for the defense gave notice of an appeal.

To Raise Otter Tail Lake.

Fergus Falls.—Government surveyors have been at work for some time making surveys of Otter Tail lake. The surveys contemplate a rise of three feet in the natural level of the lake, and a dam of considerable size will have to be put in if the water is to be raised to the height indicated. The government contemplates making a reservoir of the lake in order to hold back water which would tend to cause floods in the Red river valley in the spring and to let it out when it is needed in the summer.

CHURCH IS HISTORIC

Scene of First Protestant Settlement in America.

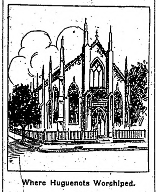
Colony Was Early Founded Near Port Royal on the Shores of South Carolina and by the Huguenots.

Port Royal, S. C.—The first Protestant settlement in America was made on the shores of South Carolina, not far from the present town of Port Royal, and by the Huguenots. This colony came out under the leadership of Jean Ribaut in the spring of 1562. This settlement of South Carolina by a Protestant colony antedates that of the English settlement of Virginia by 45 years, and was 58 years before the arrival of the pilgrim fathers at Plymouth, Mass. But this settlement at Port Royal did not have the success that was hoped for it, and had to be abandoned—not before seed had been planted, however, that bears its fruit to this day.

On landing, one of the first things the Huguenots did was to unite in a service of thanksgiving to God for their safe arrival. They erected a monument to commemorate the occasion. To quote from the Rev. Dr. Vedder, "The stone pillar of John Ribaut was the corner stone of the temple of Protestantism in the Western hemisphere."

It was not until after the edict of Nantes, October, 1685, that the great immigration of Huguenots to South Carolina took place. Four prominent settlements were made—one on the Santee river, one on the Cooper river, one at St. Johns, Berkely, and the other in the city of Charleston. One of the first steps taken by each of these colonies was toward the establishment of a church wherein they might worship according to their faith.

The Huguenots of Charleston make two distinct claims outside that of having the only Huguenot church in America. One is that theirs is the first church organization established in South Carolina; and the other that they were the first to carry the gospel to the state outside the city of Charleston.



Where Huguenots Worshiped.

The first Huguenot church organization was about 1681-2. In the cemetery surrounding it lies entombed the dust of many who have slept there for more than two centuries, the pioneers of the church. On the tombs are engraved names that have become historic in the annals of South Carolina.

The present building was erected in 1845. It is stone, in Gothic style, with ornamental masonry extending in pointed columns above the roof. It suffered greatly, as did all of the churches of Charleston, from the terrible earthquake of 1886. The first church building was burned in 1740. The congregation took steps to erect another, which shared the same fate; and still another, which was also burned. The present building stands today unique in history, the only Huguenot church in America.

KEEPS GIANT SONS IN BED

Under Mother's Hypnotic Influence They Fear to Move—All in Good Health.

Northville, N. Y.—Hypnotized by their mother into the belief that they are suffering from hereditary heart disease in an aggravated form, three grown men have been lying in bed for years in their home here. Physicians have examined the three men and declare they are in as sound physical trim as can be three six-footers who have remained in bed such a length of time.

The men are sons of John Bennett, a farmer. The mother is a robust woman, intelligent in appearance, about sixty years old. The sons are George, thirty-two years old; Ward, twenty-nine, and Frank, twenty-seven years. They are under the impression that the slightest shock will result in sudden death. George has been in bed for eight years, Ward ten years and Frank six years.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Bennett insist the men are awful sufferers. They had trouble this summer with a firm of contractors putting through a state highway near their home because the blasting had a serious effect on their sons' condition.

Trolley Car Sets Man Afire.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Edward Higgins, sixty-seven years old, was carrying a package of matches in a back pocket of his trousers when he was struck by a trolley car. The matches were ignited and before the flames were extinguished Higgins was badly burned.

GEN. HERKIMER'S MONUMENT

Imposing Shaft on the Old Homestead Which Marks the Sturdy Hero's Grave.

Albany, N. Y.—Renewed efforts are now under way for the preserving of the General Herkimer homestead in the picturesque Mohawk valley of the state. The brick house is still in very good condition, although it remains practically the same as when occupied as a home by the sturdy old hero of the battle of Oriskany.

Only a few rods from the house is the burial place of the general and this is marked by an imposing shaft, erected by the state of New York. The present movement to purchase the old homestead and preserve it as one of the historical spots of the country has been started by prominent members of the national and state committees on historical spots. Recently a large pilgrimage was made to the place and interesting patriotic exercises were conducted by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

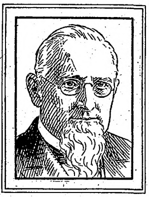
THOMAS H. CARTER IS DEAD

Former Montana Senator, Prominent in National Politics, Passed Away in Washington.

Washington, D. C.—Former United States Senator Thomas Henry Carter of Montana, for many years a notable and picturesque figure in national politics, once head of the Republican national committee and since last March chairman of the American section of the international joint commission, died at his home in Washington recently at the age of fifty-seven years.

Mr. Carter represented Montana in the senate for 12 years. He first sat in the senate in 1895, and stayed there until 1901. He came back in 1905. He first came into national politics in 1892, when he was made chairman of President Harrison's Republican national committee, and at that time it was written of him "he is a somewhat undersized Montana man, who looks like Uncle Sam just out of a ready-made clothing store."



The Late Thomas H. Carter.

The late senator had Irish parents, whose birthplaces were within a few miles of each other in the old country, but they did not meet until they had migrated to Virginia. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ellen Galen Carter, and two sons.

INDIAN HAS EARS TRIMMED

He Undergoes Operation to Win a Bride Who Disliked Style of His Auricular Appendages.

Reno, Nev.—Protruding ears with square corners are not considered necessary perquisites to the beauty of the Shoshone Indians in this state, as was proved when a full-blooded buck of that tribe invoked the use of surgery in order that his looks might be improved.

Johnny Joyce, a Shoshone Indian, visited the office of a local physician and asked that his square and protruding ears be reduced in size. In explanation he stated that the Indian maiden of his choice refused to marry him on account of the manner in which his organs of hearing had grown.

The operation was performed successfully and Joyce, with his hearing appendages trimmed on the bias, compensated the physician for the labor and prepared to return to his home and his bride.

WORK NOW A SCIENCE

HOUSEKEEPING TODAY A VERY DEFINITE OCCUPATION.

Sanitary Conditions and the Care of the Home Must Be Thoroughly Understood—Systematic Cleaning Up Most Desirable.

When a woman enters into the housekeeping business she takes upon herself grave responsibilities, and it becomes her duty to inform herself on all subjects that pertain to her chosen work. We must understand sanitary conditions both in and outside of the house. We must know how to keep everything, from family to premises, in the best condition, with the least work and worry possible. We must keep pace with household improvements and inventions, and be able to select the best for our own special use. It is our business to see that all leaks which lead to extravagance and loss of health are closed permanently, for "sanitation and economy are twin sisters." Our protection from dirt, disease and insects is a hygienic matter that science demands today, and this is afforded more through a study of little than large things.

Cleanliness should be scattered through the year, instead of making a mountain of it at stated seasons. Even if a neighbor does sniff suspiciously when we say we clean every week instead of twice a year, we should have the courage not to yield our position, nor feel conscience stricken, if our home is tranquil and serene during the upheaval that affects others. Frequent cleaning is economical, in that one expends less strength and expense than if the dirt has accumulated and less hard rubbing and digging into house and furniture is required. It helps us to repair a break when found at once, and a cent spent in time saves dollars.

Let there be daily inspection, ventilation and sun bathing of every room. Do not tolerate cracks in floors, baseboards, walls or any place where pests may lodge. Old newspapers, soaked in a tub of water for a few days, boiled to a soft pulp, mixed with half a pound of glue to a gallon of pulp, squeezed dry while hot, then applied to the cracks, will easily and neatly fill them. After this has hardened a good paint filler, and a coat or two of stain, paint or varnish, will give you utmost satisfaction.

When sweeping keep the dust "down," and let a current of air blow through the room. Sweep with the draught, and broom and air will soon rid the room of dust Wipe the furniture with an oiled cloth. Be sure no part of the house is damp. A dry cellar is an absolute necessity. If the building stands in a low place, have a ditch a few feet from the foundation, slope and fill with broken stone and gravel; top with dirt. Apply waterproof preparation or paint to the inside, that the dampness may not ascend.

Let the housekeeper, when planning the running of her establishment, consider, first, the house healthful; second, the house comfortable; third, the house convenient; the rest will take care of itself. Nothing, positively nothing, should be planned for display, the predominant thought being to outstrip one's friends, for an attitude of this kind is unsanitation of the mind.—Alta Heath.

Sugared Cherries.

Sugared cherries are delicious. Use large, firm cherries for this dish. Have in front of you a soup plate containing the whites of three eggs mixed with five tablespoonfuls of cold water, another plate filled with sifted powdered sugar at your right, the bowl of cherries at your left. Dip each cherry in the water and white of egg, turn it over and over in the sugar and lay on a chilled platter to dry. When all are done sift more powdered sugar over the fruit and arrange carefully on a glass dish.

Hot-Water Gingerbread.

Eaten warm, with whipped cream, is makes a nice dessert for a change. One-half cup lard, fill cup with hot water, one-third cup sugar, fill cup with molasses, one teaspoon ginger, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt, sifted with two cups flour. Last of all add one unbeaten egg to the mixture. Beat all together and bake until cake leaves side of pan.

Ecalus Cakes.

Two cups of flour, pinch of salt, one heaping spoonful baking powder, three-fourths cup of lard. Mix together and add water enough to make it as stiff as pie crust. Divide into eight pieces. Take each piece and roll out just a little, spread with butter, a few seeded raisins and a little sugar. Fold the raisins in, then roll in a round shape about one-quarter inch thick. Spread top with butter and sugar. Bake in hot oven. Very good.

Cream of Tartar Biscuits.

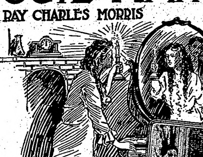
One quart flour, 2 teaspoons cream tartar, 1 of soda dissolved in milk, little butter rubbed in the flour, milk enough to mix. Stir with a knife, then knead, roll and cut.

Fruit Sandwiches.

Use any seasonable fruit, spread it on a layer of buttered bread, sweeten to taste, cover with another piece of buttered bread and press gently together

THE FESTIVAL of the BOGIE MAN

BY RAY CHARLES MORRIS



DRESSING FOR THE HALLOWEEN PARTY

A MENU OF MARSHMALLOWS AND OTHER GOODIES FOR HALLOWEEN

ALL READY FOR HALLOWEEN

CUTTING THE FACE IN THE PUMPKIN FOR HOLLOWEEN

NOW comes the festival of the Bogie Man. If you want to try something that is novel and amusing in connection with it you cannot do better than make a few experiments in the construction of vegetable manikins, which are particularly appropriate to Hallowe'en. They are usually made at home with the aid of a few vegetables such as potatoes, beets, carrots and the like, and the contriving of them will afford a lot of amusement.

For example, with a fair-sized potato for a body, a beet for a head and a couple of carrots for legs you can turn out quite a humanlike figure. Stand him firmly on his "pins," paint a couple of eyes and a nose, cut a round hole beneath the nose for the insertion of a cigar and you will have a sporty-looking goblin, which only needs some sort of a hat and a stick in his hand—his arms are carrots also—to be perfect in its way.

The deft handling of a penknife will accomplish wonders in the manufacture of such vegetable manikins, helping out here and there in a sculptural way, while a little ingenuity in the contribution of minor accessories is an important aid. For instance, a policeman, with a potato body, a turnip head and a couple of cucumbers for legs requires some sort of a helmet (easily made out of pasteboard, as well as a club in his hand, to lend him a proper verisimilitude. A final touch in the shape of a pair of mustaches consisting of two ears of wheat stuck with mucilage beneath the nose contributes ferocity to his expression.

Or, if you like, you may construct a clown, with a small beet for a head and a couple of carrots for legs, lady apples serving admirably for buttons and topknots. Here, of course, a bit of paint is desirable—but not very much, because it is well to rely as far as possible upon the vegetables themselves for the effects to be produced. The clown should have a peaked cap on top of his head, which is easily cut out of the substance of the beet so as to have the desired shape, and in his hand he may carry a plum, attached to a short string, to represent the distended bladder, which Mr. Merryman is accustomed to use in his business.

The question of feet for the manikins may be a bit puzzling, but small potatoes will serve the purpose satisfactorily, and radishes are excellent. One or two incidentals of clothing may be discreetly added, such as a necktie for a dude manikin, or a veil for a lady goblin. The lady goblin, by the way, may be provided appropriately with a skirt of lettuce leaves, and if she can be supplied with a parasol to carry in her hand, the effect will be more picturesque.

Some girls are very clever at contriving such things as these, and, with the suggestions here given, almost any bright young woman ought to be able to put together a few Hallowe'en manikins that will be a surprise to her friends. If she chooses to celebrate the occasion by a party, she ought to devise a vegetable goblin for each guest, to serve as a present, and it is desirable that in each case the bogie doll (if such it may be called) shall be a "take-off" in some way upon the recipient. Thus a dude manikin might be bestowed upon a young man conspicuous for the elegance of his apparel. This will make a great deal of fun.

Jack o'Lanterns are always appropriate to Hallowe'en, and small ones, made out of little pumpkins and provided with grinning teeth and staring eyes painted on paper and glued on the inside of the lantern, will help out the array of gifts for the guests on such an occasion. A small-sized lantern of the sort makes a first-rate head for a goblin, whose body may be an orange if desired.

The reason why vegetables, fruits and nuts always figure so conspicuously in the celebration of Hallowe'en is simply that the festival is by origin a harvest rejoicing. It is a thanksgiving for the safe and successful garnering of the crops in autumn. Therefore it is that apples, pumpkins and nuts, which are typical autumn products, are most used as symbols in connection with the occasion.

The ceremonies appropriate to Hallowe'en are of wholly pagan origin, and even to this day the ancient rites are celebrated in parts of Scotland. Great fires (a relic of the pagan Baal fires) are built outdoors on heaps of stones. All the home fires are put out, and, until midnight, only these are permitted to burn. Then, at the strok of 12, each person takes a bit of the fire to his home, and with it kindles a fresh blaze upon his hearth. At this ceremonial many centuries ago the Druid priests officiated. The fires they kindled were sacred.

In the ninth century Pope Gregory IV. appointed November 1 as a day for the celebration of the memory of all saints and martyrs not already honored by an allotment of special days in the calendar. Hence the name. All-Hallows," or "All Saints' Day." The choice of this day was determined doubtless by the fact that the first of November, or rather the eve of the night preceding it, was the occasion of the ancient pagan festival of the harvest. For it was the policy of the church to supplant heathen by Christian observances.

If you give a Hallowe'en party you can amuse your guests by placing upon a table a large dish full of vegetables —beets, carrots, turnips, potatoes and onions—the number being the same as that of the men present. To each vegetable should be tied with a gay ribbon a card bearing a man's name. Then the ladies should in turn be blindfolded, and, being led to the table one at a time, should pick out a vegetable, which, according to the card it bears, will decide who shall be the partner of its possessor for the evening.

Another amusing game requires that each girl in turn shall go out in the yard, or into the street, blindfolded, and led by somebody else and pick up the first fallen leaf that comes to hand. If it is ragged and dirty her future husband will be poor. If yellow he will be wealthy; if red he will be a witty and brilliant man; if green he will be a fool.

In case you are puzzled to choose between two lovers place three nuts on a stove or before the fire so close that they will be ignited. One you name for yourself and other two for the young men respectively. If one of the nuts jumps and bounces away, you know that the person it represents will prove fickle and an undesirable husband. As for the other, if it remains close by and the two nuts burn to ashes together you have reason to believe that this lover and yourself will make a happy match. Some quite ancient verses describe the test as follows:

These glowing nuts are emblems true
Of what in human life we view;
The ill-matched couple fret and fume
And thus in strife themselves consume.
Or from each other wildly start,
And with a noise forever part.
But see the happy, happy pair,
Of genuine love and truth sincere;
With mutual fondness while they burn.
Still to each other kindly turn;
And as the vital sparks decay
Together gently sink away,
Till, life's ordeal over passed,
Their mingled ashes rest at last.

Some of the most amusing of Hallowe'en games have for their object the solving of problems of destiny in regard to matrimony. In one of them three small bowls are placed on the table—the first one empty, the second filled with clear water and the third containing soapy water. Girls are blindfolded in turn and led to the table, with instructions to dip the left hand into one of the bowls. If the hand is dipped into the clear water, the maid will marry a bachelor; if into the soapy water she will capture a widower, and if into the empty receptacle, she will remain a spinster all her life.

A similar test of fate is made by means of the so-called "fortune cake," in which are baked a ring, a thimble, and a silver dime. Each maiden in turn cuts a slice of it, and she who secures the piece that contains the ring may expect to be the first bride. The one who gets the coin will have a rich husband, but she to whose lot the thimble falls is doomed to spinsterhood.

There are a number of ways of performing the famous mirror experiment, but the correct method is to take a candle, go alone into a dark room, and eat an apple before a looking glass. The hour must be midnight exactly, else nothing will happen. But, if these directions are strictly obeyed, at the very stroke of 12 the young woman will see in the mirror the face of her future husband looking over her shoulder.

Of course it may be a stranger's face, but that only makes it more interesting and romantic.

Bobbing for apples is a favorite Hallowe'en amusement, and as a means of diversion is highly regarded. The apples are placed in a tub of water, and, as they float about, each person tries in turn to capture one of them by biting it. It is not an easy task, and the frantic efforts of the participants in the game are bound to excite much merriment. It is required that the hands shall be held behind the back, and the understanding is that any young woman who fails to secure an apple will never get a husband.

Occasionally, as a variation on this method, an apple is suspended by a string in a doorway or from a chandelier, and one person after another tries to get hold of it with the teeth as it bobs about. The difficulty of the task is greater in proportion to the size of the apple. For some reason never satisfactorily explained, apples play a very important part in most of the doings connected with this witches' festival, and even the seeds of the fruit are counted, like daisy petals, for magical purposes.

The seeds in an apple, of course, vary in number, and hence the opportunity for speculation. As she counts them, the maiden recites: "One, I love; two, I love; three, I love, I say; four, I love with all my heart; five, I cast away; six, he loves; seven, she loves; eight, both love; nine, he comes; ten, he tarries; eleven, he courts; twelve, he marries; thirteen, they part; fourteen, die of broken heart."

A future husband's occupation in life may be ascertained by pouring melted lead into a glass at midnight on Hallowe'en. As it chills, it will take the shape of the tools he uses. Another plan that may be adopted by the inquisitive damsel is to fill her mouth with water, take a handful of salt and run around the block. The first name she hears as she regains her starting place will be that of her destined spouse. When a merry party of girls take part together in this experiment it is sure to make a lot of fun; for most of them are bound to giggle, thus losing the water they hold in their mouths, and incidentally they forget the salt they hold in their hands and drop it. Naturally, under such circumstances the charm fails to work.

A story is told of an American girl traveling in Ireland, who chanced to visit on Hallowe'en a humble dwelling. The old woman whose home it was told her that she would show to her her future husband's face, if she would pay a shilling. The maiden willingly complied, whereupon the old woman bade her look in the mirror. "I see nothing but my own face," said the girl. "Never mind, my dear," quoth the old woman, "it will be your husband's face when you get married."

GAMES FOR HALLOWE'EN

First the invitations must, of course, be appropriate. Tiny note paper, with fairies and hobgoblins on it, can be bought; but any girl or boy with a very little trouble can make nicer ones. You might write the invitations on silver paper half moons, on which you can sketch (or paste, if you cannot draw) owls, gypsy fortune-tellers or horseshoes. Or, take pieces of red card board about four inches square; then cut out of black paper funny little goblins, witches and fairies Arrange them on the red card as artistically as possible, and print the invitations in black or gilt paint. If you can put it in rhyme, all the better.

The decorations should be of autumn leaves or bunches of wheat, jack-o'-lanterns, strings of popcorn, or pine cones tied from narrow strips of deep yellow cheesecloth or bunting. The little gourds or squashes, deep yellow, striped green and ruddy brown, make cunning favors for each child's plate. Cut off the top and fill them with the old-fashioned round, red peppermint drops. If you can find one of the very long gourds (sometimes they are a couple of feet long), they are very attractive scooped out and filled with trailing vines or autumn leaves.

For refreshments be sure to have sticky molasses taffy, popcorn balls, doughnuts and hot green pickles, if you have nothing else. The ices can be bought in witch moulds, but if that is too expensive, serve it in a huge scooped-out pumpkin set on a platter surrounded with a wreath of ivy or autumn leaves.

If you like games for prizes, why not have a winter four-leaf clover party for good luck? Cut any amount of three-leaved and a few four leaved clovers out of green tissue paper and numbered on the back. Hide them everywhere, the more out-of-the-way places the better, so long as a tiny edge is in view. When the hunt is over each boy and girl adds up the numbers on the back of the leaves found, counting 25 for every four-leafed clover. The person having the highest sum total wins the prize.

Or you might try tossing peanuts. Each player in turn is given 15 peanuts, and standing about eight feet off tries to throw as many as possible into a small round basket. The one getting in the most nuts wins the prize.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

There are two ways to tell if you have weak kidneys. The first is through pains in the back. The second by examining the kidney secretions. If you suspect your kidneys, begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once.

E. R. Wilson, Emmettsburg, Iowa, says: "I was completely laid up with kidney complaint and inflammatory rheumatism. My limbs and feet were terribly swollen and so inflamed I could not walk for days. After doctors had failed to help me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Three boxes cured me so completely that I have not had the slightest trouble since."

Maine Blueberries.

Washington county's blueberry crop has netted this year a revenue of more than $1,000,000, according to State Horticulturist Albert K. Gardner of Rockland. This industry was started but a few years ago in that county and the yield this year is the largest yet obtained there. One grower realized $75 from a few bushels which he set out in his orchard as a "side issue." A man near Cherryfield is said to have raked blueberries from the vines just as cranberries are gathered. It is stated that fabulous prices are paid for rental of blueberry lands and blueberry factories and the canning factories are still running.—Kennebec Journal.

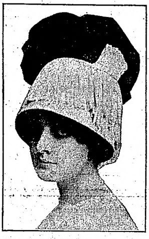
FASHIONABLE FRINGES

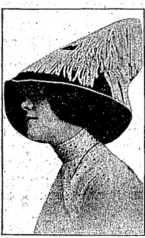
CHENILLE POPULAR FOR FALL HAT TRIMMING.

Plumes, Pompons, Tassels and Rosettes Fashioned by the Clever Trimmer—"Rat-Tail" Is the Prettiest and Best.

Fringes of all descriptions, and especially those of chenille, appear on the new fall hats as a trimming. The cleverness of trimmers has fashioned them into plumes, pompons, cockades, tassels and rosettes, and they are used about the crowns as a finish. The "rat-tail" fringe of chenille, like that shown in the pictures, is the prettiest and best liked. Narrow, flat, silk fringes are used to cover crowns (and sometimes entire shapes), laid row after row over a silk foundation. Rat-tail fringes are shown in silver and gilt fabrics, and merit a better name than that given them, for they are elegant, giving a hint of splendor in millinery. The tinsel fringes are more sparingly used than those of silk or chenille.

The two models shown here are in black and white, but may be had in other color combinations. Fig. 1 is very fine when developed in white broadcloth with crown of black velvet, and trimming of white chenille fringe. This shape may be bought in bright and in scratch felts, or in plain felts. It comes in buckram, also, ready for covering with silk or velvet. It is high crowned, but not extreme and is best suited to youthful faces.





The soft hat of black velvet shown in Fig. 2 is a fine example of millinery art; a new shape and becoming to almost any face. The brim edge is outlined with a piping of white satin. The conical crown is made on a rice-net foundation and is therefore shapely but not hard, or rigid in outline. A band of white chenille fringe finished with a plume of the fringe made on a wire stem complete the model. These hats show the latest cry in fall millinery and besides this advantage are tasteful and practical.

TO SOOTHE NERVOUS PEOPLE

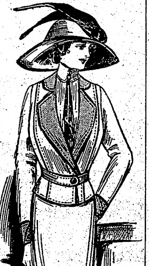
Decorations and Furniture of the Boudoir Should Have Harmonizing and Restful Effect.

The boudoir when furnishing can be anything that fancy dictates imagine it in blue tones—blues which are soft and blend one into the other in perfect harmony. There might be a blue carpet with touches of mauve woven into its pattern. That pinky mauve which goes so well with blue chintzes should be in colors of mauve and blue, and a white paper on which sweet peas are the note of color would harmonize well. With a couch and large, comfortable chairs, a bureau, a small table and a bookcase of satinwood or of inlaid mahogany the room would be luxuriously dainty and restful. Another boudoir where the deep chintz covered chairs and settee rests upon a white Bokhara carpet with notes of dim red and black is considered charming. The walls are of a warm sage green and the curtains and window seating of that shade of red which seems to have faded to a sober pinkness. There are shelves full of books and a table with a bowl of flowers. On the mantelpiece and china shelf there are curios from all over the world. A few photographs and old etchings adorn the walls. The woodwork is of deep chestnut. This boudoir achieves what a boudoir should always do, an expression of its owner.

Ideal Fabric.

Silk serge is one of the ideal fabrics for the all-around coat, and there is a new sort of crepe de chine with a thread or two of worsted in it that is to be reckoned with. Both are light of weight, very durable, come in a most satisfactory range of colors, and have sufficient body to afford protection from early fall breezes Lined and interlined, they will be used through the winter for dress coats and suits as well.

A SHORT COAT.



Little coats such as this are generally made of the same material as the skirt with which they are worn. It has a wrapped seam over the shoulder to edge of basque both front and back. The revers and cuffs are faced with plain silk.

Straw hat, trimmed with feathers.

Materials required: 2¼ yards 48 inches wide, 3½ yards silk 22 inches wide for lining.

CHANGE IN SILK FASHIONS

This Winter Will Find Women Wearing Gros-Grain of Their Grandmothers' Days.

Dame Rumor whispers that there is to be a change in silk fashions, and this winter will find women wearing the gros-grain of their grandmothers' days, and those women who can afford them stiff brocades heavy with threads of gold and metal, such as were used long ago and revived for the coronation. Worth, by the way, has taken a great fancy to these fabrics and we may expect to find many of his wonderful creations developed from these rare and beautiful materials.

Ottoman silks, says the worthy dame, will be used again, this time principally as collar facings and revers, cream white, deep yellow and coronation red being the favorites in color, any of which will be stunning with a navy or black serge suit.

Uncut velvets, too, so soft that they almost resemble a ribbed silk, are appearing over the horizon. These in Paris are called "velours epingles." Silks, velvets and velveteens, in fact, all the heavy old fashioned materials are in the foreground, so much so that one wonders if women are returning to the day of hair cloth and the fashionable ambition that one's gown must stand alone.

Tulle Guimpes.

The new guimpes, yokes and other accessories that are made to build up low gowns are of white French tulle, which is exceedingly thin, yet durable. It is made double and is untrimmed

MISS SUSAN GLASPELL'S DOG

Voila the Original of the Puppies in Her Story The Visioning.

Miss Susan Glaspell, the author, has a dog, which fact is of more importance than might at first appear. For in her new novel, The Visioning, are introduced two frolicsome puppies named Pourquoi and N'est-ce-pas. And there are no two more real characters in the whole book than Why and Ain't It, to use their names in English form.

It was Miss Glaspell's own dog, a Bohemian beast, that inspired the creation of The Visioning's twin puppy clowns. The real dog also has a French name, Voila. When its owner bought it, over in Paris, she wanted at first to name it Raspail, both in memory of the boulevard on which she lived and as a sympathetic cognomen for a sensitive souled Parisian dog. But her family objected. They could not see their way clear to shouting, "Come Raspail! Raspail! Raspail!" So Miss Glaspell compromised on Voila.

Voila has vagaries. It is a wanderer. It is a collie, and a collie, it evidently thinks, ought to be afield. Whenever it feels that way, away Voila goes. Fortunately it wears a collar with Miss Glaspell's name and address. She has come to think nothing of such a phone message as this:

"Hello! Is dis Miss Glaspell! Vell, dis is der bartender bei Hans Bummelransen's saloon. No, no, vait! I didn't got der wrong phone number. I choost vant to say I got here your dog. Vill you come for him?"

Then the author of The Visioning has to drop chapter plans and seek out Herr Bummelransen's place with sorrow—and a dollar. But were it not so there might never have been a N'est-ce-pas and a Pourquoi.

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 28 K, Boston.

Some Shakespeare Statistics.

A Shakespearean enthusiast with a turn for statistics has discovered that the plays contain 106,007 lines and 814,780 yords. "Hamlet" is the longest play, with 3,930 lnies, and the "Comedy of Errors" the shortest, with 1,777 lines. Altogether the plays contain 1,227 characters, of which 157 are females. The longest part is that of Hamlet. The part with the longest word in it is that of Costard in "Love's Labor Lost," who tells Moth that he is "not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus."

Leading a Dog's Life.

To Farm Out Copper Lands.

A party of Houghton capitalists have under consideration the establishment at a point on the Copper Range railroad south of Houghton a 600-acre experimental farm. The lands have already been secured, but are at present heavily timbered.

Steps will be taken during the coming winter to cut the timber and early next spring the stumps will be removed and the land made ready for cultivation. It is hardly probable that crops will be planted before 1913, but the enterprise when established will prove one of the biggest from an agricultural standpoint in the copper country.—Michigan Manufacturer.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

If that could be accomplished by calling an extra session every citizen in the Northern Minnesta should be heartily in favor of having one.

A Neighborly Act.

The latter part of last week Sever Grothe, Sam Lovaas, R. O. Gorden, Carl Magnell, Charley Johnson, Ole Reiersgaard and Charley Jensen, seven of the big hearted and whole souled farmers of the town of Mayfield gathered at the home of John Rothsten, one of their neighbors, who has been sick for some time and confined to his home, and unable to attend to his farm work, and cut and stacked twenty-five acres of flax in good shape for him, besides doing other things to help him along during his inability to attend to his work.

Such neighborly acts as these in a farming community shows that the farmers of that section are alive to the welfare of their neighbors and shows that they are never to busy with their own work but what they can stop and help a sick and needy neighbor along in his adversity.

GARDNER ADVISES

He Tells Limekiln Club Where Danger Lies.

UNSAFE TO BE TOO HONEST.

Man Who Swears Off on Bad Habits on New Year's Immediately Begins to Encounter Trouble—Truthfulness Not an Asset In Trading Mules.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.]

"I HEV to announce dis eavenin'," said Brother Gardner at the last meeting of the Limekiln club, "dat Brudder Cumalong Jones am lyin' sick at home an' dat he has appealed to dis club fur help to tide him ober. De secretary has bin instructed to tote him up a five dollar bill. an' when dat's gone we shan't see him suffer.

"Brudder Jones am one of de seben or eight millyun pussons in de United Staits who made sartin resolves on New Y'ar's day, an' I has bin watchin' his case wid interest. He am fo'ty-two y'ars ole, an' his character may be quoted as fa'r to medium—dat is, he am an alverage man, jest like de rest of us. When I l'arned from his own lips dat he was gwine to sw'ar off on New Y'ar's day, I struggled wid him, but he was sot in his ways, an' I couldn't move him.

KICKED FOR HIS HUMILITY.

"Brudder Jones got up in de mawnin' of dat fateful day an' resolved to be a kinder husband. Mrs. Jones am a woman who has got to be kept down by bulldozin'. De minit her husband took a new tack she bobbed off an' run him in debt sebenteen dollars, an' den cum home an' cracked his head wid de rollin' pin.

Being a Better Neighbor.

"Brudder Jones took a long breff an' resolved to be a better naybur. De result was dat inside of a week, he couldn't find his snow shovel, wheelbarrer, market basket, clothesline, flatirons, wash b'iler, kerosene can or umbrella, an' twenty-two different pussons had got mad at him bekase he had shet down on deir borrowin' any mo' tea an' sugar.

"Brudder Jones stood up straight an resolved to be an honest man. On de werry next day he found 'leben dollars on de street an' handed it ober to a policeman, an' of co'se dat policeman put it right down in his pocket an' sized Brudder Jones up fur a fule. On de next day he went an' paid a debt which was twenty-two y'ars ole an' den found out dat his creditor had dun forgot all about it twenty-one y'ars ago.

"Brudder Jones had occashunally b'n playin' de races when he had a dead suah thing. He riz up an' resolved to play no mo'. In de co'se of a few days a feller cum to him wid a p'inter whar he could hev got fo'ty fur one. He had $10 in cash, but he had gone outer de bettin' business. 'Stead of makin' a clean $400 on dat hoss he didn't make a red.

Danger In Humble Attitude.

"Brudder Jones used to be a bad man fur white folkses to step on. He knowed he had rights, an' he dared maintain 'em. De man who pushed him off de platform of a street kyar or elbowed him into de gutter had to 'pologize or take a clip on de ear. On de fust of de y'ar he resolved to take a mo' humble attitood, an' what was de result? In de co'se of a week he was frowed down ober sixteen times an' received 'bout a dozen kicks. He found a thousand or more people jest a-waitin' fur somebody wid a humble attitood to come along.

"Brudder Jones, as some of yo' know, was in de habit of chewin' terbacker an' smokin' a pipe an' hevin' a glass of beer occashunally. He resolved to economize. He went around chewin' hemp an' jute an' smokin' shavin's an' splinters, an' when water wasn't handy he took snow instead. In ten days he lost eight pounds of fat an' got so farnal cranky dat his own dog wouldn't wag its tail for him. Dat crankiness led up to a bout wid Brudder Waydown Bebee, an' Brudder Jones was a licked man befo' he knowed what was gwine on.

Swearing to Let Off Steam.

"Brudder Jones used to sw'ar. On New Y'ar's day he swore he would sw'ar no mo'. What am de result? Dar am a sort of sissin' an' steamin' an' bilin' continually gwine on down in his mind wid no escape valve to let off de pressure, an' he am nervous, irritable an' can't stay sot down in a cheer ober two minits at a time. He

HE LIVED THERE ALL RIGHT.

Father Got a Side Light on Son's College Habits.

ARTHUR LEFEVRE, the well known Texas author, said in Victoria apropos of the Texas prohibition campaign:

"That reminds me of a happening at the University of Virginia during my student days in '84.

"There was a Baltimore freshman at the varsity whose father got several letters about his boy's wild ways—about his fondness for peach and honey and such like heavy drinks. These letters grieved the old man to the heart. He wrote to the freshman and in reply got a general denial of all the charges.

"Evidence, however, continued to pour in, and finally the father decided on a secret journey to Charlottesville. He timed himself to arrive late at night. It was, in fact, 2 o'clock in the morning when he rang the bell of his son's boarding house.

"In response to his ring a woman in a yellow bathrobe appeared, lamp in hand.

"'What do you want?' she demanded, peering suspiciously into the darkness.

"'Madam,' said the amateur detective, 'is this the residence of ——?' and he mentioned his son's name.

"The woman's grin relaxed, and she answered indifferently:

"'Yes, he lives here. You can carry him right in.'"—Kansas City Star.

His Saving Perhaps.

The late Bill Barlow, editor of the Laramie Boomreang, believed no less in accurate than in humorous journalism.

"You can't achieve your effect," Barlow once said in an address in Douglas, Wyo., "unless you're accurate. Uncertainty and inaccuracy will spoil the finest effect, whether it be comic or whether it be pathetic.

"I remember a funeral in Tin Can. The Widow Wagg had lost her third in a poker dive. George Jones, D. D., delivered the funeral address, and an eloquent and moving address it was, but George, in his inaccurate way, hadn't made sure whether it was her third or her fourth that the widow Wagg was burying.

"Hence he spoiled a grand oration with these concluding words:

"'And now we commend to the divine mercy this widowed handmaid who hath been bereaved again and again and again'—

"George hesitated, frowned, and added, 'And perhaps again.'"—Human Life.

Didn't Think It Permissible.

"I think," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "that our minister is going too far. Did you hear his sermon last Sunday?"

"Yes," replied her hostess as she finished sealing a letter to her daughter, the Duchess of Ramshead. "Both me and Josiah put in fifty dollar bills when the contribution was taken."

"I don't like the habit he has fallen into of anathematizing the rich."

"Mercy! I hadn't heard about him doin' that. I didn't think anybody was allowed to anathematize people unless they had appendicitis or somethin'."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case."
A. L. Wilson, Sparta, Ill.
Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles'

are different from others. Many kinds of liver pills are "impossible" after one trial on account of their harshness. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills do not act by sheer force but in an easy, natural way, without griping or undue irritation. They are not habit forming.

If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return the price. Ask him.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre, of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake County is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this comming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

The funeral services were held last Sunday forenoon in the Catholic church in Lambert, of which faith she had always been a devoted follower, Father Roy officiating in the last sad rites. MY LADY OF THE NORTH

The Love Story of a Gray Jacket

by RANDALL PARRISH

Author of WHEN WILDERNESS WAS KING

ILLUSTRATIONS BY ARTHUR I. WILLIAMSON

COPYRIGHT BY A. C. McCLURG & CO. ENTERED AT STATIONERS' HALL, LONDON

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. Gen. Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important message to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sergt. Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. The two, after a wild ride, get within the lines of the enemy. In the darkness, Wayne is taken for a Federal officer who came to keep an appointment, ans a young lady on horseback is given in his charge. She is a northern girl and attempts to escape but fails. One of the horses succumbs and Craig goes through with the dispatches, while Wayne and My Lady of the North are left alone. They seek shelter in a hut and entering it in the dark a huge mastiff attacks Wayne. The girl shoots the brute just in time.

"The great ugly brute!" she exclaimed, looking at the form in the centre of the floor.

"He was certainly heavy enough to have been a bear,' I replied, clinching my teeth in pain, "and sufficiently savage."

I viewed her now for the first time clearly, and the memory will remain with me till I die. How distinctly that entire picture stands forth with the mist of all these years between! The low-ceiled room, devoid of all furniture save of the rudest and most primitive kind; the bare logs forming the walls, unrelieved in their rough ugliness, except as here and there sundry unshapely garments dangled from wooden pegs; the rough deal table, with a few cheap dishes piled upon one end of it; the dead dog lying across the earthen floor; and over all the leap of ruddy flame as the newly kindled fire gathered way, leaving weird shadows here and there, yet steadily forcing them back, and flooding the whole interior with a cheerly glow.

She had flung aside the blue and yellow cloak which, during the long hours of our night ride had so completely shrouded her, and stood before me dressed in some soft clinging stuff of a delicate brown color, so cut and fashioned as to most become her rounded, graceful form.

CHAPTER VII.

A Disciple of Sir Walter

Even as I gazed upon her, my admiration deeper than my pain, the arch expression of her face changed; there came a sudden rush of pity, of anxiety into those clear, challenging eyes, and with one quick step she drew nearer and bent above me.

"Oh, Captain Wayne," she cried, her warm, womanly heart conquering all prejudice, "you are badly hurt and bleeding. Why did you not tell me? Please let me aid you."

"I fear I must," I replied grimly. "I would gladly spare you, for indeed I do not believe my injury sufficiently serious to cause alarm, but I find I have only one arm I can use at present; the brute got his teeth into the other."

"Oh, believe me, I can do it." She spoke bravely, a sturdy ring of confidence in the voice, although at the thought her face paled. "I have been in the hospitals at Baltimore, and taken care of wounded soldiers. If there was only some water here!"

She glanced about, dreading the possibility of having to go forth into the night alone in search of a spring or well.

"I think you will find a pail on the bench yonder," I said, for from where I leaned against the wall I could see out into the shed. "It was doubtless left for the dog to drink from."

She came back with it, tearing down a cloth from off a peg in the wall as she passed, and then, wearing a resolute air of authority, knelt beside me, and with rapid fingers, flung back my jacket, unfastening the rough army shirt, and laid bare, so far as was possible, the lacerated shoulder.

"Forgive me,," she said anxiously, "but I fear I can never dress it in this way. We must remove your jacket and cut away the sleeve of your shirt."

At last the disagreeable task was accomplished, the wounded shoulder completely bared. Her face was deathly white now, and she shielded her eyes with her hand.

"Oh, what a horrible wound!" she exclaimed, almost sobbing. "How that great brute must have hurt you!"

"The wound is not so serious as it appears," I replied reassuringly, and glad myself to feel that I spoke the truth, "but I confess the pain is intense, and makes me feel somewhat faint. It was not so much the mere bite of the dog, but unfortunately he got his teeth into an old wound and tore it open."

"An old wound?"

"Yes; I received a Minie ball there at Gettysburg, and although the bullet was extracted, the wound never properly healed."

She performed her disagreeable task with all the tenderness of a sympathetic woman, and as she worked swiftly and deftly, made no attempt to conceal the tears clinging to her long lashes. Skilfully the deep, jagged gash was bathed out, and then as carefully bound up with the softest cloths she could find at hand The relief was great, and I felt, as I moved the shoulder, that saving the soreness it would probably not greatly bother me.

"Now you must lie back and rest," she said commandingly, as I attempted to thank her.

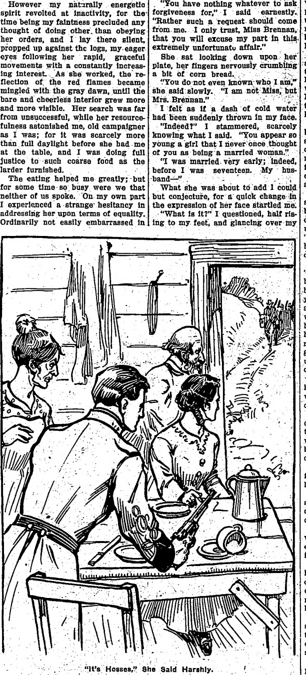
"As your nurse I command absolute quiet," striving to speak gaily. "See, the daylight is already here, and I mean to discover if this lone cabin contains anything which human beings can eat; I confess that I am nearly famished."

"A most excellent symptom, and I imagine your quest will not be wholly vain. To my eye that greatly resembles a slab of bacon hanging beside the chimney."

"It indeed is," she exclaimed, "and I feel as a shipwrecked seaman must on first beholding land."

However my naturally energetic spirit revolted at inactivity, for the time being my faintness precluded any thought of doing other than obeying her orders, and I lay there silent, propped up against the logs, my eager eyes following her rapid, graceful movements with a constantly increasing interest. As she worked, the reflection of the red flames became mingled with the gray dawn, until the bare and cheerless interior grew more and more visible. Her search was far from unsuccessful, while her resourcefulness astonished me, old campaigner as I was; for it was scarcely more than full daylight before she had me at the table, and I was doing full justice to such coarse food as the larder furnished.

The eating helped me greatly; but for some time so busy were we that neither of us spoke. On my own part I experienced a strange hesitancy in addressing her upon terms of equality. Ordinarily not easily embarrassed in feminine society, I felt in this instance a definite barrier between us, which prevented my feeling at ease. Now and then as we sat opposite each other, eating amid a silence most unpleasant, I would catch her eyes glancing across at me, but they were lowered instantly whenever I ventured to meet them. Finally I broke the stillness with a commonplace remark:



"It's Hosses," She Said Harshly.

"I presume your people will be greatly worried by this time over your mysterious disappearance."

A flush swept her throat and cheeks, but she did not lift her eyes from the plate. "Yes," she answered slowly, "Frank is doubtless searching for me long before this."

"Frank?" I asked, feeling glad of this opportunity to learn more of her relationships. "You forget, possibly, that your friends are strange to me. You refer to the gentleman who expected to meet you on the road?"

"To Major Brennan, yes."

There was nothing about the tone of her reply that invited me to press the inquiry further. One thing, however, was reasonably certain,—the man she called "Frank" could not be her father. I longed to ask if he was a brother, but the restraint of her whole manner repelled the suggestion.

"Did I understand that you have nursed in the Federal hospitals at Baltimore?" I questioned, more to continue the conversation than from any deep interest.

"Merely as a volunteer, and when the regular nurses were especially busy. Major Brennan was stationed there for some time when I first visited him, and I felt it my duty as a loyal woman to aid the poor fellows."

I remained silent, striving vainly to frame some innocent question which should solve for me the problem of who and what she was. Suddenly she spoke softly:

"Captain Wayne, I feel I owe you an apology for my unwarranted and unladylike conduct last night. I am very sure now that you are a gentleman, and will appreciate how bitterly I was tried, how deeply I have ever since regretted it."

It hurt her pride to say even this much, as I could tell by her downcast eyes and heaving bosom, and I hastened to relieve her embarrassment.

"You have nothing whatever to ask forgiveness for," I said earnestly. "Rather such a request should come from me. I only trust, Miss Brennan, that you will excuse my part in this extremely unfortunate affair."

She sat looking down upon her plate, her fingers nervously crumbling a bit of corn bread.

"You do not even known who I am," she said slowly. "I am not Miss, but Mrs. Brennan."

I felt as if a dash of cold water had been suddenly thrown in my face.

"Indeed?" I stammered, scarcely knowing what I said. "You appear so young a girl that I never once thought of you as being a married woman."

"I was married very early; indeed, before I was seventeen. My husband—"

What she was about to add I could but conjecture, for a quick change in the expression of her face startled me.

"What is it?" I questioned, half rising to my feet, and glancing over my shoulder toward the wall where her eyes were riveted.

"Something resembling a hand pushed aside the coat hanging yonder," she explained in low trembling tone, "and I thought I saw a face."

Believing it to be merely her overwrought nerves which were at fault, I sought to soothe her. "It was probably no more than a shadow," I said, crossing to her side of the table, to enable her better to feel the influence of my presence. "Let us be content to sit here by the door, for we should be taking too great a risk of discovery if we ventured into the open."

I had barely spoken these words and placed my fingers on her hand to lead her forward when the small door which opened into the shed was thrown back noisily, and two great shaggy dogs, the evident mates of the dead brute at our feet, leaped fiercely in. She shrank toward me with a sob of terror; but even as I drew a revolver from my belt, a man and a woman appeared almost simultaneously in that same opening.

"Down, Douglas! down, Roderick! Ha! 'There lies Red Murdock, stark and stiff!'—down, you brutes; you'll be dead yourselves sometime."

The man strode forward as he spoke, clubbing the frenzied brutes with the stock of the long rifle he carried.

"'Yelled on the view the opening pack,'" he quoted, as he distributed his blows impartially to right and left; "'rock, glen, and cavern paid them back.' Them thar be Scott's words, stranger, an' I reckon as how ol' Sir Walter knew whut he wus writin' 'bout. Stop thet blame youlin', you Roderick, er I'll take t'other end o' this gun ter ye."

He redoubled his efforts for peace, finally driving the rebellious beasts back into one corner, where they sat upon their haunches and eyed us wistfully.

"'Two dogs of black Saint Hubert's breed, unmatched for courage, breath, and speed,'" he exclaimed, wiping the perspiration from his face with the back of one hand and staring at us, 'specially the breath."

He was a fierce-looking little fellow, scarcely more than a half-grown boy in size, with round, red face full of strange wrinkles, and head as oddly peak-shaped as I ever looked upon. It went up exactly like the apex of a pear, while the upper portion was utterly bald. He formed a most remarkable contrast to the tall, rawboned, angular female who loomed up like a small mountain just behind him.

"I reckon as how you uns hed quite a bit of a scrap afore ye laid thet thar dorg out, stranger," he said, a half-angry tone lurking in his deep voice. "'The fleetest hound in all the North,' an' I'm durned if I jist likes ther way you uns makes yerselves et hum in this yere cabin."

"Shet up, Jed Bungay," cut in his better-half, sharply, and as she spoke she caught the little man unceremoniously by one arm, and thrusting him roughly to one side strode heavily forward until she paused in the centre of the room facing us with her arms akimbo.

"Now I'd jist like ter know," she said savagely, "who you uns be, a breakin' into a house, and a killin' a dorg, an' a eatin' up everything we uns got without so much as a sayin' 'by yer leave' er nuthin'. I reckon as how you uns don't take this yere cabin fer no tavern?"

"Madam," I said with a low bow, "it is misfortune, not desire, which has caused us to trespass upon your hospitality. We will very gladly pay you liberally for any damage done. I am an officer in the Confederate service, and the breaking down of our horses compelled us to take refuge here in order that this lady might not be exposed to danger from roving gangs of guerillas. The dog attacked us in the dark, and we killed him in order to save our lives."

"'The deep-mouthed bloodhound's heavy bay resounded up the rocky way,'" ejaculated Bungay with dancing eyes.

"Drat yer potry, Jed Bungay! ye dew make me tired fer suah." She turned back to us, and from her first words it was plainly evident she had been impressed with but one sentence of my labored explanation.

"Did you uns say as how ye'd pay fer whut ye et an' fer thet truck ye busted?" she asked doubtfully.

"Certainly, madam," and I took some money from my pocket as evidence of good faith. "What would you consider due you?"

The grim, set face relaxed slightly, while she permitted her husband to edge his way a little more into the foreground.

"Wal, stranger, I sorter reckon as how 'bout four bits 'ill squar' things—dorgs is mighty durn cheap hereabout enyhow. Give me ther four bits, mister, an' I reckon as how it 'll be all right."

I glanced at Mrs. Brennan, and the amused twinkle in her eyes led me to say heartily, "We had not entirely completed our meal, but imagined we saw ghosts."

"Ghosts!" He glanced around apprehensively,— "'On Heaven and on thy lady call, and enter the enchanted hall!' Wus ther ghosts ye saw over thar?" And he pointed toward the wall opposite.

I nodded.

"Then I sorter reckon as how Mariar and me wus them ghosts," he continued, grinning. "We sorter reckoned as how we wanted ter see who wus yere afore we come in. 'I'll listen till my fancy hears the clang of swords, the crash of spears.' These yere is tough times, stranger, in these parts, an' a man whut has ter pertect a lovely female hes got ter keep his eye skinned."

Maria sniffed contemptuously.

"Ye're no great shakes at a pertectin' o' me, Jed Bungay. Now you sit down thar an' begin ter fill up. I reckon as how ther Cap an' his gal will kinder jine with us fer manners."

She seated Jed with such extreme vigor that I looked for the chair to collapse beneath him as he came down, but the little man, not in the least daunted, picked up his knife and fork with a sigh of relief.

"'O woman! in our hours of ease uncertain, coy, and hard to please,'" he murmured. "'Come, sit down, stranger; 'sit down an' share a soldier's couch, a soldier's fare.' Not as I'm a sojer," he hastened to explain, "but thet's how it is in ther book. Say, old woman, kint ye kinder sker up some coffee fer we uns—leastwise whut us Confeds call coffee?"

Without much difficulty I induced Mrs. Brennan to draw her chair once more to the table, and I sat down beside her.

"You are Confederate, then?" I asked, curious to know upon which side his sympathies were enlisted in the struggle.

He glanced warily at my gray jacket, then his shrewd, shifty eyes wandered to the blue and yellow cavalry cloak lying on the floor.

"Wal, I jist don't know, Cap," he said cautiously, continuing to eat as he talked, "as I'm much o' anything in this yere row. First ther durned gray-backs they come snoopin' up yere, an' run off all my horgs; then ther blame blue-bellies come 'long an' cut down every lick o' my corn fodder, so thet I'll be cussed if I ain't 'bout ready ter fight either side. Anyhow I ain't did no fightin' yit worth talkin' 'bout, fer Mariar is pow'ful feared I'd get hurt."

Maria regarded him scornfully.

"Hiding out, I suppose?"

"Wal, 't ain't very healthful fer us ter be stayin' et hum much o' ther time, long with that thar Red Lowrie, an' Jim Hale, an' the rest o' thet cattle 'round yere."

"Guerillas pretty thick now in the mountains?"

'Wal, I dunno; I heerd as they wus doin' somethin' down by ther brick church, but thar's no great shakes of 'em jist 'round yere. I reckon as how they knows 'nough ter keep 'way from Jed Bungay—I'd pitch 'em 'far as ever peasant pitched a bar.'"

"You have no fear of them, then?"

"Whut, me?" The little man sat bolt upright, and glared fiercely across the table as though he would resent an insult. "I jist tell ye Cap, I reckon thar ain't no guerilla a goin' ter poke his nose 'round yere 'less he's a lookin' fer sudden death; thar's mighty few o' 'em ain't heerd o' Jed Bungay— Whut in thunder's ther matter with yer gal?"

He stopped suddenly, and stared at her; but before I could turn about in my chair one of the great dogs began to growl savagely, and Maria sprang forward and cuffed the surly brute into rebellious silence.

"It's hosses," she said harshly. "Likely as not it's Red's gang. Now, Jed Bungay, yere's two lovely females fer ye ter pertect."

As I hastily sprang to my feet I caught a fleeting glimpse out of the partially opened door. Down the steep of the hill road there was slowly moving toward us on foot a small party of perhaps a dozen men, so variously clothed as to make it evident they were irregulars. Just ahead of them, but on horseback, two others were even then turning into the narrow path that led to the house, attracted probably by the smoke which streamed from the chimney-top.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mrs. Bungay Defends Her Hearthstone.

A hand pressing hard upon my arm brought back my scattered senses with a rush. It was Mrs. Brennan who stood there, her face whitened by anxiety, her eyes peering anxiously through the opening of the door.

"Surely those men are not soldiers, Captain Wayne!" she exclaimed. "They wear uniforms of both armies."

"No doubt they are guerillas," I answered, drawing her back from where she might be seen in their approach. "We must find hiding if possible, for you shall never fall into such hands. Bungay!"

I turned toward where the little giant had been sitting, but he was not to be seen. However, the sound of my voice aroused Maria to a full sense of our danger, nor was she a woman to hesitate in such emergency. With a single stride she crossed the narrow room, caught the white-faced hero by the collar of his shirt, dragged him ignominiously forth from beneath the table where he had sought refuge, shook him as she would shake a toy dog, until his teeth rattled, and then flung him out of the door leading into the back shed. It was done so expeditiously that I could only gasp.

"Now inter ther hole with ye, Jed Bungay—you an' yer dorgs," she panted furiously. "An' you uns foller him. I reckon I'm able ter handle thet lot out thar, even if it should be Red Lowrie and his gang."

Catching firm hold of Mrs. Brennan's hand I sprang down the single step and closed the door tight behind us. Jed had scrambled to his feet, and rubbing himself vigorously with one hand, utilized the other to drag outward a rough cupboard, which appeared to be a portion of the house itself. As it swung open there was revealed behind it a fair-sized opening extending into the face of the hill. It was a most ingenious arrangement, doubtless finding frequent use in those troublesome times. Its presence partially explained how Jed had thus far escaped the conscription officer. Into this hole we entered one at a time, and when the heavy cupboard had been silently drawn back into place, found ourselves enveloped in such total darkness as to make any movement a dangerous operation. I felt the clasp of my companion's hand tighten, and knew that her whole form was trembling from intense excitement.

TOWN IS BEING REBUILT

Flood of Waters Has Not Taken Black River Falls, Wis., From the Map.

More than a million dollars absolutely disappearing in the short time of two hours was the toll collected by the waters at Black River Falls, Wisconsin. Even the residents of the town could not realize what it meant until the lake formed by the Hatfield dam was dry, and the rush of waters had passed on to the Mississippi.

Just out of reach, of the flood the business men and residents of the place watched the waters carry away the buildings that represented the homes of business enterprises which it had taken years of effort to build. Among the larger industries seemingly wiped out within a few minutes was the plant of Coles Carbolisalve. This plant, along with others that suffered a like fate, is today being rebuilt, and the business men of Black River Falls promise that a better town shall replace the one destroyed by the raging floods, and that just as rapidly as men and material can put it together. It is catastrophies like the breaking of the Hatfield dam that demonstrate the American spirit.

They're All About Tailors.

"All criticism," said Professor Brander Matthews in one of his brilliant Columbia lectures, "is, to a certain extent, personal and biased." He paused and smiled. "The Tailor and Cutter, a weekly paper," he resumed, "said in a recent leading article:

"'Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," Meredith's "Evan Harrington" and Kingsley's "Alton Locke" will be great classics when the ephemeral novels of today will have long since perished.'"

Successful Economy in Baking.

Most housewives assume when they buy a big can of baking powder at a low price that they have been economical. They have to a slight extent—but when they use that cheap "big can" baking powder, and find it so uneven in quality, or so unreliable that the baking fails, there isn't so much economy in it after all, for the wasted materials far outweigh the few cents saved in the price.

SUCCESSFUL economy, is in the reach of every woman that desires it. She has only to order Calumet Baking Powder, and use it according to instructions. Then, she will achieve economy. For not only does Calumet sell at a reasonable price—25c per pound—but it is so carefully made by experienced chemists that failure is impossible. Only the best materials are used and the proportions of the ingredients are so exact and so uniform that EVERY baking comes from the oven, light, sweet, and beautifully raised. Calumet guarantees you against failure, and that is what constitutes real economy in baking.

Why not use Calumet, a baking powder that you can always rely upon? You can get no better at any price, for at the World's Pure Food Exposition, Calumet received the Highest Award.

A Broken Bone.

Your first duty, after notifying a surgeon, is to provide support for the injured member in the form of an improvised splint. Flat pieces of board as broad, if possible, as the limb and slightly longer than the broken bone, canes, umbrellas, in fact anything that will accomplish your end may be used. In adjusting these, pad with any soft material that is at hand; straw, leaves or cushions made of grass may be used. Avoid any pressure on the injured part, cover it with a cloth, and keep wet with clean, cold water.—Woman's Home Companion.

Grapefruit Greenery.

Effective greenery for the dining room table may be made by planting the seeds of grapefruit. Sow them thickly, and in two weeks, if the earth is good and has been kept moist in a warm place, the little shoots appear. Two weeks more and the leaves unfold, and very soon there is a mass of rich, glossy green, which is not affected by gas of furnace heat.—Suburban Life.

Modern Pharmacy.

"We have a very fine course in pharmacy," says the president of the college to the father of the student who is entering.

"I'm glad to hear that. My boy expects to become a druggist.'

Well, we give special lectures on soap, stamps, cigars, perfumery, soda water, candy, city directories, telephone books and stationery."—Life.

SHIFT

If Your Food Fails to Sustain You, Change.

One sort of diet may make a person despondent, depressed and blue and a change to the kind of food the body demands will change the whole thing.

A young woman from Phila. says:

"For several years I kept in a rundown, miserable sort of condition, was depressed and apprehensive of trouble. I lost flesh in a distressing way and seemed in a perpetual sort of dreamy nightmare. No one serious disease showed, but the 'all-over' sickness was enough.

"Finally, between the doctor and father, I was put on Grape-Nuts and cream, as it was decided I must have a nourishing food that the body could make use of.

"The wonderful change that came over me was not, like Jonah's gourd, the growth of a single night, yet it came with a rapidity that astonished me.

"During the first week I gained in weight, my spirits improved, and the world began to look brighter and more worth while.

"And this has continued steadily, till now, after the use of Grape-Nuts for only a few weeks, I am perfectly well, feel splendidly, take a lively interest in everything, and am a changed person in every way." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

TIN MINING in the AMERICAS

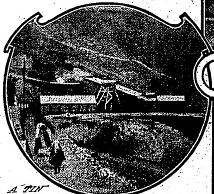
WHETHER tin, as such, was known to the ancient world is a mooted question. Most probably it was not, although the alloy of copper and tin called bronze was used ages before that time whereof the earliest legends run and loosely called the dawn of history. It is common to say that the age of bronze followed the age of stone and that both are prehistoric. Unscientific as is such a marshaling of "ages," and untrue if applied to man the world over, it yet presents a picture something near the known facts about that part of the ancient world which lies around the Mediterranean sea. Bronze was no doubt the first metal here used by man, just emerging from the lowest state of savagery. Its superiority for the forming of weapons and tools over flints, bones, and fire-hardened sticks was manifest. Whence the European savage derived it, by what process the metals were separated from the ore, whether the alloy of the two metals was made by man or fortuitously occurred in nature, are interesting subjects, but not within the scope of this article. The fact is, however, that had pure tin been the first metal known it would have received but scanty consideration from primitive man; for, except for its weight, which would have rendered it suitable for a mace or club head, its want of strength and softness is such that for his uses it would have been inferior to flint, bone or even fire-hardened wood.

The remarkable property which certain metals have, and among these tin is one of the most conspicuous, that when alloyed with another metal the compound possesses a quality of strength, hardness, malleability, or resonancy superior to that of either of the metals entering into the compound is what in its first use gave value to the union of copper and tin called bronze. At a later period in the world's history the property which tin has of not tarnishing, or rather of being in a high degree resistent to the decomposing action of air, water and the common acids and alkalis, was taken advantage of in the use of the metal as a coating for harder and stronger but more easily affected metals, like iron or steel. Tin alone has even now but few industrial uses, principally in the making of certain pharmaceutical instruments and tin foil. For almost every other purpose for which tin is suitable an alloy of tin and copper, or tin and zinc, or tin and lead, or steel, iron, or brass coated with tin, is more suitable, and it is these uses of tin, as an alloy or as a coating, which give it its real value and its place in the arts and industries. Just as primitive man would have found but little use for pure iron, so civilized man might easily dispense with it were it not for its use as an alloy or as a preservative coating. As such it is of enormous use to the world and easily ranks among the four or five most valuable metals. Of the so-called common metals it is the least widely distributed and the most costly.

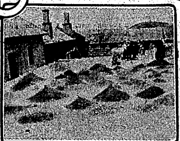
A BOLIVIAN ORE CARRIER

BARS OF TIN READY FOR SHIPMENT FROM BOLIVIA

BEGINNING OF A NEW TUNNEL IN A TIN MINE



A TIN MINE IN THE ORURO DISTRICT of BOLIVIA



TIN ORE FROM THE HUAYRA MINE, POTOSI, BOLIVIA

The value of the imports of tin into the United States as given by the bureau of statistics is now about $30,000,000 a year. In 1907 it amounted to nearly $43,000,000. This includes ore, bar and block tin, and some of the manufactures thereof, and also tin plate, but does not include the ordinary alloys of tin, such as bronze, pewter, gun metal, and bell metal, nor does it include a very large importation of manufactured articles in which tin is a considerable and sometimes the major element of value.

For 1909 the figures were as follows:

Article.	Quantity (pounds.)	Value.
Tin plates	18,115,771	$ 3,230,659
Cassiterite	26,661	3,134
Bars, blocks, pigs, etc.	91,133,413	26,007,216
Foil	....	43,612
Manufactures	....	60,251
Total	....	$29,344,872

This exceeds largely the imports of any other metals except iron and steel—gold and silver not being considered true imports. If the total value of tin imported into the United States could be given, including all manufactured articles and alloys at the proportionate value of the tin therein contained, the amount would probably be over $40,000,000 for the year 1909.

About one-fourth of the tim imported is used for the making of tin plates, sheet steel dipped in tin, and the bulk of the remainder goes into the alloys of which there are scores of varieties containing different proportions of tin with copper, zinc, lead, nickel, silver and antimony.

Metallic tin is rarely found in nature and then never in commercial quantities. Fine grains of the metal sometimes occur in the gold ores of several localities, principally in Bolivia and in Siberia. There are a number of tin compounds, oxides, chlorides and sulphides, but there is but one ore of any considerable importance in tin mining, and that is the binoxide of tin or stannic acid called tinstone or cassiterite. Tinstone is of various colors—brown, gray, yellow, red or black—ordinarily due to the presence of peroxide of iron or manganese. In its pure state the ore is nearly colorless. It is a remarkably hard and heavy mineral, so hard that it will often strike fire from flint, and of specific gravity 6.7, about equal in weight to antimony, and not much less than cast iron.

Tin mining bears many resemblances to gold mining. Like gold tin is found either in veins, running through older rock formations, or in alluvial deposits which represent the remains of the same veins washed down from the hills after the disintegration of the surrounding rock through the action of air and water and cold and heat. Unlike gold tin occurs in a compound, cassiterite, while gold is generally more or less pure. The tin mines of Cornwall in England and of Bolivia are mostly vein deposits, while those of the Malay Peninsular, the Dutch Islands and elsewhere are alluvial.

The following figures give approximately the world's production of tin in 1908. Quantities are given in short tons (2,000 pounds), and the reduction from ore in tin ingots is made:

	Short Tons.
Straits Settlements	67,760
Bolivia	19,040
Island of Banka	12,880
Australia	6,552
Cornwall	6,048
Island of Billiton	2,464
South Africa	1,904
Total	116,648

The Socavon de la Virgen, San Jose, Huanuni, Negro Pabellon, Morococala and Antiquera mines, now rich tin mines, were in the old Spanish colonial days rich silver mines, tin being held of such little value that it was rarely extracted. The San Jose mine is about two miles from Oruro. It is both a silver and a tin mine, but the tin is of the greater importance. The Antiquera mines are near Poopo, on the Antofagasta and Oruro railway. Huanuni is said to contain the richest tin mines in the department of Oruro. These are located about fifteen miles from the station of Machacamaca of the Antofagasta railway. The Cerro de Pozacani, in which these mines are situated, arises to the height of about 10,000 feet—a rough cone in shape. It is laced by innumerable lodes and veins, some of which are worked on a large scale. The Cataricagua vein produced in 1905 ore equivalent to 1,192 metric tons. The vein runs from two to eight feet in width and is from 20 to 50 per cent. cassiterite.

The Bolivian ores are ground and concentrated for the pure cassiterite. In this form is sand called tin barilla; it is exported. A very considerable part of the valuable oxide is lost in treatment.

The mines of Negro Pabellon, Morococala and Vilacollo are about ten miles south of Huanuni, near Paria. The principal lode of the Negro Pabellon is about three feet in width and is crossed by several smaller veins, with here and there rich pockets of cassiterite. The barilla obtained from this ore is exceptionally rich, containing more than 70 per cent. metallic tin. Concentrated Bolivian ores as a rule run about 60 per cent., or a little less, metallic tin. In the Morococala mine the vein is from twelve to fifteen feet thick, of a good grade of ore.

Berenguela, in the province of Cochabamba, has an exceptionally high grade of ore. In colonial days Berenguela was a rich silver mine. The two ores are in distinct veins.

The tin mines of the northern field of Bolivia are in two groups—Huayna Potosi and Milluni, north of the Great Plateau. Included in the Inquisivi fields, are the mines of Quimsa Cruces, Araca and Santa Vela Cruz.

The first area is at the southeast end of Lake Titicaca, in the mountains some 13,000 feet above sea level. During colonial days these ruins were silver mines, but silver now in this locality is but little more than a tradition, for the only mining now carried on is tin mining. There are a great number of small mining properties in this locality, but the principal output comes from the French company, which owns the Carmen mine of the Huayna-Posoti and the Milluni mine.

The Quimsa Cruz or Tres Cruces district of Inquisivi is one of the most promising of the Bolivian fields. It is in the heart of the Cordillera Real, which here rises over 17,000 feet above sea level. These fields are about equidistant from La Paz and Oruro, but much more accessible to the latter. The principal tin property in the district is the group of Monte Blanco mines, owned by a Chilean company. These mines are on the western slope of the Cerro Atarani. The quarters and mine office of the company are at an elevation of 14,800 feet and some of the lodes mined are 1,500 feet higher up the mountain slope. Among these lodes in the Santa Fe, which outcrops for about 1,000 feet, with an average width of from six to nine feet. The ore runs about 12 per cent. pure cassiterite. In pockets the mineral is found nearly pure. In the neighborhood of the Monte Blanco mines are the mines of Barosso Cota, Santa Rosa, La Florencia, Copacabanca and others.

About twenty miles south of Monte Blanco is the Santa Vela Cruz field. The most important property in this field is that of the Concordia Tin company, an English corporation. The location is not quite so high as Monte Blanco. Here the best mining methods are being adopted and the property will be without doubt a large producer, although not yet fully developed.

South of Santa Vela Cruz are the fields of Sayaquiri, a new field in which some prospecting has been done which promises large results, and Colquiri, formerly a silver field, but now developing into a tin-producing district.

The northern tin fields of Bolivia have in the past suffered much for lack of good transportation. This condition is being greatly improved with the recent railroad development in the country.

Another Change of the Times

Nurses and parents do not frighten children so much nowadays with foolish stories as they did a generation or two ago. Children are not terrified into "being good." But in the remoter country places this objectionable and dangerous form of tyranny still lingers. In parts of Scotland the bodach still has his terrors for youngsters. The chief of these specters is "The Son of Platterpool from gray spike, silken spike, great caterpillar." There is almost a Shakespearean suggestion about the name. This terrific bugbear peers in at windows, flattens his wicked face against the pane, sharpens his teeth with murderous distinctness, and carries away crying or noisy children in a twinkling. But he never enters a house without being called. The threat to summon him is enough, and the unhappy child goes to bed quietly, to brood over nameless terrors in the dark.—London Chronicle.

Use for the Crickets

The cricket has had other uses besides that of affording an excuse for argument. In China crickets were frequently trained for fighting purposes and brisk betting went on over cricket matches. In Florence, too, crickets in cages were hawked about the streets on Ascension day to be bought and let loose about the houses in order to insure a year of good luck. Theophile Gautier mentions how the people of Madrid kept pet crickets in small cages decorated with glass ornaments. Also, presumably, to bring good luck.

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 12 K, Boston.

PASTOR ACCUSED

CLARENCE RICHESON OF CAMBRIDGE, MASS., CHARGED WITH DEATH OF AVIS LINNELL.

CYANIDE OF POTASSIUM

Music Student Dies as Result of Poison —Clergyman Taken From Home of Fashionable Heiress He Is About to Wed.

Boston, Mass. — Arrested in the home of Miss Violet Edmands, the heiress he was to have wed in less than a fortnight, Rev. Clarence Vigil Thompson Richeson, pastor of the fashionable Immanuel Baptist church of Cambridge, was formally charged with the murder of Avis Linnell, who believed she was to have been the minister's bride. Miss Linnell, instead, was buried and the wedding gown, which a score of her friends had helped her fashion in anticipation of her wedding, became her funeral shroud. Richeson was arraigned at a preliminary hearing and pleaded not guilty. The case was continued to Oct. 31, the day on which he was to have married Miss Edmunds.

Trusting implicitly in the love she bore the clergyman, Miss Linnell, in her rooms in the local Y. W. C. A., swallowed what she had been told was a harmless headache potion. In five minutes she died, killed by cyanide of potassium, the dealiest drug known.

The warrant for the formal arrest of the preacher was issued by Judge Duff of the criminal court, after William Hahan, a druggist of Newton, Mass., had positively identified Richeson as the man to whom he sold a quantity of cyanide of potassium last week.

Two Possible Motives for Crime.

The police ascribe two possible motives for the crime, either one of which would make the case one almost unparalleled in American criminal annals.

The first is that, fearing that Miss Linnell might interfere with his approaching marriage to Miss Edmunds, the heiress, Richeson set about to kill the girl; the other is that he purchased the drug for Miss Linnell in order that she might end her own life when she learned the man she loved was to become the husband of another.

Gossip connected Rev. M. Richeson's name with what was at first believed to have been the suicide of the girl. He answered nothing, but sought refuge in the palatial Brookline home of Moses Grant Edmands, whose daughter, worth $250,000, and the heiress to her father's great fortune, was to have become Richeson's bride in two weeks. The wedding was to have been solemnized on Oct. 31, in the First Baptist church at Newton Center. More than seven hundred invitations to friends of the popular clergyman and his rich bride-to-be had been mailed. They have been recalled.

Pretty little Miss Linnell, a student at the Boston Conservatory of Music, believed she was to marry Rev. Mr. Richeson. One the day of her death she had read in the Boston papers the announcement of Rev. Mr. Richeson's engagement to Miss Violet Edmands, daughter of Moses Grant Edmands, a resident of fashionable Brookline, a Boston suburb. A few hours later she was found dead, a victim of cyanide poisoning, in the bathroom of the Y. W. C. A. At first the police believed she had killed herself; later developments, they maintain, indicate that she took the drug in the belief that it was a medicine.

Police Judge Murray has issued a warrant charging Richeson with first degree murder.

REBELS BEAT IMPERIALS

BATTLE AT KWANG SHUI VICTORY FOR REVOLUTIONISTS.

Revolutionists Now Control Thirty-six Mountain Passes, and Hankow Peking Railroad.

San Francisco, Cal. — The main army of the Chinese government, under War Minister Yin Tchang, numbering 20,000 men, was totally defeated at Kwang Shui, Hu Peh province, according to a cable received by the Chinese Free Press of this city. The rebel army of 15,000 under Li Yueng captured artillery, baggage train and ammunition of the imperial army, who retreated to Sho Got.

The cable stated that the imperial forces were completely routed and abandoned their supply trains during the retreat. The mountain passes at Kwang Shui, of great strategic value, now are held by the revolutionists, giving them control of the Hankow-Peking railroad, over which the imperial troops are being moved.

Governor Sun Po Kee of the province of Shan Tung is reported to have escaped death and to be in hiding in Ching Tao. Revolutionists burned the governor's residence at Tsi Nan Fu, and the majority of the imperial troops went over to the revolutionists.

AVIATOR KILLED

EUGENE ELY SOON SUCCUMBS FOLLOWING 50-FOOT FALL AT MACON, GEORGIA.

DARING DIP WAS FATAL

Seemed to Lose Grip on the Lever.—Accident Witnessed by 8,000 Persons.—Home Was in Davenport.

Macon, Ga. — Eugene Ely, aviator, whose parents live at Davenport, Iowa, was killed at the state fair grounds when his machine failed to rise from a sensational dip and plunged with him fifty feet to the ground. He fell in the presence of nearly 8,000 persons to the middle of the inclosure of the race track, after almost clearing the machine by a desperate leap when he realized his peril. His body was broken in a score of places and he died a few minutes later. As he was completing the circuit he made a dip, seemingly to startle the thousands beneath him.

The machine shot down with tremendous velocity and the crowd applauded, thinking the aviator would rise, as he had done many times before. But Ely seemed to lose his grip on the lever, for the machine continued its downward plunge to the earth and he attempted to rise from his seat. In fact he released the lever altogether and half jumped, barely clearing the aeroplane as it crashed to the ground. The machine was demolished and Ely struck with terrific force.

Ely left his wife in New York two weeks ago to come to Macon to give a series of flights for the Georgia state fair in his Curtis biplane. He had been giving spectacular flights here for eight days, going up on one occasion in a rainstorm.

Before making his ascent Ely told his attendants that he feared something would happen and asked them to notify his wife immediately if it did. Ely's body was shipped to his former home at Davenport, for interment.

Ely was the first man to alight on the deck of a warship with an aeroplane. During an aviation meet in San Mateo county, Cal., Ely flew from the aviation camp to San Francisco, about twenty miles, and alighted on the deck of the cruiser Pennsylvania, anchored in San Francisco bay.

After holding a reception on board the warship, Ely flew from the ship back to the aviation camp.

Previous to this time, Ely had made a flight from the deck of a warship anchored in Chesapeake bay. Although he struck the water as he left the ship he managed to reach shore.

Ely was the only son of a prominent Iowa attorney. He first attracted attention as an aviator about two years ago in Portland, Ore.

DEITZ TRIAL IN NOVEMBER.

Wife and Children of the "Defender" Will Be Prosecuted.

Hayward, Wisconsin. — S. J. Williams, district attorney of Sawyer county, who tried the case against John Deitz here last spring, has returned from a conference with the attorneys for Mrs. John Deitz and Leslie, Clarence and Elmyra, regarding the criminal cases pending against them. Williams says that inasmuch as the Deitz family is using every opportunity and means to give the officers and people of Sawyer county a bad name, and are saying the officials of this county dare not prosecute them he thinks it only just that they be held for trial.

At the last meeting of the county board it was left with the district attorney to do as he thought best. V. W. James, of Eau Claire, who assisted in the first Deitz cases, will assist in the prosecution of the rest of the family. The cases will come up for trial at the November term.

TRAINS COLLIDE; 7 DEAD

MISSOURI PACIFIC PASSENGER TRAIN HITS FREIGHT.

Misunderstood Train Orders Caused An Accident in Which 28 Were Injured.

Omaha, Nebraska.—Seven persons were killed and twenty-eight injured, four of them seriously, in a collision between Missouri Pacific Passenger Train No. 105, northbound, en route for this city, and a fast freight train at Fort Crook, ten miles south of this city. The accident resulted from a misunderstanding of orders on the part of the freight crew.

A passenger train, due to leave this city for the south about the time of the accident, was converted into a relief train and sent to the scene of the accident.

Governor Gilchrist, of Florida, who was a passenger on the northbound train, was uninjured.

Passenger Train No. 105 out of Kansas City in charge of Conductor F. R. Travers was running late. Conductor L. P. Gross of the freight passed South Omaha at 8:30. He had "signed off," but evidently did not check the train register as to the whereabouts of No. 105.

At the point of collision the track makes a sharp curve, shutting off the view of the Fort Crook station, where Engineer E. C. Crawford of the freight first caught sight of No. 105, which was coming at high speed. Engineer Crawford had no orders in regard to No. 105, but he whistled and slackened speed. When the passenger did answer he concluded that it was a train on the adjoining Burlington tracks which are within a short distance of each other. Both crews realized the danger and reversed their engines. The momentum of the passenger, however, was so great that it was piled high upon the freight engine, which almost had stopped. The crews of both engines jumped and were not injured seriously.

The impact derailed both engines and telescoped the mail cars upon the passenger coach, in which about forty people were riding.

Shrieks and groans mingled with the sound of escaping steam and the crackling of the cars brought the passengers in the Pullman rushing to the front of the train, to find the coach a mass of wreckage at the forward end and the dead and dying lying in every position from the top of the car down.

The dead and injured were all residents of Nebraska and Kansas.

BOY AVIATOR NEARLY KILLED.

Indiana Kid Tries To Emulate Famous Feat of Darius Green.

Hammond, Indiana. — Aviation enthusiasm may cause the death of Robert Burnett, nine years old, who tried to fly from the roof of a barn 25 feet high in a glider he had made. The boy's legs were broken and he was internally injured.

Since Rodgers' landing in Hammond the boy has been excited about flying. He made an aeroplane of strips of wood and sheets and used a sewing machine wheel for a steering wheel. In some way he managed to get the apparatus to the roof of the barn, seated himself in it and pushed off.

We was found unconscious under the wreck by his mother.

THREE-CENT FARE WINS.

Detroit Completes Negotiations With Trolley Company.

Hally, on behalf of the city, providing for eight tickets for a quarter between the hours of 5 a. m. and 8 p. m. and six tickets for a quarter at other hours, universal transfers to prevail at all hours.

By the agreemnt the company will build at least ten miles of extensions each year and will pave between the tracks. The city reserves the right to purchase within six months.

Rockaway, New Jersey. — A score of miners were caught by an inrush of waters at the iron mines at Hibernia and thirteen of them are reported dead. All are foreigners except the foreman of the gang. The men were driving a new shaft when it is supposed they broke into a subterranean stream.

REVOLT SPREADS

RUMORED RISINGS HAVE BEEN PLANNED FOR IMMEDIATE VICINITY OF PEKIN.

NORTH CHINA THREATENED

Feared Manchus Will Secretly Urge Attack to Draw Sympathy.—Yuan Shi Kai Seeks Compromise With Rebels.

Pekin, China. — The revolutionary spirit is now manifesting itself in the north as well as in the south and those who heretofore have believed the northern provinces might rally around the government now are of the opinion that secessions will follow rapidly. The prcautionary measures taken in Manchuria, where the government does not permit mention of the revolution, show the anti-government spirit in the far north.

There are rumors that risings have been planned for the next few days in the immediate vicinity of the capital. The diplomatic corps has discussed the necessity of maintaining communication between Tien Tsin and Pekin. The military commanders report only sufficient troops to protect the legation quarters in Pekin and the foreign settlement in Tien Tsin. Consequently, in a serious emergency only Japan would be immediately available from the garrison at Port Arthur and Dalny.

The legations so far have not considered seriously the suggestion of an English paper in Shanghai that the Manchus, when desperate might endeavor secretly to encourage the ignorant multitude to attack foreigners, and thereby attain foreign intervention which would mulitate in their favor.

It is argued that such machinations will prove more dangerous to the Manchus than to any one else, because it is known that the rebel organization elsewhere is able to restrain its adherents. The Manchus, however, apparently are following a weak and vacillating policy, which conceivably might be followed by desperate measures.

War Minister Advances.

General Yin Tchangé, the war minister, seems to have pusned his troops through the passes on the Ho Nan, without resistance. Some, therefore, are of the opinion that he intends to attack promptly. It is not believed generally that he has more than 15,000 troops of which two battalions are Manchus, which are guarding the railway in the rear. Other troops intended for the Hankow campaign have not been sent owing to the fear of their desertion.

The British and American attaches left here for Shanghai, intending to proceed to Hankow up the Yangtze Kiang. It is believed that Yin Tchang, Manchu-like, desires to give battle, although the half hearted spirit of his troops may deter him.

On the other hand, Yuan Shi Kai, Chinese-like, is temporizing with the rebels. Yuan Shi Kai has refused to leave Tchange Te in the special cars which have been sent for him, but there is evidence that he has despatched trusted adherents of former days as emissaries to the rebel leaders. It is believed he is endeavoring to reach a compromise between the rebels and the throne on the basis of immediate constitutional government.

The foreign customs commissioner at Shang Sha has telegraphed the inspector general of customs here that the city has revolted. The officers were killed and the viceroy fled.

General Takes Own Life.

San Francisco.—News was received here that General Shang Piao of the imperial troops who was sentenced to death for cowardice, had committed suicide.

POST OFFICE OF UNIQUE DESIGN.

PHILIP LIESCH

Philip Liesch, president of the Liesch Printing Company at New Ulm, Minn., and editor of its two papers, the Brown County Journal, in English, and the Volksblatt, in German, has just been appointed postmaster at New Ulm, and has gotten his office down to running order in the new government building.

The building is one of the most beautiful and most unique of the large number of post offices now owned by the government. When the appropriation was first secured, the architects of the treasury department prepared a conventional design, but the people of New Ulm, most of whom are of German ancestry, made a strong plea through their representatives in congress for a design more in keeping with the traditions and ideas of the citizens, and as a result the modified Dutch design here shown was adopted.

TO CALCEL LEASE

OFFICIAL SOURCES CONFIRM RUMOR CURRENT ALL DAY IN WALL STREET.

REGARDING MINN. LANDS

Herbert Knox Smith's Stand Held as Cause—Commanding Position Might Be Basis for Federal Suit.

New York, N. Y.—In view of the attitude taken by Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith towards railroads and ore holding of the United States Steel corporation, the corporation has decided to cancel its leases of the Great Northern ore properties.

When the lease will be terminated, however, is undetermined, inasmuch as the Hill ore contract stipulates that the lease will continue until the ore is exhausted, "unless on Jan. 1, 1915, the lease is terminated under an option reserved to the lessee."

Wall street was unable to figure out how the abrogation of the contract could be effected except by mutual consent. Officials of the Steel corporation refused to state the reason for the decision to cancel the big lease, and this phase is a matter of conjecture.

Could Lease Lands Again.

It was suggested that in the event of the cancellation of the lease, the ore lands of the Great Northern could be leased again, as a whole or in parcels, to other consumers of iron ore. The effect of such a change on the tonnage of ore transported to the upper lake ports by the Great Northern, it is said, is problematical. It would doubtless be influenced somewhat by the terms of whatever new leases might be made.

If the land, or a considerable portion of it, were leased to producers of iron not so well provided with other sources of ore as the Steel corporation, the result might be that this ore would be taken out more rapidly than has been the case so far under the present lease to the Steel corporation. In that event, the Great Northern railway would benefit by the increased tonnage.

It has been suggested that the trustees of the Great Northern ore lands might engage in mining ore on behalf of the certificate holders and sell the ore instead of leasing the lands. It is doubted that the Great Northern would reacquire any interests in the ore lands or that the title to them now in trust would in any way be disturbed.

Include Vast Amount of Ore.

The Great Northern ore properties are estimated to include deposits of 300,000,000 tons of iron ore. No figures are available as to how much ore has been mined since the opening of the Great Northern properties. The lease provides that the corporation mine 750,000 tons more each successive year, and the specified amount of ore must be paid for whether it is mined or not.

Under this provision the corporation would be required to mine 3,750,000 tons during the present year, or at least pay for that amount, which would mean $3,697,000.

The iron ore properties of the Great Northern railroad in 1906 were transferred to Louis W. Hill, James J. Hill and Walter J. Hill, as trustees, the 1,500,000 shares of beneficial interest in the trust, equal to the number of the shares of stock held, being issued Dec. 2, 1906, to Great Northern stockholders.

Confirmation of the rumor that the Steel corporation would cancel its lease on the Hill ore holdings led close students of the situation to refer to the report of Herbert Knox Smith on the United States Steel corporation as a possible reason for the decision on the part of the corporation.

Paragraph Pointed Out.

The following paragraph was especially pointed to as substantiating this theory:

"Hence, not only on account of its great holdings of ore, but also on account of these peculiar advantages enjoyed in transportation of ore, the Steel corporation occupies an extremely commanding position in iron and steel industries. Indeed, insofar as the Steel corporation's position in the entire iron and steel industry is of a monopolistic character, it is chiefly through its control of ore holdings and transportation of ore."

For some time those who are best informed regarding the makeup of the United States Steel corporation have regarded its ownership of ore-carrying railroads and rates charged to independents for transportation of their ore from upper lake ports as the most vulnerable feature of its position. In fact, it has been pretty well understood that if the government suit is brought against the Steel corporation, this situation could form the chief basis for it.

Profit Is Enormous.

With the ownership of these railroads, the Steel corporation is able to transport its ores at small relative expense. On the other hand, it charges independents an 80-cent rate for hauling their ores, whereas the actual cost to the Steel corporation for this haul is only about 20 cents a ton.

United States Steel common was weak throughout the session of the stock exchange, suffering a loss of 1⅝ for the day on transactions in 162,000 shares. Great Northern preferred, however, closed unchanged at 124½. Great Northern ore certificates sold down 3 points from Tuesday night. There was no heavy liquidation in them as the total transactions were only 450 shares.

SANBORN RULING ATTACKED.

E. S. Durment Files Brief in Minnesota Rate Case.

Washington, D. C.—Edmund S. Durment filed a supplemental brief in the supreme court in the Minnesota rate case.

Mr. Durment attacks the holding of Judge Sanborn that a railroad should be allowed a reasonable profit on the value of its property. He does not believe in valuations of railroad property made by the courts.

MINN. DAIRYMEN WIN

AWARDED $500 SILVER CUP AT INTERSTATE CONTEST.

Decision Is Made By Federal Inspectors—Iowa Is Second and Wisconsin Third.

The Winning Butter Scores.

	Entries.	Total.	Av.
Minnesota	82	7,697.61	93.88
Iowa	37	3,450.99	93.27
Wisconsin	193	17,902.00	92.76

The National Buttermakers' Association officially declared Minnesota butter to be the best made in the United States and awarded this state the silver cup, valued at $500, for winning the interstate butter contest at Milwaukee.

The decision of the judges, who are federal inspectors and who have no interest in any state, places Minnesota buttermakers in a class by themselves, although they have won banners and prizes for eleven years with the exception of two years, when the championship went to New York and Illinois respectively.

The outcome of the contest came as a surprise, especially to Wisconsin buttermakers, who last year won the contest by one-eighth of a point over Minnesota.

Iowa Takes Second Prize.

This year Wisconsin was awarded third prize, Iowa winning second. Minnesota had eighty-two entries and secured a total score of 7,697.61 points, or an average of 93.88. Iowa entered thirty-seven competitors and received a total score of 3,450.99, or an average of 93.27 points. Wisconsin had 193 entries and scored 17,902 points, with an average of 92.76.

Rivalry Is Keen.

This year's contest was the most stubborn ever waged between high-class buttermakers, not only because of the magnificent prize and the prestige that it would bring to the state, but because of the fact that the score was so close last year that neither of the states took any chances, but all sent into the contest the best butter that could be churned.

Mr. McCabe said that the butter entered was sent from all parts of Minnesota, and that the buttermakers of the entire state should be congratulated on the result. Minnesota butter is already famous, but the winning of a silver cup will make it more so.

The cup will be kept by Minnesota, and will be taken care of by Minnesota State Dairymen's Association.

MEDAL FOR CLITHERALL MAN.

Carnegie Commission Recognizes Minnesotan.

Pittsburg, Penn. — Among scores of persons who were awarded Carnegie hero medals by the Carnegie Hero Fund commission at its full meeting here, as a recognition of heroism in saving human life or attempts in which the life of the hero was jeopardized, is John Murdock, a young farmer of Clitherall, Ottertail county, Minn.

Young Murdock was awarded a bronze medal for an attempt to save a boy from drowning at Clitherall, Dec. 1, 1910. Last winter a party of boys were crossing the lake on skates when one of them fell through an air hole. The rest of the party rushed to Murdock's house on the shore of Lake Clitherall and called him to the rescue.

Murdock crept out on the ice to the edge of the hole and saw the boy's body lying on the sandy bottom of the lake 18 feet below. He dived to the bottom and brought the body to the surface.

All efforts to resuscitate the boy failed, but neighbors of Murdock, impressed by his heroism in having risked his life in the icy waters of the lake, presented him with a gold watch and sent a record of the case to the Carnegie Hero Fund commission with a recommendation that his valor be recognized.

BANK LOSES $1,000.

Safe at Eldred, Minn., Blown by Three Burglars.

Crookston. — The safe of the State Bank of Eldred, eleven miles south of here, on the Fargo line, was blown by yeggmen who got away with about $1,000 in cash.

The stole a horse and buggy from a hotel barn and the horse returned with the empty rig. Marshal Roberts at Fisher tried to stop three men in a buggy, but they whipped up their horse and hurried away. He shot at them several times, but they refused to stop. The sheriff is scouring the country with an automobile.

Residents of Eldred were aroused when the explosion blew out the front of the bank building. The robbery was discovered a few minutes later and surrounding towns were notified. It is believed the robbers will be caught.

LOWER FLOUR RATE ORDERED.

Millers Win Point in Controversy Over Minneapolis-New York Tariffs.

Washington, D. C. — Quick action has been taken by the commerce court on the mandamus proceedings brought by the Flour City line to compel the Lehigh Valley railroad to grant the 9.2 cents rate from Buffalo to New York, on flour coming from Minneapolis via Duluth. The court issued an order requiring the Lehigh Valley road to grant the proportional rate by Oct. 25th.

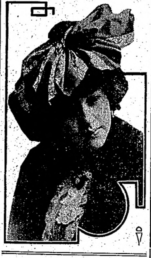
FASHION

HATS FOR LATE FALL

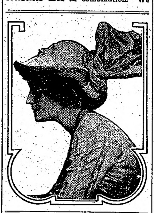
RIBBONS AND SILK VERY MUCH IN EVIDENCE.

Add the Rich Color With Which Fashion Decrees Woman Shall Face the Frost—No End in Variety.

The strong, rich colors with which fashion decrees we shall face the frost of winter, show to great advantage in splendid ribbons of brocade in satin or satin and velvet. Some of these ribbons are further enriched with gold or silver threads, but in design and weave and colorings there is really no end in vanity. It is the day of fancy ribbons and no elaboration is too intricate for the manufacturer. Wide ribbons are used and fancy piece silk for handsome bows which provide the only decoration needed on the smaller hats for fall. Naturally these bows are full, but simply made, in keeping with the quality and elaboration of the fabrics used. An ordinary bow requires from two to three yards. In very heavy ribbons, rosette bows are made by a group of ends instead of loops, as shown in the picture given here. These ribbons are not inexpensive, ranging in price from about fifty cents to three or four dollars a yard. But they furnish a charming and ample trimming so that one may dispense with feathers and ornaments, and they are durable as well as beautiful, so cannot be considered extravagant.



The pretty fashion of wearing a bag made to match the hat, makes another field of usefulness for the wide fancy ribbon. These bags are made over a rice net or buckram foundation shaped like a square envelope or rounded. They are bound with gold or silver braid and suspended over the shoulder or carried with a gold or silver cord. Dull gold or oxydized silver are more favored thon brighter metallic effects. The flap is supplied with a loop which goes over a button, made by covering a button mold with the tinsel braid. These bags are not difficult to make. Some of the handsomest ones are of plain satin with rich Chinese or other oriental embroideries used in combination. We may look for numerous fancy bags made to match the hat before the season is much older.



These bags will prove a feature of holiday business and look as if they might have a long run of favor.

A street hat with machine stitched and wired bow is shown in the second picture. The bow is of plain taffeta silk with fine wire run in between double rows of stitching on the hem. The upstanding bows used as a trimming at the back require a wire support of some sort and there are ribbons now manufactured with wires woven in, ready for use.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Hairdressing Styles.

The ringlet styles of the sixties, the fashions of the grandmothers of this day and age, are now the leading effect in hairdressing, says the Drygoods Economist. In place of the pompadour the French hairdresser today sells the false front parted at the left side, either waved or with ringlets; for the back switch for coiling, a curly knot or one of the new fashioned calottes, with self strands of wavy hair to be arranged in swirls, is used. All hairdressing tends to make the head appear small, and ornaments usually take the form of ornamental bands. Many of these are worn very low on the forehead, dragging the hair to the temples and crushing the curls down about the ears. When styles less youthful are worn the hair is knotted medium low, being drawn back to the crown of the head without pompadour.

Fireproof Dresses.

Children's dresses may be rendered almost fireproof if, in the last rinsing water or in the starch in which they are stiffened, one ounce of alum or sal ammoniac is dissolved. Clothing treated in this way will with difficulty take fire, and even if it should, will burn slowly and without flame.

ABOUT THE SEASON'S SLEEVE

Styles Are Many and Varied, But All Are Something on Peasant Order.

Whether the kimona sleeve will hold its own this winter, time alone will tell. Paris herself has not decided and while many and varied styles of sleeves are shown in the new designs, they are all something on the peasant order. One important house shows sleeves cut on kimona lines, but separate from the bodice. The advantage of this is evident in the increased comfort of the blouse. Another modiste of equal importance cuts the upper part of the sleeve with the bodice, making the lower part separate and of different material, while it remains for a third to give us the gauntlet sleeve. This is cut with fullness at the elbow, from which point the sleeve is made to fit the forearm and extended at the wrist with deep pointed frills of chiffon, which fall over the hand. The lower half of a sleeve of this kind is of material like the yoke or guimpe.

In coats and evening wraps the popularity of the kimona appearance is given, though the sleeve may be cut separately, while even the regulation mannish sleeve is made slightly fuller.

On evening wraps and auto coats the kimona or peasant sleeve is used in its original form, as a rule, though extreme models have the shoulder line elongated and the loose sleeve set in, while the cuffs are deep and of material matching the wide revers with which these coats are generally trimmed.

TO MAKE FEZ PEN-WIPER

Useful Little Article That Is Easily Made From Remnant of Scarlet Cloth.

A fez pen-wiper is no new idea, but it is an easily made useful little article, and it can be made from any small remnant of scarlet cloth, and stuffed with loops of black Berlin wool. It is cut in two pieces, a circular piece for the top of the cap and a band for the lower part. It should be really sewn together and finished off with a small flat button covered with the same material, and a black silk tassel. The small sketch on the right shows the underside of the pen-wiper, and the more firmly it is stuffed with loops of wool the better shape it will keep. A little pile of these pen-wipers looks wonderfully well on a stall at a bazaar, and they make a nice bright spot of color.

POPULAR HERO GONE

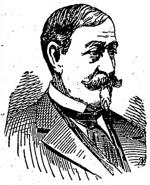
Death of Admiral Schley Recalls Santiago Victory.

Famed for Rescue of Greely Arctic Expedition and Later Prominent in Spanish-American War Naval Fight.

New York.—Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, retired, who dropped dead the other day in this city, was famed for the rescue of the Greely arctic expedition and was the popular hero of the famous naval battle of Santiago, July 3, 1898. Admiral Schley was born October 9, 1839, near Frederick City, Md. He was the son of John Thomas Schley, who served in the navy during the Mexican war. In 1856 Admiral Schley was appointed to the Naval academy at Annapolis, and completed his studies there in 1860. After his graduation from Annapolis he rose in the naval world step by step, winning promotion and honor by dint of meritorious service and bravery.

Although Winfield Scott Schley was famed for his bravery in rescuing the crew of the famous arctic expedition in 1884, he came most prominently before the world in the naval engagement of Santiago. It was for his work on this occasion that he became one of the popular naval heroes of the American people. The controversy which followed the battle, regarding who was the real hero, Sampson or Schley, was one of the most regrettable incidents that arose from the Spanish war. Schley, in his own humble way, answered the controversy most fairly by his famous comment, "There is glory enough for all."

It is an irony of history that, in the arguments which arose in lieu of the disagreement over the honors of Santiago, Schley should have been charged with cowardice. It was he who, in 1862, in the face of almost certain death, went out with a small boat and rescued a beleaguered ship from the fire of the Confederate guns; it was he who charged first over the redoubt at Corea and when his comrade fell dead at his side shot his slayer and vaulted over the embankment, leaving his men to follow him; it was Admiral Schley who braved the terrors of the actic winter and brought back in safety the explorers who, entrapped by arctic ice for more than six months, nearly died from exposure and starvation.



Rear Admiral Schley.

Winfield Scott Schley was known among naval men as a dashing commander before the war with Spain. He had creditably disciplined Chinese and Corean coolies, protected the American consulate in San Salvador during a revolution and had behaved with gallantry and diplomacy when American sailors were assailed by a mob in Valparaiso. He was a typical naval man, a leader and a strategist, and he will go down in history as one of America's great naval heroes.

In recognition for his heroism in rescuing Greely congress rewarded him with a medal and the citizens of Maryland presented him with a handsome gold watch which he carried until the day of his death. President Arthur also rewarded Schley by making him chief of the bureau of equipment and recruiting. He held this office until his resignation in 1889. In later years he was honored by being placed in command of the body of John Ericsson, the inventor of the Monitor, with the commission to bear it to Sweden for burial. His last commission was the New York, the flagship of the North Atlantic squadron. Since his retirement Admiral Schley led a quiet life. He had been at Lake George all summer and was on his way to his home in Washington when he was stricken.

Cripple Demands a New Leg.

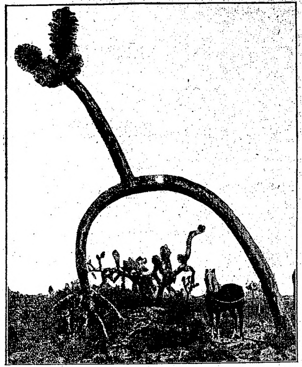
New York.—Andrew Witzel of Manhasset appeared before the town board of North Hempstead and explained that unless a new wooden leg were given him he would be compelled to seek shelter from the superintendent of the poor. "Had it repaired twice," said Wetzel, "and it won't stand more fixing. Want to work and will work if I get a leg, but can't get about on his stump."

College Bars Ragtime.

Macon, Ra.—Ragtime compositions found in the music room of Wesleyan college by Dr. Dingley Brown, director of the conservatory, were confiscated and the edict was sent forth that ragtime melodies no longer should be heard there. A member of the factulty lectured the young women on "the debasing and demoralizing effects of ragtime on musical morals and harmonic systems."

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Strange Cactus in Arizona

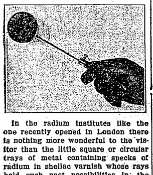


Those who are familiar only with the small cacti of the ordinary garden must find it difficult to realize the great size attained by the cacti in the southwest, notably in Arizona. For that reason this photograph should be interesting as showing a giant of the species compared with a horse. It should be ramarked further that the form taken by the plant—that of a spur—is decidely curious. This was brought about by strong winds, which gradually bent the cactus over until its top touched the earth, when a second root formed. The type illustrated grows with remarkable rapidity.

WHERE MANITOU SPEAKS

A familiar landmark near Hayton, Wis., is the old "Council Elm" that stands at a bend in the Manitowoc river a short distance below Hayton. The Pottawotomie Indians who once occupied this region regarded the tree with awe and veneration, believing it endowed with special attributes by the Manitou or Great Spirit. Under its shade all important councils of the tribe took place. As a meeting place for representatives of the different northwestern tribes who wished to enter the Pottawotomie territory, it must have witnessed some strange scenes. Each spring and fall all the Pottawotomie clans were wont to gather at the spacious camping ground near the tree. For days the beating of drums, the chanting of barbaric songs and fantastic dances occupied the attention of the savages. Among the many Indian legends concerning the tree one of the few that has survived is to the effect that the Manitou speaks to his people in the rustle of its leaves and the sigh of the winter wind through the bare branches.

FORTUNE IN A SMALL DISC



In the radium institutes like the one recently opened in London there is nothing more wonderful to the visitor than the little square or circular trays of metal containing specks of radium in shellac varnish whose rays hold such vast possibilities in the future of mankind's struggle against disease. The disc illustrated contains 70 milligrammes of radium, worth £1,350. The trays when applied to the patient are covered with metal caps or screens which lessen or intensify the power of the rays according to the nature of the disease. In the basement of the London institution is a strong room holding the largest stock of radium in the world. The scale-room where these tiny black specks of radium are weighed is a broad, lofty, white-tiled room absolutely vibration-proof.

WHERE EGGS ARE BLACK

Every one has heard of the black broth of the Spartans over which the fastidious Dionysius made a wry face, and was not convinced when told that it was enjoyable with Spartan sauce, the ingredients of which, in the Syracusan's opinion, could little alter the taste. The housewife would, however, probably be shocked to find the eggs left by the milkman jet black. The black Cayuga duck, a South American bird, frequently lays black eggs. The black coloring does not penetrate the shell, being due to an oily pigment which can be rubbed off. In successive layings the coloring fades and disappears.

SOUTHERN POINT OF NATION

The most southern point of mainland territory in the United States is on a sharp bend of the Rio Grande river about 20 miles southwest of Brownsville. The government official survey shows that its latitude is 25 degrees and 9 minutes, which places it below the most southern part of the peninsula of Florida, but not as far south as Key West. The spot is marked by a group of picturesque Mexican ranch buildings with their thatched roofs. Growing upon the land are groves of wild palm trees which lend to the beauty of the tropical scene. The distance between Brownsville and the mouth of the Rio Grande in a direct line is approximately 22 miles, but the river has so many curvatures that its course between the two points covers 110 miles, according to the survey of the international boundary commission, which is composed of the representatives of the United States and Mexican governments. Before the river empties into the gulf it makes a sharp bend to the south, and this rounded peninsula forms the most southern mainland of the country. Most of the territory between Brownsville and the Rio Grande's mouth is covered by a dense winderness of chaparral. The soil is of primitive richness, caused by the periodical deposits of silt from the stream's overflow. Owing to the inaccessibility of the little Mexican ranch, which holds the distinction of marking the most southern spot, the place has been visited by very few Americans.

MULE AND BEAR FIGHT DUEL

The story of a duel to the death between a mule and a bear comes from Chambersburg, Pa. The mule came out victorious. Aroused by a commotion in his barn, Dan Shawley, lumberman and farmer, found the bear in combat with his pet mule. Contrary to the established custom the mule was using his front feet in the battle and peppering bruin a regular tatto over the head. One savage slap by the mule broke one of the bear's front legs and the bulky animal fell prostrate. Then the mule reversed himself and let loose the death dealing assault from his hind quarters. The bear died shortly after Shawley reached the scene. It weighed 262 pounds and showed the marks of eight bullet punctures.

KICK THAT SAVED A LIFE

While running his train out of Dent, Minn., the other day, W. A. Beardsley, engineer on a freight train, saw what seemed to be a blue parcel lying between the rails about twenty car lengths ahead. But it turned out to be a child, who arose and sat down on one of the rails. The emergency brake was applied, but it was impossible to stop in time. Beardsley ran out on the pilot, intending to pick the child up. He reached the pilot too late, but had time to extend his foot and kick the child off the rail and down the embankment. The train was stopped, the child picked up and brought back to Dent. A doctor was summoned and it was found that the child was unhurt except that it had a bruise where the engineer's shoe had struck it.

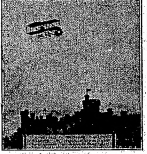
ARIZONA BRIDGE OF AGATE

The petrified forests of Arizona present some of the most marvelous evidence of volcanic action known to the world. Groves of giant trees, becoming solidified, have fallen of their own weight. One log which is probably the largest example of petrification has recently come to attention. It is 110 feet long, spans a "box canon" 60 feet wide, forming a convenient foot-bridge, and is really a mass of fine agate weighing hundreds of tons. The huge roots of the fallen monarch rise to a height of eight or ten feet at one end while the upper extremity of the trunk is buried in the soft formation of the land in which it grew. Its diameter is from five feet to two at the smaller end.

LOBSTER THREE FEET LONG

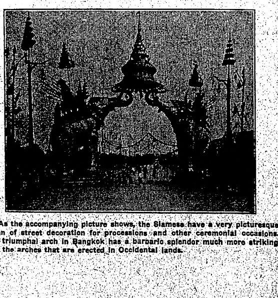
The Portland (Me.) fishing steamer Carrie and Mildred a few days ago brought in a lobster from outside that was the largest taken off the Maine coast for a number of years. The crustacean weighed a strong seven pounds and was nearly three feet in length. The legs were nearly as large as the claws of an ordinary lobster, while the claws were huge affairs.

FIRST AERIAL POSTCARDS



Though the carrying of mails by aeroplane has been tried in America, France and Germany, England was the first to establish a regular aerial postal service, that between Hendon and Windsor. For this service the British postoffice issued the very attractive postcards here illustrated, and they proved decidedly popular both with the English and with visitors from other lands who wished to send a novel communication to friends at home. The profits of the cards are devoted to charity.

Triumphal Arch in Bangkok



As the accompanying picture shows, the Siamese have a very picturesque notion of street decoration for processions and other ceremonial occasions. This triumphal arch in Bangkok has a barbaric splendor much more striking than the arches that are erected in Occidental lands.

PAPER BAG COOKERY

VEGETABLES COOKED IN THIS MANNER ARE DELICIOUS.

Combines the Advantages of Baking and Boiling—Delights of New Method Are Many, But It Has Limitations.

The Soyer method of paper bag cookery is never better than when applied to fresh vegetables. A great many vegetables are better when baked in the oven than when cooked in water on the top of the stove, because the juices are better preserved. But the one great objection to baking a vegetable has been the fact that it is likely to grow dry with cooking and acquire a hard crust over the surface. When inclosed in a paper bag the moisture arising from it as it cooks forms an envelope of steam around it and keeps it from drying. The steam cannot escape while inclosed in the bag.

Beets are delicious, cooked in this way, if the oven is hot and they are allowed plenty of time to bake. None of their juices and flavor is lost as in boiling, but when done they are perfectly tender and their skins can be as easily slipped off as when they have been boiled. Very young carrots have a most delicious flavor when baked in one of these cooking bags, a flavor that is quite foreign to the when the are boiled in water. Tomatoes cooked in paper bags are also delicious. They taste much like the boiled ones, but are better, and retain their shape perfectly. If sealed up tight and placed on a grid shelf none of their juices will escape from the bag.

New potatoes baked in bags are without a dry, hard crust, the skin being so tender it can be pulled off with the hand, but many people will prefer to bake potatoes in the old way, as when cooked in the steam filled bag they are too much like boiled potatoes. They lack something of the nutty flavor of the ordinary baked tuber.

Kohlrabi when cooked in this way does not give forth its cabbage-like odor as when boiled, but it is not improved in flavor.

If the summer cottage does not furnish a stove with good broiling facilities, and a porterhouse steak is wanted for dinner, try baking it in a paper cooking bag in the oven. The juices of the meat will be retained and form a delicious gravy, which will not soak through the paper as might be supposed if it is placed upon a grid shelf, where the hot air of the oven can circulate under it as well as over it. It makes a very nice change from broiling, too, as the flavor is different. For ordinary occasions, however, many people will prefer the broiled steak, in spite of the fact that some of the juices are lost in the fire. M. Soyer allows about fifteen or twenty minutes to cook a steak in a paper bag.

The delights of paper bag cooking are many. To the weary housekeeper the best of all is the fact that it alleviates to some extent the burden completely, as writers in search of a sensation would have one believe. The originator of the idea does not assure the housewife of any such good luck. Soups, omelettes and similar egg dishes, the homely cabbage, with some of its relatives; jams, except in limited quantities, and all pasties, such as macaroni, are baked by M. Soyer from this novel method of cookery.

Dessert.

Four whites of eggs, sixteen prunes, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, vanilla, pinch of salt. Stew prunes without sugar until tender, drain and cut in small pieces; beat the eggs to a stiff froth, with a pinch of salt added, fold in the prunes, pour the mixture into a buttered baking dish, and place in a moderate oven for ten minutes; then remove the covering to allow the pudding to brown slightly. Serve cold in glass cups with whipped cream; if chocolate flavoring is desired, one tablespoonful of grated chocolate may be added.

Brown Sugar Pie.

Two-thirds cup brown sugar, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons milk, cook until waxy looking; then take yolks of two eggs, one heaping tablespoon flour, one and one-half cups milk; mix all together, smooth, add to the above ingredients, cook until thick; add vanila; have a baked crust; use the whites beaten stiff for top; return to the oven for a minute or two.

Economy Jelly.

Prepare fruit in the ordinary way, put through the jelly bag; put juice on and boil without adding sugar; can as you would any fruit, having jars or bottles hot; any time during the winter when sugar is cheaper open jars and make your jelly in from eight to fifteen minutes.

Bran for Matting.

Instead of salt water some housewives use bran for cleaning matting. A bag of cheesecloth is filled with bran; this is moistened from time to time, and the matting scrubbed with it. After the bran wash the matting is wiped off with a fresh cloth dipped in salt water.

To Remove Scorch.

Wet starch to form a paste, cover the scorched place and put in the sun to dry; if badly scorched, repeat and it will soon disappear.

If You Have a Sickly Youngster Try This Free

The family with young children that is without sickness in the house now and then is rare, and so it is important that the head of the house should know what to do in the little emergencies that arise. A child with a serious ailment needs a doctor, it is true, but in the majority of instances, as any doctor knows, the child suffers from some intestinal trouble, usually constipation.

There is no sense in giving it a pill or a remedy containing an opiate, nor is flushing of the bowels to be always recommended. Rather give it a small dose of a mild, gentle laxative, tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, by cleaning out the bowels and strengthening the little stomach muscles, will immediately correct the trouble.

This is not alone our opinion but that of Mrs. N. H. Mead of Freeport, Kans., whose granddaughter has been taking it successfully and of Mrs. J. R. Whiting of Lena, Wis., who gives it to her children and takes it herself. It is sold in fifty cent and one dollar bottles at every drug store, but if you want to test it in your family before you buy it send your address to Dr. Caldwell and he will forward a supply free of charge.

WHAT I WENT THROUGH

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it had worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. NATHAN B. GREATON, 51 N. The AWAKING of the OLDER NATIONS

Young Turks Halt Zionism—Decree That Attempts to Secure Holy Land by Jews Must Be Thwarted—Jews Undismayed—Glimpse of Palestine.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Jerusalem.—Of all the nationalistic stirrings within the breasts of men today, the most romantic is the longing of devout Jews to get back for themselves the land of Abraham and David. All Christendom is interested in this project. Some schools of Christian theology stake vast prophetic issues upon it. Statesmen of Europe are interested in it as one solution of the question of what to do with the Jew, who has been made unwelcome in all their lands. Whatever be the reason for the well-nigh universal sympathy with the Zionistic aspiration, the news has doubtless been received with regret that the Young Turks have formally and officially announced that the immigration of Jews into Palestine must cease. Moreover, it is intimated that those already here must go.

That is the latest development in Zionism; but it must be remembered that Zionism is part and parcel of all high politics, and the end is not yet. It is not at all impossible that the reason for this recent adverse pronouncement is nothing less than the failure of the French loan to Turkey. Let nobody think that the Zionists are merely a company of pious Jewish expatriates, sighing for the land of their fathers. They are the bankers of Europe and the men who often say the deciding word in affairs of nations. I have reason to believe that Zionism has been an important factor in the recent hidden politics of the Turkish Empire. Some of the leaders of the Committee of Union and Progress are Jews, and Salonika, the headquarters of the Young Turk party, is the home of an influential body of Jews who, several generations ago, embraced the Moslem faith, although they are commonly regarded as being better Jews than Moslems. In most unexpected places the Zionist cause has allies, and one trained observer of events at Constantinople said to me, "You will never get hold of the true inwardness of this Turkish situation until you unravel the relation of Zionism to it."

Zionism and Abdul Hamid.

For the present, the Jews have lost. Whatever their influence with the Young Turk leaders, they have, on the whole, preferred the regime of Abdul Hamid. A member of the central Zionist committee told me in Berlin that Zionists would rather have the old order than the new. His was the first downright defence of the deposed monarch I had ever heard. The reasons given were, first, that the Turks have ever been kindlier to the Jews than have the Christians; and, secondly, that Abdul Hamid permitted the Jews to settle in Palestine, and to acquire land.

Legally, no Jew is permitted to live in Palestine longer than three months. Upon entering the country he is obliged to surrender his passport, and receive a temporary red passport. As for acquiring property, that also is and long has been interdicted. But one well-informed Jewish leader at Jaffa merely shrugged his shoulders when I brought up this subject, and said, "We have a golden key that can unlock any door in Turkey. Practically, we have found no difference between the old days and the new. In either case we have to get what we want by 'backsheesh.'"

Theoretically, there are no Jews in Turkey; practically, there are more than a hundred thousand in the Promised Land. In the past five years the number has increased fifty per cent. When the constitutional party came into power, with its avowals of complete religious and racial liberty, the hearts of devout Jews and their friends everywhere leaped with exultation; this meant the advent of the long-expected day when the Children of Israel should be free once more to settle in the land of their fathers. Zionism's heralded day had dawned.

Now these hopes have once more been dashed. As of yore, every Jew who enters Palestine must do so by bribery and stealth. Those without passports must buy them; and common report has it that there used to be a lively traffic in American passports in this country. That has been almost, if not altogether, broken up by the vigilance of the consuls, and the requirement that every American citizen securing a red passport shall deposit the original one at the consulate. Each nation must look after its own nationals in Turkey, and, unfortunately, there is no one nation to stand back of the Jews, as France stands back of the Roman Catholics, Russia back of the Greek church, and America and Great Britain back of the Protestants.

Will Jews Be Driven Out?

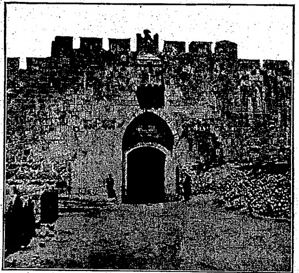
In spite of the late vigorous pronouncement from Constantinople, there is little likelihood that the Jews now in Palestine will be driven out. Their consuls will protect them in their property rights. However these rights may have been obtained, their present legality cannot be questioned. It will be strange to all who know Turkey, and the common methods of bringing things to pass here, if the number of Jewish colonists does not steadily increase. As one said to me, rather cynically, "There is as much bribery as ever in Turkey, only the prices come higher." This I hasten to explain, at least in part, on the ground that the Young Turks are obliged to work with the tools that they find ready to their hands.

The natural increase of the Jewish population of Palestine must be comparatively small, as so large a percentage of the colonists are old people who have come here to end their days. These are the more religious element, and they are largely Spanish and Russian and German Jews. The number of old persons to be seen in Jerusalem is a sight full of significance and pathos.

Jewish "Portions" and Paupers.

That religious zeal is a prime factor in the Judaizing of Palestine is evident at a glance. The men wear a distinctive garb, of which the round felt hat, worn in the hottest weather, with a white cap underneath, is the most characteristic feature. This is also worn by the boys. Even more striking is the curl in front of the ear, which is in compliance with a rabbinical teaching against trimming the hair. It must be confessed that this gives a decidedly other-worldly appearance to the male Jews, especially since they generally affect the long cloak or gaberdine.

Most of these persons depend upon aid from outside of Palestine for their maintenance. It is a very small allowance, and so most of them live in very meager style. The statement has been repeatedly made to me in the Holy Land that Zionism has pauperized the Jews. Certainly their physiognomy does not reveal the traits of alertness and aggressiveness which characterize the American Jew. If it be true, as commonly stated, that every Jew here receives his "portion," from abroad, the effect has been manifestly deleterious. Able to subsist on a pittance, the incentive to independent labor is removed, with the result that nowhere in Palestine, outside of exclusively Jewish colonies, are the leading business men Jews. There is more successful business enterprises among Hebrews of any one of a hundred streets in New York than in all of Palestine.



St. Stephens Gate, Jerusalem.

One reason for the bitter complaints of the Syrians at the presence of the Jews is that the latter are not dependent upon their labors for a livelihood, and are also able to exist on a very low scale, and so are able greatly to undersell the natives in their little shops.

Ghettoes In Jerusalem.

The crowding of the colonists into ghettoes outside of Jerusalem is an interesting example of the force of habit. There is no need here for overcrowded quarters; each family could have its own vine and fig tree by extending the Jewish quarter a little further outside the city. Generations of congested living in the ghettoes of Europe, together with the necessity for crowding close together for mutual protection, are hard to escape. So the Holy Land today contains a state of affairs such as it never before witnessed in its long history.

Nor are the Jewish quarters of the cities of Palestine such as would incline one to optimism concerning a Jewish state. Tiberias, for example, is predominantly Jewish, yet it is one of the dirtiest and least attractive towns in all the land. This is not a racial fact, but rather an illustration of the statement that it is the ecclesiastically earnest, and the aged and the sorely stricken, who have fled to the haven of the Promised Land.

In Galilee I heard the lament that the most ambitious of the young men are leaving Palestine to go to America, that other Promised Land of all the world. The younger generation, I was also told, have not the interest of their fathers in religion. The most representative Jew I have met here, from the American standpoint, was a traveler from New York City. At Jaffa he ran across an old woman who was having trouble with her transportation. He took her in hand, with gentle insistence, saw her aboard her boat, changed her third-class ticket for a first, and had her put in a cabin alongside his own, in all respects caring for her as tenderly as a wealthy son could do. Yet she was of a different land, race and religion from himself. I prefer to regard him as typical of the future of his race, rather than the ill-fed, strangely-clad zealots whom one may see any Friday afternoon at the "wailing place," by the stones of the old wall of the temple.

Successful Jewish Colonies.

Both the Zionist movement and the Jewish Colonization Society have established colonies in various parts of Palestine. Their contention that somewhat of the ancient fertility and prosperity of the land may be restored is doubtless correct. Better government, and better agricultural methods will revolutionize conditions here, as elsewhere throughout Turkey. But thus far there has been no conspicuous success attending the purely agricultural colonies. The Jew has been too long away from the soil for that. In the best of the farm settlements, near Jaffa, the colonists make use of Arab labor. Their own aptitude is for trade.

At Zamarine, in Galilee, one of the old Jewish settlements, which has been in existence for more than twenty years, the people, mostly Roumanians, are on a basis of self-support, except for some slight assistance for the school. Their industry is winemaking. They have quite an European community in the midst of Syria. The order and cleanliness is in sharp contrast with the conditions in Tiberias. However, the latter is deeply religious, whereas one old Hebrew told me that the Zamarine colonists have no religion. Surely, though, there was nothing less than a religious motive back of the words of the village druggist as he told me that the people made a modest living; "not so good as we could make in America, but then, we are in the Promised Land, you know."

There are now about two-score of Jewish colonies in Palestine, not to mention those in adjacent lands. The most successful of all is in the Island of Cyprus. The leaders are giving more and more attention to the creation of self-supporting bodies, in an effort to restrict the hurtful effects of indiscriminate charity. These leaders are too powerful to have all that they have gained thus far sacrificed to Turkish politics. The Jew is in Palestine to stay, even though the present results of Zionism have not fully justified all hopes.

Pseudonyms of Women Writers.

The preference of many women writers for a male pseudonym is doubtless a survival of the old superstition that to engage in the task of authorship was "unwomanly." The Bronte sisters set the fashion in appearing as Currer, Acton and Ellis Bell respectively. Their example was followed by George Eliot. But George is a name to which the distressed lady novelist flies as to a city of refuge. We have had George Egerton, George Fleming, George Paston and a host of others. Then, too, there have been John Oliver Hobbes, Ralp Iron, Frank Hamel and Frank Danby.

On the other hand Mr. Oliver Madox Hueffer shares with the late William Sharp the distinction of a feminine disguise, for he was known to the novel reading public until quite recently as Jane Wardle.

The Bright Side.

"But we must always look on the bright side," said Mayor Grice of Fort Wayne, discussing a party setback. "We must all take a lesson from Hiram Husk.

"Hi Husk, you know, visited Long Island last week, and had his pocket picked at a side show.

"'I should think,' his wife sneered, on his return home, 'that you'd have a purty poor opinion of Coney arter bein' robbed of your purse like that!'

"'Yes, that's right,' said Husk; 'but I come out better'n some folks did. Why, Maria, the old banker's ward in the piece, beautiful Thais, had all her jools swiped, and the banker's wife throwed vitrol in his face durin' the same act I had my wallet stolen.'"

There are very bright prospects for a very warm fight at the elections at both Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls for the different city officers.

Senator Hanson returned home Monday night from Minneapolis where he has been confined in a hospital since the first week in September at which time he underwent an operation for appendicitis while in the Twin Cities attending the state fair. Mr. Hanson is able to be about but it will be some time before he regains his usual strength.

Cut Weeds and Brush.

Fall is again with us and the time for the coming of snow is near and we feel called upon to call the peoples attention to the clearing and ridding the roadside from tall grass and brush in which the snow will gather and make the roads impassible.

The state law provides that all weeds should be removed from the roadside and cleared away so the snow will not drift and block the road.

People expect that the mail carriers shall get through in all kinds of weather and as they have from 28 to 33 miles to travel each day it is no snap to travel through several feet of snow all the way.

Clean up the side of the road of all kinds of weeds and brush and make things look better.

MUSSEY-ZAISER.

An early morning wedding took place Monday morning at eight o'clock when Miss Lorena Zaiser of Red Lake Falls and Mr. Homer Mussey of this city were united in marriage by Rev. Fr. Adolph, Miss Marie Vellieux, a cousin of the bride and Mr. Thomas Majores were attendants.

Only the relatives and intimate friends of bride and groom were present at the ceremony and at the very dainty wedding dinner which was served at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mussey.

The bride has many friends here made during her visits to this city and the groom who is junior editor of the Thief River Falls Times, has lived here since boyhood.

Their many friends are unanimous in their wishes of a long and happy wedded life to the editor and his bride and with these the "Press" adds congratulations.— Thief River Press.

"Socking It" To The Farmers

Potatoes sold in my town yesterday morning, laid down at my back door, for 90 cents a 52-pound basket. Potatoes sold at my neighbor Charlie Kenning's door, down in the country a couple of hour's ride, at $1.50 a bushel. Why should the farmer pay more than the Twin City business man for his table supplies? Perhaps you never stopped to figure that out. Let me suggest: Suppose we had shipping associations all over the state, in close touch the one with the other, could not the over supply in one place find a profitable market where the supply was short, without hold up prices standing between the farmer and his staple food? Wouldn't it pay to cooperate, rather than to pull apart, as we now are doing? Should not the farmer drop his squabbles, and his bickerings, and his pride, and his suspicion, and boost for his neighbor instead of trying to "bust" him?—Farm, Stock and Home.

CLEAN STABLES PREVENT DISEASE.

The bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, in a report on tuberculosis says:

"Life in the open air for cattle as with man, is not always sufficient to prevent infection with tuberculosis or to cure it, but its influence is favorable and reduces the chances of infection to the smallest proportion, while at the same time it places the diseased animal under the best conditions for recovery.

"In most stables the conditions of life are unfavorable in the extreme and radically different from what they are in the open air. Most stables have no provision for ventilation; either there are drafts of air upon the animal, favoring the production of colds and catarrh, or there is an insufficient supply of oxygen. This has had an important bearing on the spread of tuberculosis in cattle, for where there is no ventilation, disease germs carried into a stable are likely to remain there until they infect the animals.

"It is just as desirable that there should be ample provision to let light into the stable, for the direct rays of the sun are of especial value for destroying the germs of consumption and for increasing the resisting power of the animals. In addition to this the sun's rays aid in drying and disinfecting the stable. Light is also necessary to enable those who care for stables to see the dust and filth and to put it into proper sanitary condition. Dark stables are almost universally dirty, damp and unhealthy.

Holstein-Friesian cattle are favorites with the dairy farmers of New York. At the recent state fair an expert declared that the exhibit was one of the best he had ever seen, the cattle being superior in quality and typical of their breed. The Holstein bull shown herewith was a prize winner in the aged class. He is descended from the famous De Kol line.

"A stable must be clean to be sanitary. Cleanliness is the very principle of sanitation and it must be continually kept in view. Not only must the filth on the surface of the floors be removed, but there must be no channels by which it can gather between or beneath the flooring to ferment, putrefy and pollute the atmosphere. The dust which gathers about many cow stables is often more objectionable than the filth on the floors. In infected stables the dust is certain to contain tubercle bacilli, and these are in a condition to be easily floated into the atmosphere and breathed into the animal's lungs.

Winter Quarters For Hogs.

It is very necessary not only for the brood sows and young growing hogs, but particularly so for the fall litters, to have very warm, dry sleeping quarters as far removed from the feeding quarters as possible. Young pigs cannot thrive in cold sleeping quarters or where it is the least bit damp.

The beds for young pigs or even older pigs in winter should be changed at least once a week and better if done twice each week, at which time the floors or ground on which they sleep should be sprayed with crude oil or a good dip, after which a clean dry bed should be again put in. Regarding the various kinds of straw used for bedding, rye straw comes first in quality and durability. It is cleaner, free from shuff, and wears well. Wheat straw, if of good quality and dry, would come second; shredded corn stalks also make a splendid bedding and very durable, but not quite as warm a bed as do the above. Oat straw should be avoided by all means. There is something about oat straw that seems almost poison to the skin of a hog, besides it has no lasting qualities.—A. J. Lovejoy in Berkshire World.

Feeding the Milk Maker.

Maintain the conditions the same throughout the year as found in the early part of the summer. These conditions are described as follows: An abundance of palatable food, balanced ration, succulent ration, moderate temperature, comfortable surroundings.

The following statements indicate in general the amounts to feed:

Feed all the roughage the cow will eat up clean at all times.

Feed one pound of grain per day for each pound of butter fat produced per week or one pound of grain daily for each three pounds of milk.

Feed all the cows will take without gaining in weight.

Water For the Horse.

A horse requires less water when his ration consists largely of concentrated feeds than when much course folder is consumed. Less, yet, of course, is needed if he is given green succulent feeds. He wants from twenty-five to ninety pounds of water a day, depending upon the amount of work he has to do.

THE HORSEMAN.

In order to have a horse stand while you are getting into the wagon never touch him with the whip until you are ready to go.

Wheat bran and oats are what make the bones strong in a colt.

Hay should never be combed from the horses' locks with a currycomb. It makes them nervous.

Colts and mares which have been on pasture all summer should be fed a little grain daily for two or three weeks before they are changed to dry feed for the winter.

If possible every horse stall should be six feet wide and nine feet long, for then the animal can turn around and lie down comfortably. The floor, too, should be nearly level.

Never try to get a horse to eat more salt by mixing it with his grain. Put it before him clear and nature will tell him how much to eat.

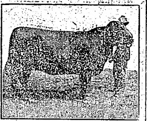
BLUE GRASS FOR BEEF.

Interesting Experiment In Feeding at the Missouri Station.

It remained for the Missouri experiment station to conduct a careful test showing what feeds could be most economically used in connection with blue grass, says Orange Judd Farmer. The work was done under the direction of Professor F. B. Mumford. The main object of the experiment was to determine how to most rapidly increase the weight of cattle during their fattening period and also how to improve the quality of the beef. Representatives of the Hereford, Shorthorn and Angus breeds were used in this test. They were good cattle and were high grades, containing from one-half to seven-eighths pure blood.

The average of the five years' work shows that where nitrogenous supplementary feeds were used with young cattle, the rate of gain was greater than when corn alone constituted the sole grain ration. This is in line with other tests of the kind and was to be expected. One explanation given by Professor Mumford is that the larger gains resulted because of the palatability of the supplementary ration, resulting in the consumption of larger quantities of feed. It was quite fully demonstrated that it is highly profitable to feed at least a limited amount of nitrogenous food during the latter stages of the feeding period, particularly to cattle that have been receiving a grain ration consisting of corn only.

The character of the food had a great deal to do with the quality of the beef, as shown by slaughter tests. It was found that where nitrogenous rations were used, the beef was of a higher character than when corn alone was fed. It was also found that more uniform and consistent gains resulted from the feeding of some nitrogenous material. Then, too, the fatter the animal the more efficient relatively were nitrogenous feeds.



With many of the western breeders and fatteners the Aberdeen-Angus breed of beef cattle is a warm favorite. They are gentle and docile, adapted to early maturity, are very hardy and will withstand adverse conditions as well as other breeds. The cattle are extra good rustlers and thrive well on roughage alone. They are good breeders, and the mothers supply sufficient milk to raise their calves. The steers are second to none for the feed lot, and in looking over prize winners at various shows it will be found that the Angus are there with the goods. The Angus cow herewith pictured is an excellent type of the breed.

The most interesting and important part of the entire test was the relative cost of gains with the different feeds. It was not surprising, therefore, when it was found that the ration containing nitrogen invariably cost more than the ration of corn alone. Furthermore, the relative cost of each 100 pounds of gain was less from the lots receiving shelled corn than from the lots receiving rations in which nitrogen formed a part. The greater rapidity of the gain, however, the higher quality of the product more than offset this difference of cost.

Professor Mumford concludes with the statement that the results of the experiment for many years and with various kinds of cattle clearly indicate the great value of nitrogenous feeds in maintaining the appetite and in securing satisfactory gains during the latter part of the feeding period.

The Self Sucking Cow.

The nuisance of a self sucking cow can be prevented by taking a piece of tough wood about the size of a hoe handle and long enough to reach from the ring in her halter to a surcingle placed around her body just back of the fore legs. With the stick passed between her fore legs and fastened to the girth the cow cannot get her head back to her teats, but she can graze or drink water without any trouble.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Our Little Boy of Fits."

A family can suffer no greater affliction than to have a child subject to fits or epilepsy. Many a father or mother would give their all to restore such a child to health

"I am heartily glad to tell you of our little boy who was completely cured of fits. He commenced having them at 10 years of age and had them for four years. I tried three doctors and one specialist but all of them said he could not be cured, but Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills made a complete cure. He is now hale, hearty and gay. It has been three years since he had the last spell. I shall give Dr. Miles' medicines praise wherever I go. You are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit and anyone writing to me I will gladly answer if they enclose stamp for reply."

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre, of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake County is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this comming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

This Cloud Piercing Road Crosses the Mountains of Peru.

To the question, "Which is the highest railway in the world?" the answer is—the Central Railway of Peru. In other words, the highest point reached by any railway line is touched by this road, where the altitude of the rails reaches 15,865 feet above sea level. To reach this point from sea level the line passes through fifty-seven tunnels, over a dozen principal bridges and utilizes thirteen switchbacks, but has no gradient up to 4½ per cent, nor does it resort to rack propulsion. A hand car started at Ticlio will run unaided to Callao, the seaport, and, as a matter of fact, such a car, equipped with safety brakes, runs before each passenger train, carrying an inspector on the lookout for fallen rocks or other dangers. Ticlio, above referred to, is the highest station in the world, with an altitude of 15,665 feet.

The next highest line in the world is that from Antofagasta, Chile, to Oruro and La Paz, Bolivia. This line has also the distinction of being the narrowest gauge line (two and one-half feet) for such a long distance. The highest point is at Collahuasi, where the altitude is 15,809 feet, fifty-six feet lower than the Peruvian line.—New York Press.

Ancient Tales of the Law.

Of law and the "law's delays" these ancient tales are recorded:

A woman vainly pleading her case many times before Philip of Macedonia received at every refusal the reply that he "had not the time." At last her patience gave out and she said to him, "Then cease to reign." The monarch, feeling that he had deserved this rebuke, immediately listened to her and rendered the justice that her case merited.

Anacharsis, the Scythian philosopher, speaking of the laws of Solon, said, "They were like the web of a spider—very good for holding the weak, but allowing the strong to escape."

A petty thief was being led to prison. Diogenes said to him, "Fool, why didn't you rob on a grand scale? Then it would have been you that would be sending others to prison."

The Painter and the Cobbler.

The painter Apelles, who flourished in the time of Alexander, was shown a picture by an inferior artist who boasted of having sketched it out in an exceedingly short space of time. "Yes, I can see that very well," said Apelles, "but I am surprised that you did not make several other pictures exactly like this in the same space of time."

We are indebted, according to tradition, to this same Apelles for one of our common phrases. The painter had listened with patience and profit to a cobbler's criticism of the sandals in a picture. But when the cobbler began to enlarge the field of his criticism to other parts of the painting he received this rebuke from Apelles: "Shoemaker, stick to your last."

Hibernation.

In the state known as "hibernation" respiration practically ceases. Digestion seems to follow respiration, and the waste of tissue is reduced to the smallest possible limit, the circulation in the meantime being only just sufficient to sustain life. It has been ascertained that animals can endure the loss of tissue until it amounts to 40 per cent of their normal weight. Should the weight be reduced beyond that limit the result is death. It is the stored up fat within the body of the hibernating creatures that sustains them during the many months of cold weather.

A Great Success.

The basket social and dance given by the Catholic Committee at the village hall last Saturday evening was a great success, both socially and financially. It was well attended, not only by local people, but by people from the surrounding towns. The excellent train connections were taken advantage of and a large number of young people from Thief River Falls came down, adding to the general merriment of the occasion.

The baskets brought $275.75, which, after the expenses were paid, left the deserving committee the sum of $251.25.

An Appreciation.

We thank the public for their active part and the willing spirit displayed. Catholic Committee.

They have purchased the pool tables from Harry Lennon, the barber, and will operate these in connection with the restaurant. Mr. Lennon will continue to do business in the same place, devoting his entire time to the barber shop. The restaurant will be ready for business in a day or two.

Friends.

Put your heart into the search for a friend, freely offer assistance to any of the crowd who needs it, and, sooner or later, you will find a hand outstretched toward yours, and your soul will meet its likeness. Do not imitate those who shut up in their individuality as in a citadel, indifferent to all passers by, yet send forth on the four winds of heaven the melancholy cry, "There are no friends!" They do exist, be sure of it, but only for those who seek, for those deeply interested in the search and for those who do not remain content to spin out the thread of life in a corner like a spider's web, intended to catch happiness.

Halleck and Drake.

Fitz Greene Halleck, the poet and author of "Marco Bozzaris," who died in 1867, is buried in the Halleck family plot in the Alderbrook cemetery at Winsted, Conn. The body of his friend, Joseph Rodman Drake, the author of "The American Flag," rests in the old Hunt burying ground in Bronx borough, New York city, now known as Drake's park.—Magazine of American History.

This Cloud Piercing Road Crosses the Mountains of Peru.

To the question, "Which is the highest railway in the world?" the answer is—the Central Railway of Peru. In other words, the highest point reached by any railway line is touched by this road, where the altitude of the rails reaches 15,865 feet above sea level. To reach this point from sea level the line passes through fifty-seven tunnels, over a dozen principal bridges and utilizes thirteen switchbacks, but has no gradient up to 4½ per cent, nor does it resort to rack propulsion. A hand car started at Ticlio will run unaided to Callao, the seaport, and, as a matter of fact, such a car, equipped with safety breaks, runs before each passenger train, carrying an inspector on the lookout for fallen rocks or other dangers. Ticlio, above referred to, is the highest station in the world, with an altitude of 15,665 feet.

The next highest line in the world is that from Antofagasta, Chile, to Oruru and La Paz, Bolivia. This line has also the distinction of being the narrowest gauge line (two and one-half feet) for such a long distance. The highest point is at Collahuasi, where the altitude is 15,809 feet, fifty-six feet lower than the Peruvian line.—New York Press.

Ancient Tales of the Law.

Of law and the "law's delays" these ancient tales are recorded:

A woman vainly pleading her case many times before Philip of Macedonia received at every refusal the reply that he "had not the time." At last her patience gave out and she said to him, "Then cease to reign." The monarch, feeling that he had deserved this rebuke, immediately listened to her, and rendered the justice that her case merited.

Anacharsis, the Scythian philosopher, speaking of the laws of Solon, said, "They were like the web of a spider—very good for holding the weak, but allowing the strong to escape."

A petty thief was being led to prison. Diogenes said to him: "Fool, why didn't you rob on a grand scale? Then it would have been you that would be sending others to prison."

The Painter and the Cobbler.

The painter Apelles, who flourished in the time of Alexander, was shown a picture by an inferior artist who boasted of having sketched it out in an exceedingly short space of time. "Yes, I can see that very well," said Apelles, "but I am surprised that you did not make several other pictures exactly like this in the same space of time."

We are indebted, according to tradition, to this same Apelles for one of our common phrases. The painter had listened with patience and profit to a cobbler's criticism of the sandals in a picture. But when the cobbler began to enlarge the field of his criticism to other parts of the painting he received this rebuke from Apelles: "Shoemaker, stick to your last."

Hibernation.

In the state known as "hibernation" respiration practically ceases. Digestion seems to follow respiration, and the waste of tissue is reduced to the smallest possible limit, the circulation in the meantime being only just sufficient to sustain life. It has been ascertained that animals can endure the loss of tissue until it amounts to 40 per cent of their normal weight. Should the weight be reduced beyond that limit the result is death. It is the stored up fat within the body of the hibernating creatures that sustains them during the many month of cold weather.

A Great Success.

The basket social and dance given by the Catholic Committee at the village hall last Saturday evening was a great success, both socially and financially. It was well attended, not only by local people, but by people from the surrounding towns. The excellent train connections were taken advantage of and a large number of young people from Thief River Falls came down, adding to the general merriment of the occasion.

The baskets brought $275.75, which, after the expenses were paid, left the deserving committee the sum of $251.25.

An Appreciation.

We thank the public for their active part and the willing spirit displayed. Catholic Committee.

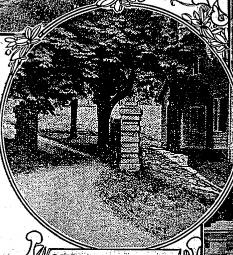
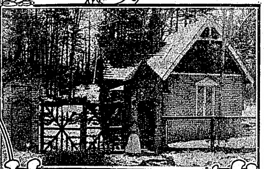
HEDGES, WALLS AND FENCES IN THE RURAL DISTRICTS

ORNATE IRON FENCE ON A RURAL ESTATE

A TOUCH OF THE RUSTIC

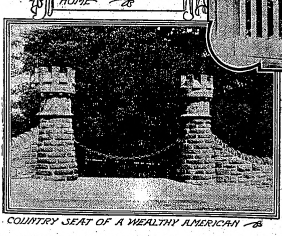


GATEWAY TO A FARM HOME



LODGE AND GATEWAY OF A SOUTHERN PLANTATION

AN OLD-FASHIONED NEW ENGLAND FARM FENCE



COUNTRY SEAT OF A WEALTHY AMERICAN

A NUMBER of different factors have contributed directly or indirectly during the past few years to the appearance of American farms and rural estates as viewed from the highways and railroads. It is safe to say, however, that nothing has been more influential in this direction than the improved means introduced for marking the boundaries of fields and estates. Nor has the provision of better facilities in this respect been confined by any means to the wealthy folk who have taken up country life as a fad and have the means to indulge every caprice in that connection. The common-sense, every-day farmer is fully holding up his end of the responsibility of providing a more orderly countryside.

Until comparatively recent years in most sections of the United States and even yet in many of the more newly settled districts, farm fences were considered solely from the standpoint of utility. This was perfectly natural. A homesteader establishing an agricultural domain or a sheep and cattle ranch in territory recently opened to settlement has other things to think of beside providing ornamental boundary markers for his acreage. And anyway he has numerous heavy drains upon his pocketbook at such a time and probably can ill afford to go in for anything fancy at such a juncture, even though he have the strongest inclinations to have everything about the place in apple-pie order.

These considerations explain how it has been that as each section of the United States has in turn been settled the pioneers have availed themselves of the most economical means of indicating boundary lines. The farmer wants to have his lines, as vouched for by a surveyor, marked clearly, since that forestalls trouble later on and he wants to keep cattle, etc., out of his cultivated tracts, even if he has no stock of his own that he wishes to restricted to a given area. But in the old days no farmer felt that he could afford to lay out much money in fixing such limitations. Almost invariably the pioneer or early settler in any community was anxious to find material for his fences on the place. This will explain the almost universal use in our whole broad farm domain of the old familiar type of zig-zag rail fence. And just here be it noted that it is an admirable type of fence, too. Cheap to construct, if the rails be split from timber on the place; easy to keep in repair; substantial and enduring; it is calculated to yield excellent service. This is the type of fence that Abraham Lincoln constructed and its fame may go down to posterity through the rails which are treasured as precious relics because he split them.

The early settlers in stony districts, such as New England and certain sections of New York, including the famous Mohawk Valley, in many instances made their first fences of stone. In this respect they were in one sense ahead of their times because stone fences are constructed nowadays because of their artistic and picturesque attributes and are preferred by people to whom expense is no object. As a matter of fact a fence of loose stones was never a cheap form of construction. On the fact of things it has always been an extravagance as compared with the rail fence, but the consideration that leads to its selection in many localities was that the land had to be cleared of stones ere it could be tilled. It was no more trouble to pile the stones thus collected in the form of a fence than in a pile which would serve no good purpose and it took less time to thus arrange the stones along the boundary lines than to cart them to some distant dump. So the average farmer working such land killed two birds with one stone, so to speak, and set up fences that in most localities have endured to this day.

The appearance of the wire fence and particularly the barbed wire variety marked a new era in fence building in our rural districts. Nobody has ever contended that the average wire fence was anything very beautiful to look upon, but it has proven a boon to thousands of farmers in the west where timber was too scarce to be wasted on rail fences and where there were no stones to be cleared. The wire fence has proven an even greater boon to stock raisers, many of whom must needs fence large tracts and who are not disposed to quibble over cost if they can get a fence that can be put up quickly and will stand hard usage. Of course the dramatic incidents of "wire cutting" days in the cattle country proved that the wire fence was as easy to destroy as it was quick to build, but of course that turbulent condition is not one that has continued.

And while we are on the subject of the wire fence it may be noted the regeneration of the wire fence has been one of the most marked features of the present era of more presentable farm fences. The treatment that has been accorded many of the old wire fences reminds one—in its ingenious expedient for covering up old material with new—of the scheme now so frequently followed in coating old brick houses with a layer of stucco or concrete that gives them a pristine freshness. In some instances ivy, roses, or rapidly-growing vines of one kind or another have been planted at frequent intervals along a wire fence—say at each post—and in a surprisingly short time the fence becomes a trellis for a luxuriant growth that is bound to charm even the most fastidious person and one to whom a wire fence unadorned would prove a perfect eyesore.

Another present day ruse for making the wire fence unobtrusive and yet retaining all its virtue as a boundary is to have the fence serve as a core for a hedge. The bushes, shrubs or other hedge-making vegetation may be planted on either or both sides (alternately) of the fence and in a few years the presence of wire strands and their supporting posts would be a complete surprise to a person who attempted to pass the barrier, so completely will they be hidden. Indeed, a close growing hedge reinforced by a wire fence has a twofold value as a preventive of trespass by man or beast and many persons of wide experience declare that it is the ideal form. The hedge may be permitted to grow to any height and there is, of course, no necessity for a farmer to keep such a hedge trimmed in symmetrical fashion as is done with those in the formal gardens fo the rich.

The hedge, close-cropped, beautifully rounded and with no wire fence concealed is seen much more frequently than formerly as one traverses the most traveled roads in America. Such hedges, however, usually bespeak the indulgence of some wealthy land holder who is willing to spend freely for the sake of appearances. The invasion of the country districts by this leisure class, retired men of means and so-called gentlemen farmers, has also resulted in the appearance of great numbers of stone and concrete walls. Of course such barriers, likewise the ivy-covered brick walls, are costly and particularly so when we take into account the massive gateways which have usually been provided in such connection. There is no doubt, however, that such walls add much, in the estimation of most persons, to the beauty of our rural landscapes. Indeed, it is the walls and hedges more than anything else which cause returned travelers to grow enthusiastic over rural England.

The iron fence has shared in the stimulated activity but the iron fence, alike to the stone wall, calls for a pretty heavy outlay, although if it is kept painted it will endure for so many years that it is rendered fairly reasonable in the long run. The picket fence, preferably painted white or white and green, continues to have many stanch friends among the farming class and the running board fence which is said to have originated in New England has spread to many other sections of the country and taken on a few frills suggestive of the designs of "barred pie." Rustic work when well done is always mighty effective in any rural surroundings and the picturesque appearance of the logs with the bark on is heightened by the introduction of some bright-hued posies. Another latter day development is seen in the latitude now manifested in the height of the fences in the rural districts. A generation ago pretty much all the fences were about the same height. Nowadays they vary greatly. In some instances where the fence or hedge is purely ornamental its height is very much restricted whereas on the other hand it is not unusual to encounter a wealthy land owner whose desire for privacy has prompted him to erect—at least in the immediate vicinity of his dwelling—a wall so high that a man on horseback cannot see over it. A comparatively low stone wall surmounted by a high iron fence is another form of construction that has been introduced extensively.

HE KNEW.

Sometimes the proverbial "small brother" proves himself a remarkably well informed if tactless person. The brother of a certain confident damsel thus recently addressed a shy and shrinking suitor.

"Mr. Jones, are you going to marry Sister Ruth?"

Mr. Jones (blushing and disconcerted)—Why, sonnie, I—er—I really don't know, you know!

Small Brother (with a giggle)—That's what I thought. Well, you are!

ABOUT CURING MEAT

PROCESS A MYSTERY TO MOST CITY HOUSEKEEPERS.

Good-Sized Piece of Meat May Be Bought Advantageously and Corned—Pickling and Drying Process Explained.

The method of keeping meats the year around is well known to farmers' wives, but a mystery to most city housekeepers. A good-sized piece of meat may be bought advantageously and corned, after cutting off a portion to be used in its fresh state. The rump is best to corn. Beef tongue, fresh ham, veal or mutton are excellent when corned.

A pickle for corning meat in small quantities is made as follows: Four pounds of coarse salt, eight quarts of water, two pounds of brown sugar, one-half pound of saltpeter; stir until salt and sugar are dissolved; then boil and skim, letting the mixture become cold before pouring over the meat. Turn the meat in the pickle every day for a week, which will give it a fine color and flavor. During the summer this pickle may be boiled over with an addition of one cup of salt and one cup of brown sugar to one quart of water, when it will keep sweet for several weeks. A plate or clean flat stone must be used to keep the meat beneath the pickle.

A large beef tongue will have to be kept in the pickle fourteen days before it is ready for use.

Dried Beef.—Select a round of beef and divide in two parts through the middle, rejecting the bone. For twelve pounds of meat allow one-half pound of fine salt, one-quarter ounce of pulverized saltpeter, and one-half pound of brown sugar. Rub this mixture into the meat every morning until it is all used up. At the end of this time hang up in the smokehouse for two weeks to dry. An excess of smoke will ruin the flavor.

Few people in the city have a smokehouse, and this method will be found a very good substitute. Drive nails around the top of a tight barrel, fill an iron pan or pail half full of ashes, build a fire on top of these. Hang the meat by a stout twine on the nails, place a board over the top of the barrel, and cover tightly with an old blanket. This method has been tried in the back yard of a city residence and found practical for smoking two hams, two pieces of beef, and two sausages.

If two or three families will club together and buy their meat wholesale at one of the packing houses they will find that their meat bills will be about one-third what it usually costs.

The LAUNDRY

Borax water will restore the gloss to sateen in washing.

Fine ginghams and percales will emerge from the tub with the gloss and dressing of new material if dipped in sweet milk instead of starch.

Ink stains are sometimes removed by sooking in sour milk and then rinsing in a week solution of chloride of lime.

Try removing mildew by soaking in a weak solution of chloride of lime, then rinsing in cold water.

To erase all traces of scorch stains, wet the scorched place, rub with soap and bleach in the sun.

Use warm water to sprinkle starched clothes and the effect will be twice as satisfactory.

To remove stains of blood soak them in cold salt water, then wash in warm soapy water and finish by boiling.

Grass stains may be eradicated by saturating the stain with kerosene, then putting the garment in the wash tub.

Iron rust stains yield to the following treatment: Soak the stain in lemon juice, sprinkle with salt and bleach several hours in the sun.

Pepper Rice.

One pound of rice mashed in cold water thoroughly. Boil in one quart of water for twenty minutes. Add salt. Strain through sieve and let cold water run on it same as for vegetable. Fry four strips of bacon very crisp. Add chopped onion, one red pepper chopped fine, six large tomatoes, skinned and chopped fine; put all into pot with rice and let cook slowly three hours until it is all dry and each kernel of rice is red and can be separated with a fork. This is a recipe for service for ten persons. Economical and can be warmed over, and is better the second day than when fresh cooked.

To Keep Gas Stoves Polished.

To keep sheet-iron gas stoves polished and looking nice, go over them occasionally with some heavy oil, preferably lubricating or black oil, applying with a soft cloth. This will last twice as long as any blackening or polish. Be careful to avoid oils containing coal oil.—National Magazine.

Graham Biscuits.

One and one-half cupfuls of graham flour, one-half cupful of white flour, one tablespoonful of brown sugar, one egg, one teaspoonful each of salt and soda. Wet with thin, sour cream. Roll one-half inch thick. Bake slowly.

HONEY IS VERY WHOLESOME

Real Value So Out of Proportion to Cost It Should Be on Every Table.

Most suburbanites would keep a few hives of bees if honey values were better understood. Even when the honey must be purchased its real value is so out of proportion to its cost that it should be included among the everyday necessities.

Comparatively few housewives use honey as a substitute for sugar in baking, but managers of large bakeries, always on the alert to find the best and most economical ingredients to use in their productions, value it at its true worth, and use it in making their choicest products, because it provides a variety of flavor. It produces lighter and finer cakes, and those in which it is used have superior keeping qualities.

Honey is in the fat, heat and energy producing class of foods.

Many people who do not keep bees and a few that do consider honey a luxury, when if freely used it will save enough of either butter or sugar to much more than equal its cost. For example: Have a pitcher of strained honey at hand and as each cake is taken from the griddle pour honey over it and fold like an omelet. The result will be cakes that will be "simply delicious" without the use of butter—and every housewife knows that hot cakes call for a great deal of butter when that is used.

Honey has greater sweetening power than sugar and less is needed. In a sponge cake that would call for a cupful of sugar three-fourths of a cupful of honey is sufficient. To make such a cake beat the three-fourths of a cupful of honey with the yolks of three eggs, beat in one cupful of flour, a little at a time, then add four tablespoonful of hot water, and lastly fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the three eggs, with any flavoring desired.

CARE OF THE DINING ROOM

Should Always Be Opened and Aired and Dusted Before Breakfast.

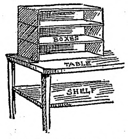
A dining room should always be opened and aired and dusted before breakfast. It may be only a superficial dusting, if time is short, and the more thorough cleaning may be deferred until later. If the table has been set the night before, a light cloth should have been thrown over it to protect the dishes, glasses and silver from the light dust which will settle during the night and this cloth should not be taken off until the carpet sweeper has been run over the floor and the dust wiped from the larger pieces of furniture. Before anything else is done the windows should have been opened wide. If the weather is very cold, ten minutes' airing will suffice.

Grease spots which ocasionally occur on the carpet about the table may sometimes be removed by sponging off the spot with a mixture of one part of common salt to four parts of alcohol. Rub the spot hard. If gravy or something heavy with fat has been spilled, lay a piece of soft paper on the spot, and pass a hot flatiron lightly over it. Repeat the process several times, using a fresh part of the paper every time.

TO MAKE KITCHEN CABINET

Home-Made Affair That Is Easily Made and a Convenient Adjunct to Kitchen.

My kitchen had no kitchen cabinet, but I determined to have one. I had a kitchen table 2 by 4½ feet. I first nailed a cleat across the legs of this table at each end, and on them I laid a shelf. Three boxes 8 by 10 inches and 3½ feet long placed one on top of the other made the cabinet. I covered it inside and out with building paper, Oilcloth would have been better, but the paper can be kept looking nice for a long time by wiping with a damp cloth. Two cracker boxes with the lid hinged, and an inch block nailed on each bottom corner to hold the castors make flour and meal bins, which easily slide under the shelf.—Mrs. Bertha Jackson.



Much Better Than a Table.

Use of Sand Paper.

Keep a piece of sand paper in the machine drawer for rough or blunted needles; a file, too, will quickly smooth a dull machine needle, and scissors may be sharpened on a large needle or the stem of a glass (or piece of glass) by opening and shutting quickly, as if you were trying to cut the glass.

Sash Curtain Hint.

When laundering sash curtains, starch them only part way up, as the rod can be more quickly inserted with less danger of tearing the curtains. I find this a great improvement on the fully starched curtain.

The AWAKING of the OLDER NATIONS

A New World Religion—Syria Now Offers Another Creed for the Allegiance of the Whole Earth, Called Behaism—Many American Followers

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

Haifa, Palestine.—Having given the world Christianity, the one most nearly universally accepted religion, Palestine has now become headquarters of a faith, Behaism, formerly called Babism, which its followers and some writers in Europe and America, claim to be the universal and final religion. Since I have found religion to be, in practice, fundamental to my main thesis in this series of articles, "The Awaking of the Older Nations," I repaired hither to the home of the head of the Bahists and its "Messiah," Abdul Baha Abbas.

It was somewhat of a shock to be told, when I made inquiry at the large gray stone house here, that Abbas Effendi was away on a vacation for his health. The house was full of people, as I could tell by the voices of scurrying females in the echoing hall, when I succeeded in making my presence known at the knobless doorbell. There were several children playing in the large, unsodded yard, and doubtless one of these reported the stranger's coming. These were grandchildren; for Abbas Effendi has four daughters, but no sons. The whole family, or group of families, live in the one house, Oriental fashion. An English governess, who is not a Behaist, lives with them to teach the children.

A "Messiah" at a Summer Resort.

There are no disciples of the Behaist "Messiah" in Syria, except the pilgrims who come here, and the number of these is regulated by Abbas Effendi himself. He is highly spoken of by his neighbors, and especially by the poor, to whom he gives presents, sometimes standing on the corner, and giving away a hundred garments. He is enabled to do this by the rich presents of his followers, who are said to number several million in Persia. Abbas Effendi makes no claim to be a healer, and he himself occasionally needs the doctor's attention. He is simple in his manner of life, and has steadfastly refused to take more than one wife, despite the fact that he has no son, and that his father before him, "The Blessed Perfection," had two wives. His teachings permit polygamy, but they counsel against it.

Incongruous though it seemed to find a "Messiah" gone away to a health resort, I followed Abbas Effendi to Alexandria, in Egypt, where I trailed him by trolley car from a huge summer hotel to a magnificent private house which he has rented for his sojourn. There, hospitably received, for Abbas Effendi is fond of visitors, I had a most interesting interview with the man whom a considerable number of Americans and Britons, and millions in Asia, call "Master," and hail as the latest and fullest manifestation of the Deity.

A New Religion and Its Martyrs.

The proof of martyrdom has been abundantly given to Babism, or Behaism. The Bab himself was executed at Tabriz in 1850, at the age of 31, six years after he had enunciated his gentle doctrines, and had called himself "The Gate," to knowledge, recalling the prophecies of the Bible and the Koran, concerning a coming one. In the bitter persecutions by the Moslems that ensued, the followers of the Bab met death finely. There were few recantations, and in a single year the number of martyrdoms amounted to as many as 10,000.

Two years after the death of the Bab, a group of leaders fled to Bagdad, among them Mirza Hassyn Ali, whom the Bab had called "Beha Ullah," "The Glory of God." He spent two years in the mountains in seclusion and meditation. After a time he announced to a few of his closest friends, that he was the "Manifestation," of whom the Bab had been the forerunner. In 1863 the Bagdad Babists were sent into exile at Adrianople. Five years later Beha, who had come to be generally accepted by Babists as the Messiah (although not without rivals), who thenceforth called themselves "Behaists," was sent into confinement at Akka, a few miles north of Haifa, where he produced many writings, and died in 1892. He was succeeded by his son, Abbas Effendi, who is called by Bahists "Our Master," and "Our Lord." He, too, has had rivals—and the contentions of aspirants for the leadership has been a blot on the history of Behaism, but he seems now to be generally accepted by nearly all professors of the faith. His "Tablets," or messages, are regularly read in the meetings of the faithful.

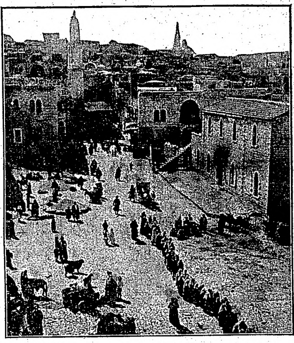
A Picturesque Personality.

The essence of Behaism is the doctrine that messengers, or manifestations, of God, are sent whenever the voice of their predecessor becomes obscured. These "Messiahs" are frequently given as Moses, Zoroaster, Buddha, Christ, Mahomet, and the founders of the Behai faith. Of the Behai manifestations, the last is the fullest revelation of all. So I read in the book upon Behaism which finds most favor with the leaders of the cult. Of course this doctrine makes Abbas Effendi the greatest of all the prophets and incarnations of God; is it any wonder that I should want to see him? Especially so, as all the articles I have read upon him picture him as a very wonderful individual.

In an elegantly furnished modern house I found Abbas Effendi seated on a sofa, waiting for me. He is a striking figure in any garb, and when clad in a white tarboosh, or fez, with a white cloth wound around it, Moslem Style, and a long gray outer cloak of mohair, like a motor coat, and two white cloaks beneath it, he would attract attention anywhere. He resembles, in appearance and manner, General Booth of the Salvation Army, more than any other man I recall. He has the same Roman nose, the same restless, hawk-like eye, the same silver beard and shaggy iron gray locks, the same transparent skin.

As he speaks Abbas Effendi opens wide his big gray eyes beneath his bushy eyebrows, and looks directly at one, giving an appearance of unsimulated interest and sincerity. He is a restless person—doubtless those 40 odd years as a prisoner have left their mark on his nerves—and throughout the interview he wriggled and twisted his body, sometimes revealing the folded red bandana handkerchief upon which he sat; sometimes cocking his fez to the back of his head, and again to the side, and sometimes rakishly forward until it rested on the high bridge of his nose. All the while he was talking he twiddled in his long white hands a string of mother-of-pearls beads, such as gentlemen commonly carry in this part of the world. Altogether, he looks the part of a benevolent old gentleman with considerable force of character.

This positiveness was shown during the interview. A gentle-faced young Englishman, who looked fitter for esoteric discussions than for the football field, had been doing the interpreting, Abbas Effendi speaking in Persian. The most difficult form of interpretation is that of a discussion of abstract themes, and I early saw that the young man's renderings were inadequate; my host saw it, also; and peremptorily ordered one other of his attendants to repeat what he said, sentence by sentence.



Scene in Palestine.

In the room during the conversation, besides the two men mentioned, was a Persian Pilgrim, who wore the green turban that marked him as a descendant of Mahomet; a keen-eyed old fellow, who followed the discussion intently; and another Persian in long black cloak and turban, who looked as if he might sit for an illuminated edition of Omar Khayam; but he went sound asleep during the interview. The conversation lasted for over an hour, and I was cordially pressed to remain and partake of a Persian meal; but a journalist must be careful whose salt he eats, if he is to remain free.

Beharists in America.

After the pleasant generalizations with which the conversation opened, I asked Abbas Effendi concerning the number of his disciples in America, for this has been put as high as a million. He himself avoids the use of the word "disciples," but does not object to its employment by others. I could not get him to give even approximate figures; he contented himself with saying that he had many friends in America and that there are regular spiritual gatherings of these in Washington, Boston and Chicago. It is evidently with these centers that he conducts his correspondence, for the names frequently recurred.

As to the number of Behaists in the world he was equally vague, but wholly honest. When I said that a friend from Persia had told me that fully half the people in Persia are Behaists, he promptly declared that he thought this number entirely too high. Equally candid was he in saying that there are practically no Behaists in Turkey; the following is found chiefly in Persia, and then in India, America, Great Britain, and a scattering in other countries. "Quality," he remarked, "is more important than quantity; better five diamonds than a hundred pebbles." Abbas Effendi has considerable aptness in the art of illustration; this was further shown when we got on the main track of the meaning of Behaism.

An All-Inclusive Religion.

"All religions," said Abbas Effendi, "are substantially the same; there is no real difference. The difference is only in names. There were once a Turk, a Greek, a Persian and an Arab, to whom a piece of money was given in common. Each said in his own tongue what he wanted bought with it, and they had a long and angry discussion. Then along came a man bearing grapes—and lo, that was what they all wanted, but each had used a different name for it. So Moses, Buddha, Confucius, Christ, Mahomet, were all prophets of God. They merely had different names. Each should accept the other."

When this important point was pressed, he affirmed that all Christians should accept Mohamet, as the Jews should have accepted Christ.

"Do you really mean that all religions are essentially the same, and that one is as good as another? Do you include paganism, and idolatry?"

"Yes, they were all right at first, even Buddhism, which has deteriorated, as all religions do." At this point my host's knowledge of the ancient and so-called "ethical faiths," proved so shaky that I abandoned this line of questioning.

He got on to firmer ground by saying: "There have been a thousand unknown prophets in the world. They were truly prophets of God, but the world never recognized them."

"Please tell me what you mean by prophet? That word is often used as meaning any man with a new or helpful message to his time; but you surely do not put the prophets you have named in the same class with the ordinary writer, teacher or preacher today?"

Here again the "Prophet" of the Behaists showed his rare skill at evasion. He took up the figure of the mirror, and dwelt at great length upon that, and would not be diverted; the prophet is the man who best mirrors God. I could not get to him the suggestion that, after all, the mirror does not reflect or impart life, heat or power. Nor could I get past the interpreter the query whether this teaching is not a great comedown for those of Buddha, with his doctrine of man being part of the divine essence; and of Jesus, who professed to give life; and who boldly declared: "I and the Father are one;" and of Mohamet, with his stern claim to be the very voice and representative of God. Interpreters are a great convenience, when there are uncomfortable questions flying around.

What Behaism Stands For.

A definition of Behaism, which to an unsentimental westerner seems rather vague, is the hard thing to secure; so I asked Abbas Effendi, frankly, to give me a categorical definition of the distinctive doctrine of Beharism, "something with hooks to it, so that it will grasp the ordinary man." This he patiently and kindly did.

"First. Behaism believes that all men are brothers, and should so act.

"Second. Behaism believes that there should be no strife of religious creeds. All are equal. No man need change his religion when he becomes a Behaist, whether he is a Moslem, a Christian or a Buddhist.

"Third. There should be no war between races or countries. There should be international brotherhood and international peace." Incidentally, the retainer who had done the interpreting, later told me that Abbas believes that there will be a great war, and then world-wide peace. He also advocates one language and one form of writing.

"Fourth. Behaism teaches its followers to love everybody. In Persia there are Jews, Moslems, Zoroastrians, Buddhists, Brahmins and Christians, who meet in love and concord as Behaists. It removes fanaticism from all sects."

And I verily believe that Abbas Effendi practices his creed, for he is a gentle, kindly man; who, however, has no conception whatever of the high inexorableness of truth. Gen. Lew Wallace's aphorism: "Better law without love, than love without law," would not appeal to him. None the less, his high, fine ideals, embodying as they do, the commonplaces of Christianity, are in consonance with the spirit of the age, and we may expect to see Behaism grow and prosper, especially among sentimental persons. Its claim to be the final and universal religion is scarcely tenable, since it has not bones enough to stand the scalpels of the scholars.

DEVICE FOR FIREMEN

Helmet Enables Wearers to Rescue at Fires.

Has a Reservoir of Air, and Test Shows It to Be Effective—Has Been Adopted in Chicago.

Chicago.—Chicago fire officials have adopted a life-saving device to prevent suffocation. The apparatus resembles a life-saver's helmet and dress.

Lieut. Philip Ryan donned the apparatus in a test.

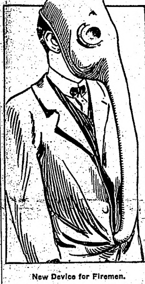
"It works fine," he declared, emerging from a subcellar filled with smoke. "I could breathe without any trouble. I figure that this new device will prove a great life saver."

Held close to the head by means of springs, the apparatus prevents the entrance of gas or other fumes. The fireman breathes through tubes connected with the body of the apparatus.

"The apparatus is just donned for the purpose of life saving," declared Thomas O'Connor, acting chief of the Chicago fire department.

"It is only possible to work in this uniform for about five minutes. That, however, would give us time to enter a building to rescue persons and emerge. Although we have made tests of the new apparatus, we have not as yet had occasion to bring it into actual use."

A New York device, which Chicago firemen believe to be impractical, is supposed to supply air to firemen working in cellars and lofts and is said to have withstood various tests. Alongside the nozzle carried by the firemen using the Halloran contrivance is a brass tube to which is connected a line of one-inch hose extending to the open air in the street.



New Device for Firemen.

This hose furnishes air for a suction which is caused by the powerful force of water sent through the nozzle.

The water rushes by an apparatus having direct connection with the air feeding pipe, and forms a syphon, which in turn is supplied to firemen. There are three supply pipes on the first model and these are held by the firemen in their mouths, with a hard rubber holder, which is perforated and looks like the noseguards worn by football players.

"While I will not say positively, not knowing anything about the experiments of the New Yorkers, it appears to me that a contrivance built according to the description would not be practical," said Assistant Chief O'Connor. "I have never yet heard of a contrivance which would protect firemen from smoke and fumes, especially ammonia fumes, for any great length of time.

"I consider our new device, which we have just adopted, is the nearest to perfection. We have tested it and have remained in smoke-filled basements for five minutes at a time."

MOUNTAINEER IS AN ADAM

Strange Man in the North Georgia Mountains Has Gone Naked for 61 Years.

Savannah, Ga.—Word comes via the North Georgia mountains of a strange man named John Castellow, who has grown to be 61 years of age, hale, hearty and happy, without ever wearing a stitch of clothing and without ever using a single word but the monosyllable "Gee!" Says a traveler from Harris, describing the marvelous person:

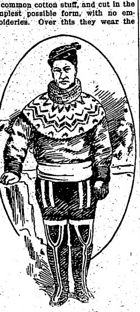
"He lives four miles east of Windsor, in Bertie county, North Carolina, and his health is perfect. He has not missed a meal in fifty years.

"When I visited him he was entirely nude. He is the strongest man I ever saw. His body is normal and well shaped, but his strength is prodigious. He can break a double plow line as easily as if it were a cotton cord. He is gentle and has never been known to hurt a living soul intentionally. He cannot speak a word except the one monosyllable 'Gee.' which he uses in various intonations to express all his desires and emotions."

DRESS OF THE ESKIMO WOMEN

Their Apparel Is the Same Summer and Winter and Is Worn in the Same Way.

New York.—The dress of the Eskimo women is the same summer and winter, and is worn in the same way, writes Anna Bistrup, wife of the Danish governor of Greenland, in The Century. It consists first of a shift—which, in spite of the name, is, nevertheless, not shifted very often—made of common cotton stuff, and cut in the simplest possible form, with no embroideries. Over this they wear the timiak, or bird's skin, with its colored cotton stuff for daily use, and woolen, silk or velveteen for Sundays and holidays. The hood is never used by the women, who always leave it hanging down. Around the neck the young girls wear a collar more than a quarter-yard wide, made of glass pearls, set in the most varied patterns. This pearl collar is worn only by young girls, and by wives until they have got their first child. After that, the pearls are used as fringes and tassels for the amaut.



Eskimo Girl in Full Dress.

The pet garments of the girls, and of married women, too, are the breeches and the kamiks. They take much time to make these garments as fine as possible. The breeches, which are worn next the bare body, are made of costly sealskins or reindeer skins. They are not fastened to the body by anything, but their stiffness keeps them in place. The Greenlanders know nothing of buttons or hooks or buckles or braces, at least on the women's garments.

The kamiks consist of an inner stocking of skin with the hair inside, and an outer boot made of dyed or painted skin in the most screeching colors—bright red, blue, violet. The most valued are the white half-boots which are used on Sundays, holidays, and on certain occasions like marriages. The sole of the kamik is not hard and stiff, but soft and pliable. Between the soles of the inner and outer kamik is a layer of straw, that every day must be taken out and dried.

The hair-top, the national headdress, is the darling of every young girl, and is put up twice or thrice a week. It is not taken down at night, and the women sleep with the top hanging out over the pillow's edge, which looks exceedingly funny if one happens into a sleeping-room at night. Round the top are wound ribbons of different colors, like standards, announcing the state of their bearers. The wives wear blue in all shades, the maidens red, the unmarried mothers green in all shades, and the widows wear black. All other colors are forbidden. In front they like to fasten on the ribbon some shining object, a brooch or an old ear-ring. For lack of other things, they will pin on a piece of colored silver or gold paper. To get the top firm and stiff, the hair must be drawn very tight. In some the hair on each side of the head is torn out, and two large bald spots appear, which are not very becoming.

STEAL $21,000 IN TOWELS

Passengers on the Southern Pacific Railway Also Take Linen From Boats.

San Francisco, Cal.—Twenty-one thousand dollars' worth of towels were "lost" by the Southern Pacific railroad last year and for that reason women who ride on its trains and boats will be compelled to furnish their own towels hereafter. The towels were stolen from the washrooms on the trains and boats, as many as a hundred towels disappearing on one run. Even roller towels were taken, though the company padlocked the racks to keep them from being removed. The towel thieves simply cut the towels and slipped them off. Individual towels disappeared so fast that they were replaced with rollers after being used but a short time.

Sees a Cure in Poetry.

Louisville, Ky.—"Poetry has as practical value as vaccination," declared Rev. Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary here in an address to a local literary club. Duly read and appreciated, he said poetry is a real cure for the diseases which attend the feverish quest for gold. This virtue, he reasons, lies in the fact that thorough enjoyment of it demands relaxation.

CANADA'S IMMENSE WHEAT FIELDS

THE ATTRACTION FOR THREE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAYS.

Last August there visited the Canadian west the vice-president of the largest individual hardware company in the United States. As his firm have a turnover of millions, and deals extensively with farm implements, this man took a deep interest in crop conditions in Canada, and on his return he embodied his findings in an article for the Hardware Reporter. This article should be of special interest to farmers.

The writer speaks of the importance of the spring wheat crop of Western Canada. He might also have spoken of the importance of the oat crop and also of the winter wheat crop, as well as barley. Winter wheat during the past few years has been a great success, and experiments have shown that it can be grown with success in almost any portion of the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. But apart from this, the spring wheat crop is the one generally grown, and all who know anything of grain, anyone who has had anything to do with markets, knows or has heard of the high character of this cereal and the splendid yields that are annually produced. Reproducing from this article:—

"In a land of such great sweep, and of such difference in soil and climate, there are many resources, but none are at present of the same overwhelming importance as the spring wheat crop. In the interminable prairie stretches of the northwest provinces it is the one absorbing topic of interest and of conversation during its growing and its harvesting, for upon its success or failure hangs the weal or woe of a large part of the Dominion. Its influence extends far down into the United States, drawing thousands of farmers northwards with the lure of cheap lands, but likewise beyond the great lakes, even to the easy going maritime provinces, calling the flower of their young men to its opportunities. Development in these prairie provinces goes on at high pressure for everything hangs on the outcome of spring wheat. Success has emboldened the raisers of this one all-important crop, and each year there is further incursion into those northern fields that only a short time ago were regarded as Arctic wastes. The Canadian Northwest seems to be one of those modern agricultural examples set forth to drive the final nail in the coffin of that ancient Malthusian delusion that population tends to outrun the means of subsistence, since the only fear now among Canadian economists is as to the danger of overstocking the wheat market. Only about two and one-half per cent of possible arable lands in the northwest provinces is now under cultivation, and this year the crop promises to be close to 200,000,000 bushels, so that your imagination and your arithmetic can easily supply the answer as to the possible or even probable outcome."

During the months of July and August the weather was unfavourable and the production of a 200 million yield of wheat will not likely be realized, but even with this, the threshing reports coming to hand show that the crop will be a splendidly paying one.

FIGHT IS ON DEC. 4

ARRAY OF COUNSEL TO APPEAR BEFORE THE U. S. CIRCUIT COURT IN TRENTON

IN U. S. STEEL DISSOLUTION

Loser to Appeal and Supreme Tribunal Will Decide the Issue—Oil and Tobacco Rulings Are Not Criterion.

Washington, D. C.—The United States Steel corporation's first step in the legal battle with the government for its existence will be taken Monday, Dec. 4. On that day an array of counsel which promises to include some of the most brilliant legal minds in America, will formally appear before the United States circuit court at Trenton, N. J., in which the government's dissolution suit has been brought.

On Jan. 2, 1912, the steel corporation is expected to file its answer to the government's sensational charges, which hardly have been paralleled in all the anti-trust suits brought by the department of justice.

Several legal maneuvers, of which the steel corporation's lawyers could avail themselves, may postpone the date of their answer, for they have the right to ask the court to give 30 days more grace, thus extending their time to Feb. 2.

In the meantime, they may demur to some of the government's allegations or they may file a bill of exceptions. Either action would automatically delay the actual beginning of the trial. The government expects that none of the formalities of law will be overlooked by its opponents. It is possible, however, that no legal technicalities may be thrown in the way in that case, the earliest date upon which the trial can begin is Jan. 2.

Three Judges to Name Master.

The procedure will be for Judges Gray, Lanning and Buffington to appoint a master to hear testimony. The master so appointed will take evidence in various parts of the country. It required a year and a half to take the testimony in the Standard Oil case. The government expects to do as well in the steel case.

When the taking of testimony is finished and both sides have been heard, the circuit court will decide the issue. Whichever side loses will appeal and by the operation of the so-called expediting act, the case will jump to the supreme court, where the fate of the greatest corporation in the world will be decided.

Department of justice officials do not feel that the supreme court decisions in the oil and tobacco cases will decide the steel case. Attorney General Wickersham declared he is convinced more than ever that each case must be settled on its own merits and that the oil and tobacco cases cannot fairly be called models for solving the trust question.

The attorney general was asked if he hoped the steel corporation would volunteer to readjust its organization and avert a further prosecution of the suit, as has been done by the International Harvester company, the electrical trust, the Southern Grocers' trust, and some other combinations. He indicated that he expected no such conciliatory movement.

Department of justice officials think it will be a fight to the finish. Mr. Wickersham declined to say if he is preparing or considering criminal prosecution of any of the defendants in the case.

It was declared that Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, who has been engaged as the government's special counsel, would occupy the same position in the case against the steel corporation that Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul did in the Standard Oil case.

It was intimated at the department of justice that the government considers its case practically complete. Special agents who have worked for the last two years or more still are gathering some loose ends, but on the whole the attorney general feels confident in going to trial on what evidence has been obtained.

GOVERNORS, CONGRESSMEN AND OTHERS TO BE CHOSEN.

Chicago, Illinois.—Although the elections to be held Nov. 7 will be quiet compared with the presidential struggle one year hence, interest in them nevertheless is keen. There will be elections of varying importance in a number of states.

The Republican ticket is headed by Louis A. Frothingham, the present lieutenant governor. In New York a new assembly will be elected, as well as several justices of the supreme court.

New Mexico votes for the first time in its history as a state, for a full set of state officers, members of congress and for a supreme court, eight district judges and eight district attorneys. Arizona, on Dec. 12, will hold its first state election for state officers, the date having been fixed by proclamation.

Ohio will vote for municipal officers and delegates to the constitutional convention. Georgia will hold a primary to nominate a candidate for governor to succeed Gov. Hoke Smith, who soon will resign to become United States senator.

Maryland, besides electing a governor, will choose a state comptroller, attorney general, judge of the court of appeals, the full membership of the house of delegates and half of the senate. New Jersey will elect a legislature.

In Nebraska judges of the supreme court, a railway commissioner and regents of the state university are to be elected, as well as a successor to the late Representative Latta in the third district. In Kansas, successors to the late Representatives Mitchell and Madison will be chosen.

Five parties in Rhode Island, where a full ticket is to be elected, have nominated candidates. A legislature also will be chosen.

IMPERIALS WHIP REBELS.

Hankow Again in Possession of the Manchus.

Shanghai, China. — Wireless dispatches from Hankow reporting a sweeping victory for the Imperial troops there caused a flutter in Shanghai. The reports were received even in official circles with incredulity. Rebel sympathizers declared that the dispatches were undoubtedly sent from a government source to bolster up a faltering cause.

The wireless dispatches were caught by some of the German naval operators. They gave no details but said that there was fighting all day at Hankow and that the result was a sweeping government victory compelling the revolutionists to abandon Hankow and fall back across the Han river into Han Yang.

Whatever the situation around Hankow matters have grown more desperate for the government cause in the vicinity of Shanghai and along the lower part of the Yang Tse river. There were persistent reports that Ching Kiang, 150 miles above Shanghai, was about to fall into the hands of the rebels. Ching Kiang is the first of the series of lower river forts above Shanghai and is regarded here as the keystone of the defense of the city. If it falls, it is conceded that all the forts below it as far as Wu Sing will quickly follow.

Wu Sung, 10 miles above Shanghai, marks the city's last line of defense. West of Shanghai the wealthy city of Su Chow is threatened, while above Ching Kiang three important cities, Nan King, Yang Chow and Wu Hu are believed to be in danger. All four of these cities reported that while the situation was still quiet there is open sympathy for the rebel cause and probably little effective resistance will be offered to attack.

John R. Walsh is Dead in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill. — John R. Walsh, former banker, publisher and railroad owner, released a week ago from the Leavenwort penitentiary, died of heart disease. Mr. Walsh was 74 years old. Death came just after his release on parole from the penitentiary, where he had served one year, eight months and twenty-six days of a five years' sentence on a charge of misappropriating the funds of the bank to the use of private enterprises. Walsh's health failed soon after his entrance to the penitentiary.

Steel Stock Loses Five Points.

New York, N. Y.—There was a wild rush to sell United States Steel stock, as a result of the government's dissolution suit. The common stock opened with the sale of 28,000 shares and fell to 53½, a loss of 5 points. The preferred stock fell 5⅝.

Shoots His Sleeping Family.

Parkersburg, West Virginia. — Carroll L. James, a railroad conductor of this city, shot and killed his father-in-law, William Pritchard, Jr., probably fatally wounded his mother-in-law, slightly injured his wife and committed suicide at Pennsbora, Ritchie county, W. Va. The tragedy is the climax of a series of sensational occurrences in this city about six weeks ago, when James shot Seymour Kuhn of Fairmont, W. Va., a fellow railroader, whom he alleged he had found with his wife at the James home.

PULITZER IS DEAD

PASSES AWAY WHILE HIS SECRETARY READS HIM DEATH OF LOUIS XI.

THE END CAME "SOFTLY"

Great Journalist Succumbs to Heart Failure.—Was Owner of New York World and St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Charleston, So. Carolina. — Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch died aboard his yacht, the Liberty, in Charleston harbor. The immediate cause of Mr. Pulitzer's death was heart failure. He had been in ill health for several days, but until a few hours before the end, none suspected the gravity of his condition.

Mrs. Pulitzer, who had been sent for, reached the yacht shortly before her husband died. At his bedside when the end came also was his youngest son, Herbert, who has been cruising with his father. The funeral will be held at Woodlawn cemetery in New York.

Mind Clear Near the End.

Up to an hour and a half before his death Mr. Pulitzer's mind remained perfectly clear. His German secretary had been reading to him an account of the reign of Louis XI of France, in whose career Mr. Pulitzer had always taken the liveliest interest.

As the secretary neared the end of his chapter and came to the death of the French King, Mr. Pulitzer said to him:

"Leise, ganz leise" (Softly, quite softly).

These were the last words he spoke.

Leading Figure in Journalism.

For more than a quarter of a century Joseph Pulitzer has been one of the leading figures in American journalism. Born in Hungary in 1847 and educated there, he came to this country in 1863, enlisted in the Union army, and served as a cavalryman until the end of the war, when he settled in St. Louis, which for many years was to be the scene of his journalistic activities.

His early newspaper training was as a reporter and afterwards city editor, managing editor and part proprietor of the Westliche Post, edited by Carl Schurz. He bought the St. Louis Dispatch which, under his management, became in a few years one of the best known and most widely circulated journals of the section.

Mr. Pulitzer's entry into New York journalism occurred in 1883, when he bought the World, then a paper of small circulation. Its circulation and prestige grew rapidly under his general direction. A building to house it, which he erected in 1890 on Park Row, was, until overtopped by the skyscrapers of later years, one of the most striking of New York office buildings.

Became Totally Blind.

Mr. Pulitzer's sight began to fail him in the late eighties and after a time he became totally blind. Ever since, he had been a partial invalid, but up to the last had kept general supervision over his newspaper properties here and in St. Louis, and taken pronounced interest in civic affairs. Much of his wealth has been given for educational purposes. He donated $1,000,000 to Columbia college to establish and maintain a college of journalism and established scholarships in that institution for deserving boy graduates of New York public schools.

During his residence in Missouri, Mr. Pulitzer served as a member of the legislature and was a delegate from that state to the Democratic national convention in 1880. He was elected to the 49th congress from a New York district, but resigned after a few months' service.

Before becoming a reporter, Pulitzer, after leaving the army, worked successively as a deck hand, longshoreman, hostler, waiter, coachman, grave digger and member of the Missouri legislature.

Cleveland, Ohio. — Gordon Taylor, 20, son of the janitor of a fashionable apartment house, and his 17-year-old bride, heiress to $100,000, with whom he eloped last week to Windsor, Canada, where they were married, returned and were received and forgiven by the girl's relatives. The bride, who was Miss Elizabeth Weeks, lived with her grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Weeks. When the couple eloped, relatives of the girl reached Windsor too late to prevent the marriage.

Chicago, Illinois.—Roger C. Sullivan, democratic committeeman, denied before the United States senate committee investigating the election of William Lorimer, that he had helped elect Lorimer.

Frank Gould Has Operation.

New York, N. Y. — Frank J. Gould was operated on for appendicitis.

Capitalist Shot; Girl Wounded.

San Jose, Calif. — Simon Romero, of Monterey, a capitalist, was killed, and Miss Helen Quezada, daughter of Francisco Quezada, a millionaire planter of Costa Rica, was wounded by Manuel Garcia, a stableman. Miss Quezada had reprimanded him for riding her thoroughbred horse without permission. Miss Quezada's life probably was saved by Mrs. Ampreao Zeledon of Costa Rica, a guest at the Quezada home, who jumped on the murderer's back as he ran at the girl aiming his revolver.

NIAGARA BY MOTOR BOAT

CAPTAIN LARSON MAKES HAZARDOUS TRIP SECOND TIME.

Has Hard Battle With Stream in His Sturdy Fifteen-Foot Launch.

Niagara Falls, N. Y. — Capt. Klaus Larson, of Detroit, made his second Niagara river trip in a motor boat from the cataract to Lewiston. He completed the six-mile trip through the turbulent water in 25 minutes, coming through without a scratch. Larson says he is through with Niagara adventures, but next year will make a trip across the Atlantic in his boat, the Niagara.

Larson started from the Canadian Maid of the Mist dock at 1:50 o'clock and swept under the lower steel arch bridge five minutes later. Coming into Swift Drift, where the river breaks from the calm upper reach to the rapids, he veered toward the Canadian side.

The boat rode the small waves without a tremor, but, caught by the fierce current about midway of the rapids, she was hurled up and almost clear of the mountains of water. Once the craft was side-swiped and almost keeled over by a comber. The rapids trip took hardly more than a minute.

As the Niagara entered the whirlpool her engine was working perfectly. Larson kept towards the American side of the pool, but he was caught in a cross-current and was almost drawn into the vortex.

Once clear of the whirlpool, Larsen headed the boat up stream in order to put things shipshape for the final test in the Devils Hole rapids.

He was badly buffeted in the lower rapids, but managed to hold a course close to the Canadian side and at 2:14 o'clock passed under the suspension bridge at Lewiston. He had made the five miles between the bridges in 19 minutes.

Larsen made his first trip through Sept. 18, 1910. The Niagara is 15 feet long, 5 feet 6 inches beam and 4 feet deep. The engine is 14-horsepower. About 700 pounds of sand ballast was used.

NEW COMET NEARING EARTH.

Wisconsin Astronomers Have Sighted Heavenly Wanderer Twice.

Williams Bay, Wisconsin.—A new comet rapidly is approaching the earth. Astronomers have sighted it twice and the Yerkes observatory scientists are maintaining a constant watch for it.

The new heavenly body bodes no ill for terrestian conditions, according to Professor Edwin Kenrost of the observatory, but it will be of much benefit to astronomers, providing it comes close enough to the earth that its proximity to the sun may be measured. Present measurements of celestial distances is a matter of proportionate computation, and scientists expect to be able to complete the existing tables of distances by comparing with them the measurements obtained of the new wanderer, should it come close enough.

STEAMER CUT IN TWO.

Freight Boat Multnomah Sinks in Collision on Puget Sound.

Seattle, Washington. — In a dense fog the steamship Iroquois, outbound from Seattle with passengers for Victoria, struck the freight steamer Multnomah of Tacoma, bound for Seattle, and cut her in two. The Multnomah sunk in deep water. All persons on board were saved. Fifteen head of cattle went down with the Multnomah. The Iroquois proceeded apparently undamaged.

ITALIANS BEATEN

ACCORDING TO INDIRECT INFORMATION COMING THROUGH TURKISH SOURCES.

TURKS BACK IN TRIPOLI

Arabs Reported to Have Been Severely Treated by Invaders—Bloody Reprisals Expected.

Washington, D. C. — The Turkish embassy received unofficial dispatches confirming reports that Turkish troops recaptured part of the city of Tripoli. These messages came indirectly and do not represent an official Turkish statement on the subject.

The state department received a message from Consul John Q. Wood at Tripoli, stating that Italian forces have not treated Arabs as severely as some reports have indicated.

Rome.—The Italian nobility, like the people, are paying tribute in blood in the African conquest. Word has reached here of the death in action at Homs, Tripoli, of Duke Riccardo Grazioli Lante Della Rovere, a lieutenant in the navy and of the serious wounding of Count Pompeo Di Campello, a lieutenant of cavalry and gentleman in waiting to the king.

Both officers had many friends among Americans and were well known as sportsmen, the duke as an exponent of tennis and Count di Cambello as master of fox hounds.

London.—The Tripoli correspondent of the Times, describing Italian retribution upon the Arabs, says that although the ruthless measures employed were not commended, yet the necessity for drastic action to quell the insurrection could not be denied.

"The Italians have set themselves to cow the Arabs," continues the correspondent, "the floodgates of blood and lust were opened and in many cases the men got beyond control. The innocent suffered with the guilty, and the memory of this awful retribution will take long to live down.

"Even making allowances for the exigencies of the military situation, there is every possibility that the hideous severity employed by the Italians will give rise to a war of sanguinary and pitiless reprisals upon unfortunates who fall by the wayside."

COMMITTEE CALL ISSUED.

Republicans to Seat 1,072 Delegates in Convention.

Washington, D. C. — The call for the republican national convention to be issued by the national committee when it meets in Washington, Dec. 12, will provide for 1,064 delegates, to be increased to 1,072 if Arizona and New Mexico become states before the convention is held. The increase from 980 delegates which comprised the Chicago convention in 1908, is the result of the reapportionment by congress, which increases the size of the house of representatives from 391 to 433 members.

A table showing the apportionment of the delegates to the 1912 convention has been prepared. The distribution follows:

Alabama 24, Arkansas 18, California 26, Colorado 12, Connecticut 14, Delaware 6, Florida 12, Georgia 28, Idaho 8, Illinois 58, Indiana 30, Iowa 26, Kansas 20, Kentucky 26, Louisiana 20, Maine 12, Maryland 16, Massachusetts 36, Michigan 30, Minnesota 24, Mississippi 20, Missouri 36, Montana 8, Nebraska 16, Nevada 6, New Hampshire 8, New Jersey 28, New York 90, North Carolina 24, North Dakota 10, Ohio 48, Oklahoma 20, Oregon 10, Pennsylvania 76, Rhode Island 10, South Carolina 18, South Dakota 10, Tennessee 24, Texas 40, Utah 8, Vermont 8, Virginia 24, Washington 14, West Virginia 16, Wisconsin 26, Wyoming 6.

Territories of Alaska, Arizona, District of Columbia, Hawaii, New Mexico, Philippine Islands and Porto Rico 2 delegates each.

The basis of delegates for the republican convention is: Four at large in each state, and two for each congressional district. The large gains in the state delegations will be: New York, 12; Pennsylvania, 8; Oklahoma and California, 6 each; Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Texas, Washington, 4 each. Other states either will gain two each, or retain the apportionment of the 1908 Chicago convention.

TRY LUMBERMEN

FIFTH OF GOVERNMENTS SUITS IS BEGUN AT ST. PAUL.

ARE NORTHWESTERN MEN

One of the Series of Suits Against Secretaries of Lumber Associations for Maintaining a System of Blacklists.

Minneapolis. — The federal government's fifth suit in its fight to break up the so-called lumber trust has begun in the United States court in St. Paul. The bill, was filed by C. C. Haupt, United States district attorney, of St. Paul, in Minneapolis, where most of the defendants reside.

It is directed against the Northwestern Lumbermen's association, the Lumber Secretaries' Bureau of Information; an Illinois corporation already under fire in another suit against the trust brought in Colorado; Luke W. Boyce, owner of a private detective agency in Minneapolis, Minn., who is charged with spying upon independent lumber dealers who had the temerity to violate the trade "ethics" laid down by the alleged trust, and the Lumberman Publishing company, a Minnesota corporation which issues the Mississippi Valley Lumberman, a trade journal which the government charges has been the organ of the "trust" in that section.

Platt B. Walker, of Minneapolis, editor of that paper, is made a defendant, as are the following, as being members, officers or directors in the Northwestern Lumbermen's association.

W. R. Wood, Parker; Charles Webster, Waucoma, Iowa; Willard G. Hollis, Minneapolis, Minn.; George P. Thompson, Minneapolis; C. M. Porter, Oskaloosa, Iowa; E. G. Flinn, Minneapolis; O. M. Botsford, Winona, Minn.; W. H. Day, Jr., Dubuque, Iowa; M. T. McMahon, Fergus Falls, Minn.; C. A. Finkbine, Des Moines, Iowa, and John W. Barry, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

As in similar suits now pending against the Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' association, the Michigan Retail Lumber Dealers' association, the Colorado and Wyoming Lumber Dealers' association and the Lumber Secretaries Bureau of Information (14 members of the later organization being under criminal indictments charging violations of the Sherman anti-trust law), the government alleges that the lumber trade has been unreasonably restrained by illegal agreements and understandings which prevent the consumer from buying of whom and where he will, which absolutely forbid competition for trade and which have divided the country into non-competitive territories. It is also alleged that names of lumbermen who have violated the "ethics" have been published to the trade in the Mississippi Valley Lumberman.

The bill alleges many acts in pursuance to an alleged conspiracy covering several years and that some of them were perpetrated and in form ceased several years ago, but each act is alleged to have been part of a carefully devised plan by which first one restriction and then another fastened upon the lumber trade and when once fixed was to all appearances abandoned and substituted with one less iniquitous.

The theory of the bill is that while no one of the separate acts performed now might be taken as a violation of law, when considered alone, they are but a part of a general plan and that by the alleged "continuing conspiracy," an apparently harmless act is now directly contributory to the original scheme of restriction and oppression of which the government complains.

All the allegations in the bill, which is replete with exhibits of letters, lists, resolutions and minutes of meetings, indicate that the government is in possession of much original evidence.

The bill relates in great detail the government's allegation that dealers who insisted upon selling to whomever they pleased were constantly under the surveillance of the defendant, Boyce, and his detectives, who reported all "irregular" business to their employers—the Northwestern Lumbermen's association; that the reports of such espionage were cent to the lumber secretaries' bureau of information, through which they were sent to the 20 or more territorial organizations of the so-called trust, in addition to being published in the Mississippi Valley Lumberman.

The government asks injunctions restraining all the defendants from continuing the acts of which complaint is made. The suit is in direct charge of Clark McKercher, special assistant to Attorney General Wickersham, who has directed the government's fight against the alleged trust all over the country.

MINNY LEAGUE IN TWIN CITIES.

Formal Application Will Be Made to American Association.

Duluth. — The Minny league magnates, meeting in Superior, Wis., ordered their secretary to make application to the American association to permit the league to place clubs in the cities now occupied by the American association. Assurance is said to have been given that this will be permitted. The Minny league magnates will meet in Minneapolis two weeks hence.

GUARDS INDIGNANT.

Stillwater Company Members See Politics in Transfer to the First.

Stillwater.—A political expediency, shrouded with secrecy and under the guise of a militia improvement, is the way the changes in the First regiment of the National Guard have been characterized in this city. That the movement will cut both ways in the popularity of Governor Eberhart is the opinion of men who are interested in politics and National Guard affairs.

It was rumored that Company K of this city and Company G of Red Wing were to be transferred to the Third regiment and Minneapolis to be allowed to organize companies to take their places in the First.

A further surprise came when inquiry at the office of the adjutant general in St. Paul revealed the fact that such an order had been made as long ago as September 25. The movement had been kept secret, and the wish was expressed at the state capitol that the facts be kept quiet for the present.

The belief is prevalent in this city that Minneapolis, with the approval of the government and adjutant general, slipped it over on St. Paul, Stillwater and Red Wing to get favor from Colonel Luce. It has developed that the changes were decided on soon after Colonel Luce took command of the First regiment, succeeding Colonel Reeve, but at the request of Colonel Luce, on September 25, promulgation of the order was to be delayed until Colonel Luce could organize two Minneapolis companies. No one of Company K, other officers of the First regiment or former members of the National Guard in Stillwater were given an inkling of the proposed change, and many of them are indignant as a result.

MILLIONS MADE IN DAIRYING.

Returns From Blue Earth County for Six Years Shows Big Total.

St. Paul.—Blue Earth county farmers have received nearly $2,250,000 for milk sold to their local creameries in the last six years, according to figures compiled by the state dairy and food department. The figures reported to the department, which show a steady increase from a little more than $500,000 in 1910, are typical of the growth of the dairy industry in nearly every county in the state, according to F. W. McIntosh, secretary of the commission.

The annual reports of the creameries are slow in coming in, and Blue Earth is one of the few counties that have furnished complete statistics. The figures from Blue Earth county for the six years follow:

Year.	Number of Creameries.	Paid Patrons for Butter Fat.	Pounds Butter Made.
1905	18	$207,137.45	1,393,743
1906	19	326,443.79	1,765,576
1907	17	351,630.46	1,639,796
1908	17	354,150.40	1,693,185
1909	18	454,432.22	1,730,470
1910	19	522,949.01	1,967,589
Totals		$2,216,744.02	10,190,289

CHURCH WOMEN ORGANIZE.

Women's Auxiliaries of the Mankato Deanery Meet at Mankato.

Mankato.—At a meeting of representatives of the women's auxiliaries of the Episcopal church in the Mankato deanery, a permanent organization was perfected by the election of the following officers: President, Mrs. W. D. Stires of St. Peter; vice president, Mrs. William M. Strader of Mankato; secretary, Mrs. George F. Nutter of St. Peter; treasurer, Mrs. Ada Pfeffer of Mankato.

The organization represents twenty-two congregations in the southwestern portion of the state, and it is the intention to hold two meetings each year. Fifteen delegates from outside towns attended the meeting and were entertained at dinner by the ladies of St. John's Episcopal church. Mrs. H. A. Tomlinson of St. Peter made a report of the woman's auxiliary of her church and told of the work being done.

The object of the new organization is to increase and make more efficient the work of the women in commissions in this deanery.

EBERHART LOSES OUT IN SUIT.

Jury Decides Governor and Others Must Pay $23,000.

Mankato.—Gov. A. O. Eberhart and three other Mankato men, Fred Kron, T. R. Coughlan and W. G. Hoerr, will have to pay $23,000 to the federal government if the verdict of a jury rendered here in the United States court stands.

The action was brought for the First National bank of Belle Fourche by the government on a bond given by the Widell-Finley company, to insure the faithful performance of its contract to construct the irrigation canal near Belle Fourche. The company failed before completing the contract.

The government also sued the bondsmen to recover $59,000, the cost to complete the canal, and this suit was tried with the other one, but the jury found for the defendants. The latter will appeal in the case in which they lost.

RATE WAR ON IRON ORE

RESULT OF COMPETITION FOR CUYUNA RANGE TONNAGE.

Hill Road to Run Spur to Properties—D., M. & N. Announces Cut Rate.

Duluth. — Of extremely vital importance to shippers of ore is the announcement made by prominent mining men of this district that the Northern Pacific railroad will run spurs to the Cuyuna range and compete with the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie road for the ore business there. It is further stated that a rate war will result.

The fight for tonnage promises to be a long struggle. The competition will mean lower rates on ore from the Cuyuna, the building of new ore docks by both roads and the immediate development of several new ore properties on the Cuyuna.

What may be considered was the first tentative step taken in the Soo-Northern Pacific fight is the movement made by the Soo last week when it engaged contractors to drive test piles for a proposed extension of 800 feet to the new Soo docks, which were built last year in St. Louis bay.

The Northern Pacific has through a subsidiary or holding corporation known as the Northwestern Development company, virtually obtained control of the bulk of the best ore properties on the south range of the Cuyuna range, which is tributary to the Northern Pacific lines.

Local men who have keenly watched the Cuyuna range say that the Northern Pacific has enough tonnage in sight at the present time to keep the railroad busy hauling for the next 25 years.

W. A. McGonagle, president of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad, officially informed the state railroad and warehouse commission that his road would file a reduced rate for iron ore. He said the new rate would be 60 cents per ton for all hard ore. The Iron Range rate varies from 80 cents to $1 per ton. The Great Northern railroad has a flat rate of 80 cents. At present the rate from Ely to Two Harbors is $1 a ton and from Tower 90 cents a ton.

The reduction will mean a heavy cut in the state revenues, though it would not be felt this year. A 25 per cent reduction, he said, would mean a shrinkage of about $250,000.

TEACHERS TO RE-ORGANIZE.

Minnesota Educators Close Their Annual Convention.

Minneapolis. — The Minnesota Educational Association voted unanimously to take steps looking toward dissolving the association as an incorporated body and reorganizing it as an unincorporated body. There will be no election of officers at this convention and that the next general meeting of the association is to be held in St. Paul in December, 1912. Present officers will hold over until that time. It is agreed the association is involved in such a legal tangle that nothing can be done about amending the constitution as sought until the tangle is straightened out.

Speaking before nearly 3,000 delegates to the convention assembled in general session in the Auditorium George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota, branded the present day educational system as behind the times and unable to stand the test of efficiency.

President Vincent was followed by E. E. Davenport, dean and director, college of agriculture and experimental station, University of Illinois, who spoke on "The Vocation and the Man."

Shailer Matthews, dean of the divinity school, Chicago, spoke on "The Religious Element in Education," at the overflow meeting of the general session.

ORE CANCELLATION JAN. 1, 1915.

Steel Corporation Decides to Give Hill Forces Three Years' Notice.

Duluth. — The official announcement of the United States Steel corporation's decision to cancel the Hill ore lease was handed out here by W. J. Olcott, president of the Oliver Mining company, upon his return from New York, where he had attended a conference of officials of the subsidiary companies.

"The lease calls for the giving of at least three years' notice of the intention to cancel and that will be given very shortly," said Mr. Olcott. "The cancellation will take effect Jan. 1, 1915. The directors considered the proposition very carefully and decided that this was the right thing to do."

In the interval, it is intimated that mining operations will be vigorously prosecuted upon the various properties, it being the aim of the corporation to reimburse itself for the large outlays made in stripping and developing the mines. This will mean the employment of several hundreds of additional men at the several points.

ST. PAUL FIRM GETS CONTRACT.

For Thief River Falls Light Plant Equipment.

Thief River Falls.—The city council has decided to install oil engines instead of steam engines as motive power in the city's new light plant. The contract for equipping the plant with two Dessiel 225-horse-power engines and two direct 150 kilowatt generators was let to the Northwestern Electric Equipment Company of St. Paul. The plant when complete will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Things Queer and Curious

Tree Dwelling of the Moro

Occidental visitors to the Philippines who penetrate into the interior are always much interested in the tree-dwellings which are constructed by some of the Moros. They are built of bamboo and other material, far above the ground, and are easily defended by their occupants against the attacks of other natives.

LARGEST OF PROJECTILES

The accompanying illustration is of more than ordinary interest from the fact that it shows the largest and heaviest projectile in the world, being the huge five-foot, armor-piercing shell fired from the United States government's great 16-inch rifle, which may be taken to the Panama canal. This giant shell and powerful gun are considered two of the most destructive and deadly engines of warfare in existence. The monster 16-inch rifle, the only one built so far, is now at the Sandy Hook proving grounds, and has only been fired a few times. The huge shell of steel can be hurled a distance of 20 miles or more, and weighs 2,400 pounds. The powder charge is nearly 500 pounds. The cost of firing one shot reaches in the neighborhood of $1,000. It is not probable that this type of gun will be used, but rather the 14 inch, for the main coast defenses of the Panama canal. This formidable and long range weapon, though capable of firing so tremendous a projectile, is too costly, and fires too slowly for modern warfare.

RECORD IN PIANO PLAYING

The Paris newspapers record a feat of endurance on the part of one Thorpe, described as a native of Bohemia, who played the piano for 30 hours and 15 minutes without stopping. It seems that there is a record even in this kind of folly, and that it was formerly held by Mr. Waterbury, whose performance extended over 28½ hours. The report states that Thorpe was fed and given stimulants during the entertainment.

CONVERSES WITH ANIMALS

Charles Kellogg of California, who, if not a nature-faker, is one of the most remarkable human beings of all time, arrived at Cambridge, Mass., recently from Paris to confer with professors from Harvard's department of science, confident that he could convince them of his ability to converse with animals. Mr. Kellogg has just returned from Europe, where he gave demonstrations of his unique power before professors of the universities of Paris and Berlin. According to Mr. Kellogg, he has accomplished in reality during a life spent in the wilds of the Sierra Nevada mountains in California what the genius of Kipling makes Mowgli accomplish during a childhood passed in the tropical jungles. But Kellogg has for friends only the animals of the temperate American west. He knows not the language of the tropical monkey, though he has often talked "bear" with the grizzlies of the Sierra Nevadas. Crickets, squirrels, lizards and rattlesnakes are some of the other animals whose languages Mr. Kellogg speaks fluently. Says Mr. Kellogg:

"It was by years of constant observation and associating of sounds with actions that I mastered the 15 animal languages I am familiar with. I began on domestic chickens and gradually extended my study to include such wild animals and reptiles as the bear, the lizard and the rattlesnake. Using a system of hieroglyphics modeled upon the modern Chinese system, I have compiled a dictionary of the language of the ordinary brown or hearth cricket, which has the most highly developed language of any of the animals I am familiar with, though I have reason to suspect the monkeys are superior in this respect. From my dictionary I find there are 27 elemental words or sounds, and 85 other words made up of various combinations of the original 27, a cumulative system not unlike that of the Germans. The number of words or sounds in other animal languages I am familiar with varies from 12 to 95."

Although Mr. Kellogg admits that his ability to interpret the enunciations of animals is the result of long and arduous study, he insists that his ability to make himself understood, to imitate the sounds of these animals, is God-given. He says he can without the least difficulty reproduce any sound that comes from an animal's throat. He has a peculiarly constructed palate, no tonsils, and the cord connecting the teeth with the lower lip is entirely missing, but he has been assured by the most noted specialists that there is nothing abnormal about his throat and vocal cords. They are at a loss to account for his strange gift.

MYSTERIOUS AFRICAN LAKE

Lieutenant Graetz, a German officer is making his way across the African continent from the Indian ocean to the Atlantic in a motor boat, his chief object being the exploration of the mysterious Bangweolo lake, which discharges into the Zambesi river.

This sheet of water, except at the point where the Zambesi river leaves it, is surrounded with miles of reeds, and no white man has ever sailed its surface. The natives tell curious tales of what is to be found within its swampy enclosures. On the islands which, they aver, stud the lake, are to be found colossal elephants and tall giraffes, while in the waters sea-serpents and other strange and terrible creatures are concealed. From the surface of the lake itself declare the natives, hot springs sprout into the air, and pestilential winds sweeping across the marshes carry death and destruction to all living things.

Of the few natives who have ever ventured out upon the Bangweolo lake in their small frail canoes, none have ever returned to tell the tale of their adventures. Lieutenant Graetz thinks that unknown species of animal and marine life may possibly exist in this hitherto unexplored region, and it is to test this supposition that he has started out in a thirty-foot boat fitted with a five horse-power petrol motor to cross the African continent.

FRENCH FISH GO ON A JAG

An unusual sight was witnesesd at Frontignan, France, recently. The ponds of Eaux Blanches and the Midi Canal were covered with fish floating about on the surface in a helpless and altogether inexplicable manner. The customs officials were the unwitting cause of this phenomenon. They had seized 66,000 gallons of "doctored" Spanish wine at the frontier station and disposed of it by emptying it into the canal, with disastrous effects on the fish. The fish could be easily caught with the hand and the local fishermen were quick to take advantage of their helpless state.

WORMS HELD UP TRAFFIC

A van conveying about five hundredweight of worms, intended for baiting, was overturned on the Boulevard Sebastopol, Paris. The worms swarmed over the tramway lines and rendered all vehicular traffic impossible until they had been cleared away.

Tee on Charlemagne's Tower

The spread of the game of golf on the continent of Europe has brought about some queer conditions. On the grounds of the Hardelot Golf club in France, for instance, the first tee is situated on the top of one of the towers of a castle built by Charlemagne in 811. Part of the castle has been modernized to serve as a club house.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. Gen. Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important message to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sergt. Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. The two, after a wild ride, get within the lines of the enemy. In the darkness, Wayne is taken for a Federal officer who came to keep an appointment, and a young lady on horseback is given in his charge. She is a northern girl and attempts to escape but fails. One of the horses succumbs and Craig goes through with the dispatches, while Wayne and My Lady of the North are left alone. They seek shelter in a hut and entering it in the dark a huge mastiff attacks Wayne. The girl shoots the brute just in time. The owner of the hut, one Jed Bungay, and his wife appear and soon a party of horsemen approach.

"Do not permit the darkness to alarm you," I whispered softly, bending down as I spoke until I could feel her quick breathing against my cheek. "Our visitors are not likely to remain longer than will be necessary to get something to eat. They need never suspect our presence, and all we have to do is to wait patiently until they move on. I only wish I could discover something upon which you might sit down."

"Pray do not think me a coward," she answered, "but I have heard of this man Lowrie in the Federal camps, and I would rather die than fall into his hands."

I had heard of him also, and of his outrageous treatment of women. The memory caused me to clasp my hand warmly over hers, and set my teeth hard.

"It may not prove to be Lowrie at all," I said soberly; "but all these gentry are pretty much alike, I fear. However, I promise that you shall never fall alive into the hands of any of their breed."

Before she could answer me other than by a slight nestling closer in the darkness, Bungay whispered: "This yere hole, Cap, leads down ter the right, an' comes out in a sort o' gully 'bout a hundred feet back. Thar's light 'nough ter see ter walk by a'ter ye turn the corner, 'bout twenty feet, er so. You uns kin go on down thar if ye'd rather, follerin' ther dorgs, but I reckon as how I'll stay right yere an' sorter see how ther ol' woman comes out.

'Where, where was Roderick then?
One blast upon his bugle horn
Were worth a thousand men.'

If you uns like ter see a durned good fight maybe ye better stay tew—ther ol' woman is pisen if she once gits her dander up."

His voice was expressive of great expectations, and I had reason to believe his faith in Maria would be justified. Before any of us, however, had time to change our positions we heard the fellows come stamping roughly into the cabin. The thin slabs which divided us scarcely muffled their loud voices.

"Well, old woman," exclaimed one in voice so gruff as to seem almost assumed, "pretending to be alone, are you, with all those dishes sitting out on the table; just been eaten off, too Have n't seen no strange party along the road this morning, have ye?"

"Nary a one," said Maria, and I knew from her voice she was standing close beside the fireplace.

"Are you Mrs. Bungay?"

"I reckon I am, if it's any o' yer business."

"Don't git hifty, old woman, or we're liable to give you a lesson in politeness before we leave." The leader dropped the butt of his gun with a crash on the floor. "Where is the little sneak, anyhow?"

"What do you want of him?"

"Want him to go 'long with us; we're hunting some parties, and need a guide. They tol' us up the road a bit he knew every inch o' these yere mountings."

There was a pause, as if Maria was endeavoring to decide as to the honesty of the speaker. Her final answer proved the mental survey had not proven satisfactory.

"Wal, I reckon," she said calmly, "as you uns 'll be more likely ter find him down 'bout Connersville."

"Then what's all these yere dirty dishes doing on the table?"

"Hed sum Yankee officers yere; they just rode on down ther trail as you uns cum up."

"Like hell!" ejaculated the fellow with complete loss of temper. "See here, old woman, we're too old birds to be caught with any such chaff We'll take a look around the old shebang anyhow, and while we're at it you put something on the table for me and my mates to eat."

The voice and manner were rough, but I was impressed with a certain accent creeping into the man's speech bespeaking education. More, in spite of an apparent effort to make it so, his dialect was not that of those mountains.

Even as he uttered these last words, throwing into them a threat more in the tone than the language, I became aware of a thin ray of light penetrating the seemingly solid wall just in front of me, and bending silently forward could dimly distinguish the elliptical head of Bungay as he applied one eye to a small opening he had industriously made between the logs. Grasping Mrs. Brennan firmly by the hand so that we should not become separated, I crept across the intervening blackness, and reached his side.

"Holy smoke, Cap," the little man muttered in suppressed excitement, as he realized my presence, "it's a goin' ter be b'ilin' hot in thar mighty soon, Mariar's steam is a risin'."

He silently made room for me, and bending down so as to bring my eye upon a level with his, I managed to gain some slight glimpse of the scene within the cabin.

Mrs. Bungay stood with her back to the fireplace, an iron skillet firmly gripped in one hand. Her face was red with indignation, and there was a look in her eyes, together with a defiant set to her chin, which promised trouble. In front of her, carelessly resting on the table, his feet dangling in the air, was a sturdy-looking fellow of forty or so, with red, straggling beard covering all the lower half of his face, and a weather-worn black hat pulled so low as almost to conceal his eyes. His attire was nondescript, as though he had patronized the junkshop of both armies. In his belt were thrust a revolver and a knife, while within easy reach of his hand a musket leaned against a chair. Two others of the party, younger men, but even more roughly dressed than their leader, were lounging between him and the door.

Bungay chuckled expectantly.

"O Lord! if they only git the ol' gal just a little more riled," he whispered hoarsely, jumping up and down on one foot in his excitement, "they'll hev ther fight of their life."

"Do you know the fellows?" I asked. "Is that Red Lowrie?"

He shook his head.

"Never laid eyes on any of 'em afore, but ye bet they're no good. Reckon they're a part o' his crowd."

The man who posed as the leader of the party picked up the empty coffee-pot beside him and shook it.

"Come, now, Mrs. Bungay," he commanded, "I tell you we're hungry, so trot out some hoecake and fill up this pot, unless you want to reckon with Red Lowrie."

The woman stood facing him, yet never moved. I could see a red spot begin to glow in either cheek. If I had ever doubted it, I knew now that Maria possessed a temper of her own.

"You ain't no Red Lowrie," she retorted.

The fellow laughed easily.

"No more I ain't, old woman, but I reckon we ain't so durn far apart when it comes to getting what we go after. Come, honest now, where is the little white-livered cur that runs this shebang?"

Whatever Maria might venture to call her lord and master in the privacy of home, it evidently did not soothe her spirit to hear him thus spoken of by another.

"If Jed Bungay wus hum," she answered fiercely, her eyes fairly blazing, "I reckon you would n't be sprawlin on thet thar table fer long."

"Wouldn't I, now Well, old hen, we've fooled here with you about as long as I care to. Bill, go over there and put some of that bacon on to fry If she doesn't get out of the way I'll give her something to jump for." And he patted the stock of his gun.

Instinctively I drew my revolver, and pushed its black muzzle into the light under Jed's nose.

"Shall I give him a dose?" I asked eagerly.

"Not yit; O Lord, not yit!" he exclaimed, dancing from one foot to the other in excitement. "Let ther ol' gal hev a show. I reckon she's good fer ther whole three of 'em, less they shoot."

Bill came up grinning. He evidently anticipated some fun, and as he reached out a grimy hand for the slab of bacon, took occasion to make some remark What it was I could not hear, but I noted the quick responsive flash in the woman's eyes, and the next instant with a crash she brought the iron skillet down with all her strength on top of the fellow's head. Without even a groan he went plunging down, face foremost, in front of the fire. In another moment she was battling like a wild fury with the other two

It was a quick, intense struggle. The man near the door chanced to be the first in, and he received a blow from the skillet that most assuredly would have crushed his skull had he not dodged; as it was it landed upon his shoulder and he reeled back sick and helpless. By this time the fellow with the red beard had closed upon her, and wrested the skillet from her hand. Struggling fiercely back and forth across the floor, Maria tripped over the body of the dead dog and fell, but as she did so her fingers grasped the red beard of her antagonist. It yielded to her hand, and bare of face, save for a dark moustache, the man stood there, panting for breath, above her. Then suddenly, almost at my very ear, a voice cried,

"Frank! Frank! I am here!"

CHAPTER IX.

In the Hands of the Enemy.

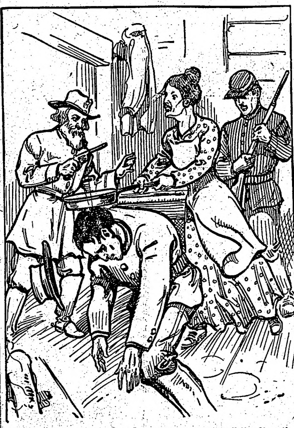
In the first surprise of that unexpected joyful cry ringing at my very ears all my senses seemed confused, and I stood motionless. Then I heard Bungay utter a smothered oath, and knew he had wheeled about in the darkness. Unable to distinguish the slightest outline of his figure, I was yet impressed with the thought that he was endeavoring to muffle the girl, to prevent her uttering a second cry. Impelled by this intuition I flung out my arm hastily, and by rare good luck it came in contact with his hand.

"None of that, you little cur!" I muttered sternly, unmindful of his efforts to break away. "No hand on her, mind you! Mrs. Brennan, what does this mean?"

She made no attempt to answer, but I could hear her now groping her way through the darkness toward the place of our entrance. Bungay detected the movement also, and made a violent effort to break loose from my grip, that he might hurry after her.

"You lit go o' me," he cried excitedly, "er, by goll', I'll use a knife. She'll give this whole thing away if she ever gits out."

For answer I hurled him backward with all my strength and sprang after the fleeing woman. But I was already too late to stop her, even had that been my intention. With strength yielded her by desperation, she thrust aside the heavy cupboard, and as the light swept in, sprang forward into the rude shed. With another bound, gathering her skirts as she ran, she was up the steps and had burst into the outer room. A moment later I also stood in the doorway, gazing upon a scene that made my blood like fire.



With a Crash She Brought the Iron Skillet Down With All Her Strength.

The fighting had evidently ceased suddenly with her first cry. Maria stood panting in one corner, the deadly skillet again in her hand, her hair hanging in wisps down her back. Still unconscious from the blow he had received, one fellow lay outstretched on the floor, his head barely missing the hot ashes of the fireplace; while his companion nursed his bruises and scowled from a safe refuge behind the table. The unshaven faces of several others of the gang were peering curiously in through the open door I know now I saw all this, for the picture of it is upon the retina of memory, but at the moment everything I appeared to perceive or hear occurred in the centre of the room.

The man who had posed as the leader stood there alone facing us, his expression a strange mixture of amazement and delight. He was a powerfully built man, with keen gray eyes deeply set in their sockets. His right hand rested heavily upon the hilt of a cavalry sabre, the scabbard of which was concealed beneath the folds of the long brown coat he wore. As Mrs. Brennan burst through the doorway he stepped eagerly forward, his eyes brightening, and they met with clasped hands.

"Is it possible—Edith?" he cried, as if the recognition could scarcely be credited.

"Oh, Frank!" she exclaimed, eagerly, "it seems all too good to be true. How came you here?"

"Hunting after you, my fair lady. Did you suppose you could disappear as mysteriously as you did last night without my being early on the trail? Have these people injured you in any way?" And he glanced about him with a threat in his gesture.

"Oh, no, Frank," hastily; "every one has been most kind. It was a mere mistake. But how strangely you are dressed! how very rough you look!"

He laughed, but still retained his warm clasp of her hands.

"Not the pomp and circumstance of glorious war which you expected, girl?" he asked lightly. "But we have all sorts of conditions to meet down here, and soon learn in Rome to do as the Romans do."

As he finished speaking he perceived me for the first time, and his face changed instantly into cold sternness. I saw him sweep one hasty glance around, as though he suspected that I might not be alone, and his hand fell once more upon his sword hilt, in posture suggestive of readiness for action.

"Who have we here?" he asked, staring at me in amazement. "A Johnny Reb?"

"Whatever I am," I retored, my gorge rising suddenly at his contemptuous term, and stepping out into the room before him, "I at least wear the uniform of my service and rank, and not the nondescript uniform of a guerilla."

The scornful words stung him; I noticed the quick flush of anger in his eyes, and was not sorry.

"You are insolent, sir. Moreover, you go too far, for as it chances you are well within our lines, and we will see to what extent honor is consistent with the work of a spy. The uniform of your service, indeed!" he echoed hotly, pointing as he spoke across the room; "that cavalry cloak over yonder tells its own story. Peters, Steele, arrest this fellow."

"Frank, don't do that," she urged earnestly. "You mistake; that was the cloak I wore."

If he heard her he gave no sign.

"Bind him," was the stern order, as the two men advanced. "Use your belts if you have nothing else handy."

Angry as I most assuredly was, swept also by a new emotion which I did not in the least comprehend, I yet fully realized the utter helplessness of my position in point of resistance. They were twenty to one. However much I longed to grapple with him who mocked me, the very thought was insanity; my only possible chance of escape lay in flight. To realize this was to act. I leaped backward, trusting for a clear field in my rear, and an opportunity to run for it, but the door by which I had just entered was now closed and barred—Bungay had made sure his retreat. The man, watching my every movement, with sword half drawn in his hand, saw instantly that I was securely trapped, and laughed in scorn.

"You are not making war on women now," he said with a cutting sneer. "You will not find me so easy a victim."

The taunt stung me, but more the tone and manner of the speaker, and the hot blood of youth cast all caution to the winds With a single spring, forgetful of my own wound, I was at his throat, dashed aside his uplifted hand, and by the sheer audacity of my sudden, unexpected onset, bore him back crashing to the floor. He struggled gamely, yet I possessed the advantage of position, and would have punished him severely, but for the dozen strong hands which instantly laid hold upon me, and dragged me off, still fighting madly, although as helpless as a child.

My opponent instantly leaped to his feet and started forward, drawing a revolver as he came. His face was deathly white from passion, and there was a look in his eyes which told me he would be restrained now by no rule of war.

"You cowardly spy!" he cried, and my ears caught the sharp click as he drew back the hammer. "Do you think I will let that blow go unavenged?"

"I assuredly trust not," I answered, gazing up at him from behind the gun muzzles with which I was yet securely pinned to the floor. "But if you are as I am led to believe, a Federal officer, with some pretensions to being also a gentleman, and not the outlaw your clothes proclaim, you will at least permit me to stand upon my feet and face you as a man. If I am a spy, as you seem inclined to claim, there are army courts to try me; if not, then I am your equal in standing and rank, and have every right of a prisoner of war."

"This has become personal," hoarsely. "Your blow, as well as your connection with the forcible abduction of this young lady, whose legal protector I am, are not matters to be settled by an army court."

"Then permit me to meet you in any satisfactory way. The murder of a helpless man will scarcely clarify your honor."

I knew from the unrelenting expression upon his face that my plea was likely to prove a perfectly useless one, but before I had ended it Mrs. Brennan stood between us.

"Frank," she said calmly, "you shall not. This man is a Confederate officer; he is no spy and during all the events of last night he has proven himself friend rather than an enemy. Only for my sake is he here now."

Ignoring the look upon his face she turned toward me, impetuously waved aside the fellows who yet held me prostrate, and extending her hand lifted me to my feet. For an instant as if by accident, our eyes met, and a sudden flush swept across her throat and cheeks.

"It is my turn now," she whispered softly, so softly the words did not carry beyond my own ears. Then she stood erect between us, as though in her own drawing room, and gravely presented us to each other, as if she dared either to quarrel longer in her presence.

"Major Brennan, Captain Wayne."

We bowed to each other as men salute on the duelling field. In his eyes I read an unforgiveness, a bitter personal enmity, which I returned with interest, and secretly rejoiced over.

"The lady seems to be in control at present," he said shortly, shoving back the revolver into his belt. "Nevertheless I shall do my military duty, and hold you as a prisoner. May I inquire your full name and rank?"

"Philip Wayne, Captain —th Virginia Cavalry, Shirtley's Brigade."

"Why are you within our lines?"

"I attempted to pass through them last night with despatches, but was prevented by my desire to be of assistance to this lady."

"Indeed?" He smiled incredulously. "Your tale is quite interesting and rather romantic. I presume you yet carry the papers with you as evidence of its truth?"

"If you refer to the despatches, I do not. I sincerely trust they are already safely deposited in the hands of the one for whom they were intended."

A malignant look crept into Brennan's face, and his jaws set ominously.

"You will have to concoct a far better story than that, my friend, before you face Sheridan," he said insolently, "or you will be very apt to learn how a rope feels. He is not inclined to parley long with such fellows as you. Bind his hands, men, and take him out with you into the road."

The two soldiers grasped me instantly at the word of command. For a single moment I braced myself to resist, but even as I did so my eyes fell upon a slight opening in the wall, and I caught a quick glimpse of Bungay's face, his finger to his lips. Even as I gazed in astonishment at this sudden apparition, a lighter touch rested pleadingly on my arm.

"Do not struggle any longer, Captain Wayne," spoke Mrs. Brennan's voice, gently. "I will go to General Sheridan myself, and tell him the entire story."

I bowed to her, and held out my hands to be bound.

"I yield myself your prisoner, madam," I said cunningly, and not unconscious that her glance sank before mine. "I even imagine the bonds may prove not altogether unpleasant."

Brennan strode between us hastily, and with quick gesture to his men.

"Bind the fellow," he said sternly. "And mind you, sir, one word more, and they shall buck you as well. It may be valuable for you to remember that I am in command here, however I may seem to yield to the wish of Mrs. Brennan"

THE TEA PENALTY.

A Strong Man's Experience.

Writing from a busy railroad town the wife of an employe of one of the great roads says:

"My husband is a railroad man who has been so much benefited by the use of Postum that he wishes me to express his thanks to you for the good it has done him. His waking hours are taken up with his work, and he has no time to write himself.

"He has been a great tea drinker all his life and has always liked it strong.

"Tea has, of late years, acted on him like morphine does upon most people. At first it soothed him, but only for an hour or so, then it began to affect his nerves to such an extent that he could not sleep at night, and he would go to his work in the morning wretched and miserable from the loss of rest. This condition grew constantly worse, until his friends persuaded him, some four months ago, to quit tea and use Postum.

"At first he used Postum only for breakfast, but as he liked the taste of it, and it somehow seemed to do him good, he added it to his evening meal. Then, as he grew better, he began to drink it for his noon meal, and now he will drink nothing else at table.

"His condition is so wonderfully improved that he could not be hired to give up Postum and go back to tea. His nerves have become steady and reliable once more, and his sleep is easy, natural and refreshing.

He owes all this to Postum, for he has taken no medicine and made no other change in his diet.

"His brother, who was very nervous from coffee-drinking, was persuaded by us to give up the coffee and use Postum and he also has recovered his health and strength." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

FASHION'S LATEST FANCIES

MOST POPULAR HATS

PICTURE VARIETY CONCEDED TO EXCEL IN GRACE.

Smaller Sizes Have Their Admirers, but the Larger Shapes More Than Hold Their Own With Followers of Fashion.

However much we may admire the quaint, small bonnet-like shapes, some demure and some jaunty, which are now fashionable, and however interesting the unending variety and eccentric novelty of medium sized and small hats may prove, still the most beautiful of all is the large picture hat. It belongs to youth and serves as a background against which the beauty of youthful coloring and contour is emphasized. It subtracts years from the woman who has preserved her good looks into middle life and carries a suggestion of girlhood always. It is the hat of great occasions, and it is never out of style.

The contour of the picture shapes varies somewhat from season to season, the poise changes a little, but it is in the matter of trimming that the hat is brought into the mode of the moment. Just at present malines are greatly liked, mounted over crowns either in masses of drapery, in shirrings, or standing puffs. Occasionally maline is folded in several thicknesses and doubled into long-pointed triangles, mounted in rows about dome crowns. They resemble most dainty gauze wings, like those of a butterfly. The effects from posing one color over two others, all beautiful, giving changing opal like tints. The favorite method of using maline is the arrangement of many standing puffs springing from the top of the crown.

The ostrich plume and the picture hat have so long been associated in our minds that it almost goes without saying that this combination is a favorite. Large shapes and plumes belong to one another. The hats in all black and in black with white feathers, are the handsomest of this character.

Wreathes and coronets of small ostrich tips, and ostrich combined with marabout or paradise provide other varieties of trimming. Rich laces and braids of fur, and wonderful wreathes of ribbon flowers are all brought into service for decorating the large shapes, that, without doubt, will prove their leadership unshaken, before the winter is half over.

TEACH CHILDREN TO THINK

Good Idea That May Be Classed as in the Nature of Practical Education.

One of the new ideas upon education is that children should be encouraged to think more and to leave dry facts alone. It is said, too, that we cram a lot of facts down the minds of our children and do not give them an opportunity to use their brains. This new idea in education says that we must take children oftener out into the woods to let them discover things for themselves; we should let them watch the habits of insects and animals, and the ever-varying phases of nature. We should let both boys and girls study mechanical organism of things that are in daily use in our big cities. For instance, a boy or even a girl, who happens to be in the vicinity of an automobile when it breaks down, might by intelligent observation learn a great deal about the make-up of one of those modern conveyances if let alone to watch the machinist go about adjusting the difficulties.

A very much disgruntled little girl was overheard saying to her father and mother who had dragged her away by the hand when she ran with her brother to watch a man in the roadside who was fixing his auto: "Oh, you let Johnnie stay and look all he wants, but you chase me away. I like to look at the man fixing things, too." Which shows that little girls sometimes want to investigate.

Smart Effect.

A girl with an assortment of jabots and frills should study the colors most becoming to her and fashion a number of odd tailor bows and knots of velvet and ribbon to pin at her throat as a sort of fastening for the neckwear. She will be surprised at the smart effect given by the touch of color.

Protecting Fur Clothes.

GIVES PROTECTION TO HAT

Individual Box for Each Is a Clever and Exceedingly Novel Idea Evolved.

Closet room is always at a premium. There can never be enough space to hold all that a household contains, with perfect ease and comfort. Particularly, does the problem of hats need solving. Closet shelves are generally capable of holding but one of the size that fashion now decrees. Each hat should have an entire box of its own, roomy enough to allow it to lie flat upon a hat rest, for the least cramping is liable to alter its shape.

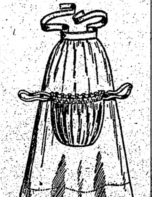
A very novel and practical idea has been evolved to meet the needs of the woman who possesses half a dozen hats and doesn't know where to put them. A light stand, made of four slender posts with a shelf or two, containing prettily decorated boxes, is a gay addition to a room, and does not mar its beauty. The stand contains no sides, so that the box may easily slip in and out, or a better arrangement is to have one side of the box attached on hinges.

Sometimes these stands are stained to match the furniture of the room, or they look fresh and pretty when enameled in white paint, or, again, they may be draped in chintz to match the hangings of the boudoir. They may also be made of crude materials and placed in the store-room, if space allows. But the woman who possesses such a one will find it of great comfort. Hat rests, to place within the boxes, or light wire covered with either ribbon or silk or chintz, of course, are made to carry out the prevailing color scheme.

BOON FOR BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Useful Apron That Assures the Darning Materials Being Always at Hand.

Any busy housewife who does the stocking mending at odd times during the day knows what a comfort it is to find the mending wool, scissors, thimble, etc., all to hand if she has to leave off to attend to something else, and with an apron such as this these things, and the stockings, too, are always at hand. The large pocket in the center is drawn up by tape strings, which can be tied for security. The apron may be made up in white or colored linen, holland or casement cloth; it is made large enough to cover the skirt at front and sides, and with proportionately large pocket.



LITTLE RUSE DIDN'T SUCCEED

Youngster's Scheme Was All Right, but Economical Father Was a Match for Him.

The proprietor of the most prominent hotel in the town of S——, Ky., is a man of a very economical nature, in fact he is an extremist in this feature. He has a six-year-old red-headed son that didn't inherit his father's economical disposition. Recently the son was very much in need of a five-cent piece for soda water purposes. He went into the dining-room, where he was free from observation, and removed his shoe strings and placed them in his hip pocket for future reference. Returning to the office he approached his father and said:

"Pa, give me a nickel to get me a pair of shoe strings."

His father glanced down at his son's shoes, then turning around approached the office safe and opened it in silence. He took out the cash box and raising the lid extracted a pair of new shoe strings, which he handed to his son without a word. The youngster took the strings with a crestfallen air and then to the amusement of the onlookers, exclaimed:

"Stung again, by granny."

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 18 K, Boston.

Astonished the "Cop."

Police Lieutenant "Barney" Keleher always has a new story to tell.

"Two of our 'finest' were walking along Broadway not so long ago," began the lieutenant, unfolding his latest offering, "and their attention was attracted to the bronze figure of an ape standing upright in the window of a large jewelry store.

"'What kind of an animal is that supposed to be?' asked one of the other.

"'You surprise me with your thickness,' returned the second cop. 'That's a gorilla. Never heard of them before?'

"'Sure, and I read about them in the histories,' he answered. 'My, what a lot of damage they did during the Civil war! How did a general ever make those things mind him?'"—New York Sun.

More English Humor.

The first night Walter Kelly, known to vaudeville as the "Virginia Judge," walked up the Strand he complained to his English companion that the famous street in London was dark at nine o'clock. "Why," said he, "at this hour Broadway is as bright as day. There is one sign alone, 'The Chariot Race,' in which there are 50,000 electric lights." "But I say, old top," said his English friend, "wouldn't that be rather conspicuous?"

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica), Black Cherrybark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

FELT HIS PRESENCE.

Curious Instance of Telepathy Described by John Muir.

John Muir, in his book, "My First Summer in the Sierras," relates a curious instance of telepathy. He spent the summer of 1869 in the beautiful wilderness around the Yosemite valley. One day he was busily sketching on the North Dome, when suddenly he became possessed with the notion that his friend Professor J. D. Butler of the University of Wisconsin was below him in the valley. He jumped up, full of the idea of meeting him, being almost as much startled as if some one had unexpectedly touched him and made him look up. Instantly he went running down the slope and along the brink of the valley, looking for a way to the bottom, feeling drawn irresistibly.

Gradually his common sense convinced him that he could not possibly reach the hotel until after everybody would be asleep for the night. He therefore compelled himself to stop, but the next day he went into the valley and found that Professor Butler had arrived the evening before, unexpected by anybody. He had been four or five miles distant at the moment when Mr. Muir was so suddenly apprised of his presence.

"He had just entered the valley by way of the Coulterville trail," says the author, "and was coming past El Capitan when his presence struck me. Had he then looked toward the North Dome with a good glass he might have seen me jump up from my work and run toward him. This seems the one well defined marvel of my life of the kind called supernatural."

RESURRECTION PLANT.

It Comes to Life, After Drying Up, if Plunged Into Water.

One of the most extraordinary plants in the world is undoubtedly that known to botanists as Anastatica, commonly called the Resurrection plant or occasionally the Rose of Jericho. It is an annual inhabiting the Egyptian desert. It is so highly hygrometric that when fully developed it contracts its rigid branches so as to constitute a ball. Exposed then to the action of the wind it is blown hither and thither toward the sea, when it is gathered and exported to Europe.

If then, when apparently dead and dried up, its root is plunged into water, the buds swell with new life and leaves of its calyx open, the petals unfold, the flower stalk grows and the full blown flowers appear as if by magic. When removed from the water the plant returns to its original apparently dead condition until again placed in water; hence, its title of the Resurrection plant.

There are many superstitious tales concerning this so called rose afloat in the east. It is said to have first bloomed on Christmas eve and continued to flower till Easter, at its birth heralding the advent of the Redeemer and immediately before his departure honoring his resurrection.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

The Range of Vision.

Data have been gathered in Germany with reference to the distance at which persons may be recognized by their faces and figures. If one has good eyes, the Germans claim, one cannot recognize a person whom he has seen but once before at a greater distance than twenty-five meters (eighty-two feet). If the person is well known to one, one may recognize him at from fifty to a hundred meters, and if it is a member of one's family, even at 150 meters. The whites of the eyes may be seen at from twenty-seven to twenty-eight meters and the eyes themselves at seventy-two to seventy-three meters. The different parts of the body and the slightest movements are distinguishable at ninety-one meters. The limbs show at 182 meters. At 540 meters a moving man appears only as an indefinite form, and at 720 meters (2,36[illegible] feet) the movements of the body [illegible] longer visibl[illegible] —Scientific Am

UNIVERSAL GOOD ROAD MOVEMENT

Every Country Represented at International Congress.

SPEECHES BY TAFT AND KNOX

President Declares Improved Highways Should Be National Issue—Co-operation Necessary if Movement Is to Succeed.

The movement for the improvement of highways throughout the world is slowly but surely advancing. This fact, of so much interest to those who are struggling for the want of better roads, was shown at the fourth international good roads congress and exposition held in Chicago from Sept. 18 to Oct. 1.

Every Country Interested.

PRESIDENT TAFT.

Almost every country on earth was represented at the convention, showing how widespread the necessity for better thoroughfares is and how wide the field for this movement has become within the last few years.

The good roads congress was held under the auspices of the National Good Roads associations, of which Arthur C. Jackson, one of the greatest boosters that the good roads cause has, is president. The Chicago meeting was attended by some of the most prominent men in the country, including President Taft and Secretary of State Philander C. Knox.

President Taft attended the congress while on his "around the circle" swing. He delivered an interesting address, in which he declared that better roads should be a national issue, as there is nothing so important at present to the country as good highways.

All Suffer From Bad Roads.

Farmers are not the only ones who require good thoroughfares, the president said. The whole world, in fact, feels the effect of bad roads.

Mr. Knox also made a speech at the convention, in which he decried the lack of interest that is being shown by politicians toward the good roads cause.

ARTHUR C. JACKSON.

One of the most interesting features of the congress was a photographic exposition pertaining to public highways and streets. Here were shown pictures of roads in various parts of the country both before and after improvements had been made. All those who were fortunate enough to witness this display were unanimous in agreeing that the advantages the improved roads had over the old ones were many.

The convention proved two important facts—first, that the movement for better roads is worldwide in scope and, second, that a wide co-operation is required if good highways are to become general.

Must Have Co-operation.

A local road improvement club is a good thing. In this way the local road improvement authorities can have the benefit of co-operation. It is essential to the permanent success of a local road club that it have a definite and continuous work to perform. It should seek to assemble all information that might be of local value in solving problems of road administration, construction and maintenance and should help the road authorities in carrying out in the best manner the duties of their positions. At the same time the club should not hesitate to insist upon efficient and thorough work on the part of the road authorities.

SECRETARY KNOX.

MAINTENANCE OF EARTH ROADS IN SOUTHERN STATES

Systematic Labor, Road Drags and Better Laws Needed.

It matters not how active we are in our efforts to encourage the construction of macadam, gravel and other hard surface roads, there will of necessity, for years to come, be a greater percentage of earth roads in every southern state.

The reasons for this are apparent to any one familiar with conditions from a financial and population standpoint, to say nothing of the lack of road building material that exists in a large number of counties.

We are informed by the United States office of public roads, that the ten southern states—namely, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas, had, in 1904, 472,589 miles of unimproved roads. Assuming that since then the mileage of improved roads has doubled, we will have left 458,281 miles. If these figures are approximately correct, should not the question of the proper construction and maintenance of these roads receive our most careful and thoughtful attention?

Wonderful improvements have been made in earth roads where common sense men have used common sense methods of construction and maintenance, but so long as we are content to place this important work in the hands of incompetent or grafting politicians, as is so often the case, we cannot expect anything but the worst. All failures in this work are not due to graft, for a large majority of road commissioners and overseers are honest men, but as a rule they are elected to office not because of their fitness for the work, but because of their personal popularity. These evils, coupled with the statute labor system, have fastened upon the south the very worst earth roads in the nation.

DIRT ROAD IN GEORGIA.

The first and most important thing to do is to change our laws, abolishing the statute labor system and substituting therefor the cash tax system. If this can be done and the work of improving and maintaining our roads be placed in the hands of men who are engaged in no other occupation and are required to give their full time and attention to their work, all should be satisfactory.

No earth road can be maintained in good condition unless it be so constructed as to drain well, and unless it be kept free from ruts and holes.

The best method of maintaining an earth road, especially a prairie road, is by the systematic use of the road drag. A sand road is never good under any circumstances, but certainly is not improved by crowning. A sand road is at its best when moist, so it should be left flat. No one wants a sand road, so, if possible, clay should be added to and mixed with the sand, making what is known as a sand clay road.

The old way, and it is used today by many, of filling a mud hole with brush with a little earth on top, cannot be too strongly condemned, and is only permissible in cases of emergency, when it is impossible to drain the hole or to get sand or stone to fill it. The overseer or foreman should in dry weather center his work on such places until the road is raised to a sufficient height to drain well. Many overseers have brush hauled two miles to fill a mud hole, when sand is within shoveling distance of it.

If our farmers do not take a community interest in the improvement of the roads and put their shoulders to the wheel we will surely remain "stuck in the mud."—Good Roads.

ACTION BEHIND WORDS.

Good Roads Boosters Back Up Movement, and Result Is a Success.

Because Tom McKay, a farmer living fourteen miles south of Oberlin, Kan., would not be bluffed Decatur county now has fourteen miles of improved dirt road, and the farmers are so delighted with the result and the small expense that they are making plans for building several more roads out of Oberlin.

At the farmers' institute in Oberlin several months ago Mr. McKay delivered a talk on good roads, following a similar talk by H. O. Douglass, vice president of a bank at Oberlin, who pledged his townsmen to pay the cost.

"We will agree to do our share of work on the road if you will superintend it," said one of the farmers.

"You can't bluff me," McKay said. "Put up the money and I will give my time. Now, you people who have talked good roads, do something or quit saying that you really desire good roads."

The road building has accordingly recently been accomplished at a cost of $26.75 a mile, including the work of the engine and men hired to operate it in the final grading and smoothing up of the roadbed.

The great success of the McKay road has started a movement for the same class of work in several directions from Oberlin.

Owing to poor health, Alex F. Lattimore, editor and publisher of the PIONEER, will be compelled to seek a warmer climate. Just who will continue the work of getting out the paper is not yet known, but our readers may rest assured that it will be published every week, contain all the news and be a credit to the community which it represents.

This week's issue of the PIONEER is edited by a "devil" from a Thief River paper. He came here yesterday and the limited time necessarily causes a scarcity of news in its columns. To the hearty co-operation of a few citizens is due the credit for whatever news is printed this week.

FELT HIS PRESENCE.

Curious Instance of Telepathy Described by John Muir.

John Muir, in his book, "My First Summer in the Sierras," relates a curious instance of telepathy. He spent the summer of 1869 in the beautiful wilderness around the Yosemite valley. One day he was busily sketching on the North Dome, when suddenly he became possessed with the notion that his friend Professor J. D. Butler of the University of Wisconsin was below him in the valley. He jumped up full of the idea of meeting him, being almost as much startled as if some one had unexpectedly touched him and made him look up. Instantly he went running down the slope and along the brink of the valley, looking for a way to the bottom, feeling drawn irresistibly.

Gradually his common sense convinced him that he could not possibly reach the hotel until after everybody would be asleep for the night. He therefore compelled himself to stop, but the next day he went into the valley and found that Professor Butler had arrived the evening before unexpected by anybody. He had been four or five miles distant at the moment when Mr. Muir was so suddenly apprised of his presence.

"He had just entered the valley by way of the Coulterville trail," says the author, "and was coming past El Capitan when his presence struck me. Had he then looked toward the North Dome with a good glass he might have seen me jump up from my work and run toward him. This seems the one well defined marvel of my life of the kind called supernatural."

RESURRECTION PLANT.

It Comes to Life, After Drying Up, if Plunged Into Water.

One of the most extraordinary plants in the world is undoubtedly that known to botanists as Anastatica, commonly called the Resurrection plant or occasionally the Rose of Jericho. It is an annual inhabiting the Egyptian desert. It is so highly hygrometric that when fully developed it contracts its rigid branches so as to constitute a ball. Exposed then to the action of the wind it is blown hither and thither toward the sea, when it is gathered and exported to Europe.

If then, when apparently dead and dried up, its root is plunged into water, the buds swell with new life and leaves of its calyx open, the petals unfold, the flower stalk grows and the full blown flowers appear as if by magic. When removed from the water the plant returns to its original apparently dead condition until again placed in water; hence its title of the Resurrection plant.

There are many superstitious tales concerning this so called rose abroad in the east. It is said to have first bloomed on Christmas eve and continued to flower till Easter, at its birth heralding the advent of the Redeemer and immediately before his departure honoring his resurrection.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

The Range of Vision.

Data have been gathered in Germany with reference to the distance at which persons may be recognized by their faces and figures. If one has good eyes, the Germans claim, one cannot recognize a person whom he has seen but once before at a greater distance than twenty-five meters (eighty-two feet). If the person is well known to one, one may recognize him at from fifty to a hundred meters, and if it is a member of one's family, even at [illegible] meters. The whites of the eyes may be seen from twenty-seven to thirty meters, and the eyes themselves at seventy-two [illegible] different parts of the [illegible] slightest movements are [illegible] ble at ninety-one meters [illegible] show at 182 meters [illegible] moving man appears only [illegible] little form and [illegible] the movements [illegible] longer visible.

UNIVERSAL GOOD ROAD MOVEMENT

Every Country Represented at International Congress.

SPEECHES BY TAFT AND KNOX

President Declares Improved Highways Should Be National Issue—Co-operation Necessary if Movement Is to Succeed.

The movement for the improvement of highways throughout the world is slowly but surely advancing. This fact, of so much interest to those who are struggling for the want of better roads, was shown at the fourth international good roads congress and exposition held in Chicago from Sept. 18 to Oct. 1.

Every Country Interested.

PRESIDENT TAFT.

Almost every country on earth was represented at the convention, showing how widespread the necessity for better thoroughfares is and how wide the field for this movement has become within the last few years.

The good roads congress was held under the auspices of the National Good Roads associations, of which Arthur C. Jackson, one of the greatest boosters that the good roads cause has, is president. The Chicago meeting was attended by some of the most prominent men in the country, including President Taft and Secretary of State Philander C. Knox.

President Taft attended the congress while on his around the circle swing. He delivered an interesting address, in which he declared that better roads should be a national issue, as there is nothing so important at present to the country as good highways.

All Suffer From Bad Roads.

Farmers are not the only ones who require good thoroughfares, the president said. The whole world, in fact, feels the effect of bad roads.

Mr. Knox also made a speech at the convention, in which he decried the lack of interest that is being shown by politicians toward the good roads cause.

ARTHUR C. JACKSON.

One of the most interesting features of the congress was a photographic exposition pertaining to public highways and streets. Here were shown pictures of roads in various parts of the country both before and after improvements had been made. All those who were fortunate enough to witness this display were unanimous in agreeing that the advantages the improved roads had over the old ones were many.

The convention proved two important facts—first, that the movement for better roads is worldwide in scope, and second, that a wide co-operation is required if good highways are to become general.

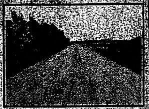
Must Have Co-operation.

A local road improvement club is a good [illegible]. In this way the local road improvement authorities can have the benefit of co-op[illegible]

[illegible] ally [illegible] years to come [illegible] of earth roads [illegible] any one [illegible] financial and population [illegible] to say nothing of the lack of [illegible] material that exists in a large number of counties.

We are informed by the United States office of public roads that the ten southern states, namely, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas, had in 1904 477,639 miles of unimproved roads. Assuming that since then the mileage of improved roads has doubled we will have left 455,281 miles. If these figures are approximately correct, should not the question of the proper construction and maintenance of these roads receive our most careful and thoughtful attention?

Wonderful improvements have been made in earth roads where common sense men have used common sense methods of construction and maintenance, but so long as we are content to place this important work in the hands of incompetent or grafting politicians, as is so often the case, we cannot expect anything but the worst. All failures in this work are not due to graft, for a large majority of road commissioners and overseers are honest men, but as a rule they are elected to office not because of their fitness for the work, but because of their personal popularity. These evils, coupled with the statute labor system, have fastened upon the south the very worst earth roads in the nation.



DIRT ROAD IN GEORGIA.

The first and most important thing to do is to change our laws, abolishing the statute labor system and substituting therefor the cash tax system. If this can be done and the work of improving and maintaining our roads be placed in the hands of men who are engaged in no other occupation and are required to give their full time and attention to their work, all should be satisfactory.

No earth road can be maintained in good condition unless it be so constructed as to drain well and unless it be kept free from ruts and holes.

The best method of maintaining an earth road, especially a prairie road, is by the systematic use of the road drag. A sand road is never good under any circumstances, but certainly is not improved by crowning. A sand road is at its best when moist, so it should be left flat. No one wants a sand road, so if possible clay should be added to and mixed with the sand, making what is known as a sand clay road.

The old way, and it is used today by many, of filling a mud hole with brush with a little earth on top, cannot be too strongly condemned, and is only permissible in cases of emergency, when it is impossible to drain the hole or to get sand or stone to fill it. The overseer or foreman should in dry weather center his work on such places until the road is raised to a sufficient height to drain well. Many overseers have brush-hauled two miles to fill a mud hole when sand is within shoveling distance of it.

If our farmers do not take a community interest in the improvement of the roads and put their shoulders to the wheel we will surely remain stuck in the mud.—Good Roads.

ACTION BEHIND WORDS.

Good Roads Boosters Back Up Movement, and Result Is a Success.

Because Tom McKay, a farmer living fourteen miles south of Oberlin, Kan., would not be bluffed, Decatur county now has fourteen miles of improved dirt road, and the farmers are so delighted with the result and the small expense that they are making plans for building several more roads out of Oberlin.

VIEWS BANK COMBINE WITH MUCH CONCERN

Attorney General Says Money Trust Exists.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Attorney General Wickersham's report of his investigation of the National City bank of New York virtually charges the National City company, a subsidiary corporation, with being an embryo "money trust," controlled by the National City bank for holding stocks in other financial institutions in contravention of the national bank laws.

Secretary MacVeagh does not agree with the attorney general and President Taft will take up the case when he returns to Washington. In the meantime the department of justice has been continuing its consideration of the case. The attorney general has stated publicly that he viewed with some concern the combination of banking capital in New York.

It seems to be generally understood in official circles that the government hopes to oppose successfully the connection between the National City bank and its company.

DIVORCE IN ANCIENT ROME.

One Woman Had Eight Husbands In Five Years.

"We are assured by Seneca," says the historian Inge, "that there were women in ancient Rome who counted their ages not by their years, but by the husbands they had had. Juvenal tells of one woman who had married eight husbands in five years. Divorce was granted on the slightest pretext. Many separated merely from love of change, disdaining to give any reason, like Aemilius Paulus, who told his friends that 'he knew best where his shoes pinched him.'

"Rich wives were not much sought after by wise men. Their complete emancipation made them difficult to manage. Accordingly, since both rich and poor wives were objectionable, the large majority of men never married at all. In most cases a Roman bridegroom knew practically nothing of his wife's character until after marriage.

"Marriage for the Roman woman meant a transition from rigid seclusion to almost unbounded liberty. She appeared as a matter of course at her husband's table whether he had company or not. She could go where she liked, either to the temples of Isis and Serapis or to the circus and amphitheater. She had her own troops of slaves, over whom she ruled without interference."

Fighter of the Family.

The tough little boy with the red air and freckled face pushed up against the neat little boy and said impudently:

"My sister can lick your sister."

The neat little boy did not argue the matter.

"And my big brother can lick your big brother."

The good little lad winced.

"And my ma can lick your ma."

The quiet lad shifted from one foot to the other.

"And my pa can lick your pa."

There was a flash of pink shirt waist, the sound of some hard object coming in contact with a spongy substance, and the quiet little lad stood triumphantly over his adversary, quietly waiting for him to push his nose back into the center of his face where it belonged.

"But just remember this," he observed quietly, "you can't lick me."—Youngstown Telegram.

LAND SHOW WILL GIVE MANY PRIZES

St. Paul Associaton of Commerce Offers Silver Trophy Cups.

BEST EXHIBITS WILL WIN

Business Interests of the Twin City and Those Interested in the Development of the American Northwest Contribute Prizes Worth Thousands of Dollars to Encourage Exhibition of Products at Land Show in St. Paul December 12 to 23.

Exhibitors from every state at the Northwestern Land Products Show in St. Paul Dec. 12 to 23, will be given an opportunity to compete for more than fifty valuable silver trophy cups offered for the best displays, twenty of the trophies being given by the St. Paul Association of Commerce.

This announcement was made by the management of the Land Show and the Association of Commerce this week. Accompanying the announcement is the statement explaining how the trophies are offered.

"As the Land Show in St. Paul is an enterprise given by the states of the American Northwest, individual competition is almost eliminated by necessity," says the statement. "The trophies are therefore offered to the commercial clubs, communities or states first. Another class of prizes is offered for the growers furnishing the best samples to their state or sectional exhibits. It is not desired that any individual make an exhibit at the Land Show except as the samples are furnished those who are collecting and preparing the state and sectional exhibits. The name of the grower may appear on each of these samples. The trophies in this class, of course, will go to the grower furnishing the samples, but competitors must make all entries with those in charge of the state or community exhibits in their own states and not through the Land Show management."

The offering of fifty trophies is on a par with other things about the St. Paul show. It is perhaps the largest list of trophies ever offered by a Land Show.

These states and their individual contributors, commercial clubs and communities will have the opportunity to win the cups: Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Alaska.

Three of the Association of Commerce Trophies.

Here is a partial list of the trophies offered:

The St. Paul Association of Commerce will give silver trophy cups for the best state exhibit and for the best sectional exhibit.

In Minnesota the following cups are offered: For the best half bushel of winter wheat; for the best ten ears of corn; for the best bushel of potatoes, and for the best bushel of oats.

For North Dakota two prizes are offered, a cup for the best bushel of wheat and another for the best half bushel of flax.

South Dakota exhibitors will be given cups for the best bushel of wheat and for the best ten ears of corn.

For the best half bushel of nonirrigated and for the best half bushel of irrigated winter wheat some Montana growers or exhibitors will receive cups.

Idaho is offered a cup for the best five boxes of commercial apples.

Oregon and Washington growers will have an opportunity for friendly competition, as a cup is offered for the best bushel of apples grown in either Washington or Oregon, and another cup for the best sample of alfalfa. There is a cup for the best half bushel of wheat shown from Central Oregon, and for the best collection of processed fruits from either state.

Besides the cups offered by the Association of Commerce, the Great Northern railroad offers a cup in each state for the grower furnishing for the state exhibit the best collection of samples. The Sioux City Tribune is offering a handsome silver cup for the best showing made from an acre of alfalfa in South Dakota.

Many other prizes are offered by the Land Show and business firms of St. Paul and Minneapolis, announcements of which have been made to the state commissions collecting the exhibits.

[illegible] STORIES OF MASSACRE

Rigorous Censorship Disappears and Details of Hankow Atrocities Are Made Public—Journals Blame Imperialist Leader for Both Hankow and Shanghai Outbreaks—Animosity Towards Manchus Increases.

Peking, Nov. 7.—The removal of the rigorous censorship hitherto imposed on the Chinese press is a notable sign of the times. The Chinese papers publish with the greatest freedom long accounts of the Hankow massacres, giving the details and attributing the blame to the imperialist leaders for both the Hankow and Shanghai outbreaks. As a consequence of these publications there is increased animosity towards the Manchus.

The United States and Great Britain have decided to take effective measures for the protection of their people in China, in event of danger to forsigners, which, however, does not yet appear probable.

It is suspected that the regent's brother, Prince [illegible], has left the country, as he has not been seen for three days. [illegible] obtained a month's leave from his post as acting minister of the navy.

A private letter from an officer of Yuan Shi Kai's staff says that the rebel leader, General Li Yuen Heng, makes twenty-five demands, the most important of which is that the imperial household shall proceed to Jehel, with the entire court, including the eunuchs, and shall remain there, receiving in turn adequate pensions from the new government, which is to be republican.

A special secret meeting of the national assembly decided to telegraph Yuan Shi Kai, explaining the fearfully involved condition of the political situation at Peking, which required the immediate presence of the premier. Otherwise the assembly would be unable to tide over the difficulties. A member of the assembly explains that this is a fair warning and that, if Yuan does not comply, another premier possibly may be appointed.

Consular reports from Mukden say many Chinese are fleeing into the country, believing the Manchus will retreat to Mukden and massacre the Chinese inhabitants.

The only demand the people have made lately which the throne has not granted is the punishment of officials responsible for the Hankow slaughter. Noting this the Chinese in Peking consider it a further proof of the throne's weakness, that it has not dared to antagonize any faction or party.

ANNULS GREAT NORTHERN GRANT

Court Cancels Title to Valuable Copper Property.

ALLEGED FRAUDS IN PATENT

Land Is Located in Washington State and Worth Six Million Dollars—Patent Was Granted to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba, a Subsidiary of the Hill Line—Land Now Reverts to Government.

Seattle, Nov. 7.—By a decision handed down in United States district court here by Judge Hanford a patent granted by the government to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba railroad, a subsidiary company of the Great Northern, to a tract of copper land at Reiter, on the Skymosh in Snohomish county, was canceled. A deed given by the railroad company to the Cascade Power company was declared void. The land is worth $6,000,000.

The decision is the outcome of a suit brought on July 24 by the Bunker Hill Smelting company, as an intervening claimant, and the United States government. The rights of the smelting company are not affected by the present decision.

The suit resulted from a dispute over the value of the land for mineral purposes.

The suit charged that Thomas A. Benton, agent for the railroad company, as late as 1905 took up the land in lieu of claims previously held by the company in the Dakotas and other states.

The complaint set forth that in 1907 the land, through fraud practiced by the defendant, was clear listed and patented. The fraud, it was charged, was contained in affidavits made at the time the patent was obtained that the land was nonmineral.

In contradiction of the sworn statement that the tract in contention contained no minerals it was set forth that the Bunker Hill company, prior to 1905, had acquired mineral claims in Snohomish county and had done $15,000 worth of work upon them.

The land now will revert to the government.

Mr. Benton has denied there was any fraud. He has said when the land was released there was no evidence it contained mineral.

PROVINCE SECURES BONDS

Important Railway Securities Case Decided in Alberta.

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 7.—Justice Stuart of the supreme court of Alberta handed down a decision granting the province the right to collect from the Alberta and Great Waterways railway $7,400,000, the proceeds from the sale of the company's bonds guaranteed by the province. In its decision the court states that the legislature did not go beyond its powers in repudiating the bonds.

The Alberta and Great Waterways Railway company was organized by W. R. Clark of Kansas City. The government guaranteed the bonds, which were sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. of New York.

Later, after a political turmoil during which the cabinet resigned and a special election was called, the legislature repudiated its guarantee. The proceeds of the bonds now are in Canadian banks.

RYAN LETS ALASKA LAND GO

Files Relinquishment on Controller Bay Tract.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Richard S. Ryan, alleged author of the famous "Dick to Dick" letter, which started the Controller bay investigation during the extra session of congress last summer, relinquished all claim to the fifty-six-acre tract on Controller bay, Alaska, known as the Canyon creek line terminal tract.

Mr. Ryan is president of the Controller Railway and Navigation company. The claim which he relinquished lies between the claims of J. J. Ryan and A. L. Schear, which, it is conceded, were taken in the interest of the railway and navigation company, of which Mr. Ryan is head.

CAUSES WHEAT MARKET BREAK

Rumor That Federal Agents Are Probing Alleged Corner.

WHIRL OF EXCITED SELLING

Market Declines on Reports That the Government Will Begin Action for Alleged Conspiracy.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Any man or set of men who buy so much grain that the price is held out of line or out of reach of buyers may be considered as acting in restraint of trade. That is the basis upon which, in the opinion of President J. C. F. Merrill of the Chicago board of trade, Washington agents are working in the investigation of an alleged corner in wheat centered at Chicago and extending from Duluth and Minneapolis to the seaboard.

"I know that the federal agents who were in La Salle street Tuesday went to the Northwest markets," said President Merrill. "This makes it look as if the department of justice at Washington considered there was some understanding between big wheat owners here and at other centers. So far as the board of trade as an organization is concerned, all is serene."

Rumors were current that a former stenographer of the weighmaster's office of the board had given evidence to the government. According to reports in circulation 60 per cent of the country's wheat supply is controlled by an illegal combination of speculators and 17,000,000 bushels of the total holdings of the clique are in Chicago grain elevators.

Threats that warehouse receipts for millions of bushels of wheat in store here might be seized as evidence in a conspiracy trial had a paralyzing effect on change. In the last few minutes of trading the market broke nearly 2 cents from top figures and closed in a whirl of excited selling, within one-quarter cent of the lowest point of the day, 95⅝ cents for December.

COURTESY SHOWN FOREIGNERS

Chinese Soldiers Join Revolutionists and Police and Firemen Appear to Be in Full Sympathy.

Shanghai, Nov. 4.—Except for the foreign concessions Shanghai is in the hands of the revolutionists who captured the city. There was practically no resistance, only a few shots being fired. All the Chinese soldiers have joined the revolutionists and the police and firemen are apparently sympathizing with them, for they are wearing white badges.

After taking over the arsenal the rebels burned the taotai's yamen in the native city. Every courtesy is shown foreigners. The soldiers, police and firemen are continuing on duty. Shops are closed.

While the action of the rebels was expected the movement was made quietly. After a slight disturbance in the northern section of the city notices were posted throughout the native city announcing that "the military government of China" had taken over Shanghai. It warned the populace against disorder.

The arsenal, where recently here had been the greatest activity preparatory to assisting the up river forts and providing ammunition for Admiral Sah, was called on to surrender by the revolutionaries. The chief officials disappeared, but a few other officials continued to hold it, without, however, any show of force. A few shots were fired, but the revolutionaries warned the officials remaining that they intended to take the arsenal even if they had to fight for it and the officials quietly evacuated.

It is understood that one reason for the revolutionaries taking Shanghai was that two Norwegian vessels had been loaded at the arsenal during the last two days with ammunition for Admiral Sah. These vessels succeeded in getting away.

Shanghai, Nov. 7.—Three Chinese gunboats, forming a part of Admiral Sah Chen Ping's fleet, which put in here for provisions, went over to the rebels.

His work as an explorer gained him a fellowship in the Royal Geographical society.

PRESIDENT SEES IMMENSE FLEET

Mr. Taft Has First Real View of American Navy.

New York, Nov. 3.—President Taft has had his first real view of the American navy. It has so happened that since he entered the White House the fleet, which was so greatly admired by his predecessor, Colonel Roosevelt, has been on widely scattered duty. And while the president reviewed two divisions of the Atlantic fleet in Provincetown harbor in 1911, and a little more than two weeks ago in San Francisco stood on the quarterdeck of the flagship California of the Pacific fleet, he never until now has come into his own as commander-in-chief of the fighting forces of the country.

From the bridge of the presidential yacht Mayflower Mr. Taft reviewed the gray armada which for nearly a week has swung at anchor in the Hudson river, awaiting his inspection. As the little white Mayflower picked her way in and out among the giant craft of the battleship line the guns roared in salute.

The yacht, with the president's blue crested flag at the main truck, sailed gracefully along the seven-mile column of fighting ships, turned at the end and headed again down the river.

Late in the afternoon the entire fleet, ninety-nine vessels in all, got under way and passed in review of the president while the Mayflower lay at anchor off the Statue of Liberty.

LAND SHOW WILL GIVE MANY PRIZES

St. Paul Association of Commerce Offers Silver Trophy Cups.

BEST EXHIBITS WILL WIN

Business Interests of [illegible] and Those Interested in the Development of the American Northwest Contribute Prizes Worth Thousands of Dollars to Encourage Exhibition of Products at Land Show in St. Paul December 12 to 23.

Exhibitors from every state at the Northwestern Land Products Show in St. Paul Dec. 12 to 23, will be given an opportunity to compete for more than fifty valuable silver trophy cups offered for the best displays, twenty of the trophies being given by the St. Paul Association of Commerce.

This announcement was made by the management of the Land Show and the Association of Commerce this week. Accompanying the announcement is the statement explaining how the trophies are offered.

"As the Land Show in St. Paul is an enterprise given by the states of the American Northwest, individual competition is almost eliminated by necessity," says the statement. "The trophies are therefore offered to the commercial clubs, communities or states first. Another class of prizes is offered for the growers furnishing the best samples to their state or sectional exhibits. It is not desired that any individual make an exhibit at the Land Show except as the samples are furnished those who are collecting and preparing the state and sectional exhibits. The name of the grower may appear on each of these samples. The trophies in this class, of course, will go to the grower furnishing the samples, but competitors must make all entries with those in charge of the state or community exhibits in their own states and not through the Land Show management."

The offering of fifty trophies is on a par with other things about the St. Paul show. It is perhaps the largest list of trophies ever offered by a Land Show.

These states and their individual contributors, commercial clubs and communities will have the opportunity to win the cups: Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Alaska.

Three of the Association of Commerce Trophies.

Here is a partial list of the trophies offered:

The St. Paul Association of Commerce will give silver trophy cups for the best state exhibit and for the best sectional exhibit.

In Minnesota the following cups are offered: For the best half bushel of winter wheat, for the best ten ears of corn, for the best bushel of potatoes, and for the best bushel of oats.

For North Dakota two prizes are offered, a cup for the best bushel of wheat and another for the best half bushel of flax.

South Dakota exhibitors will be given cups for the best bushel of wheat and for the best ten ears of corn.

For the best half bushel of non-irrigated and for the best half bushel of irrigated winter wheat some Montana growers or exhibitors will receive cups.

Idaho is offered a cup for the best five boxes of commercial apples.

Oregon and Washington growers will have an opportunity for friendly competition, as a cup is offered for the best bushel of apples grown in either Washington or Oregon, and another cup for the best sample of alfalfa. There is a cup for the best half bushel of wheat grown in Central Oregon and for the best collection of [illegible] fruits from either state.

Besides the cups offered by the Association of Commerce the [illegible] Northern railroad offers a cup in each state for the grower furnishing [illegible] the state exhibit [illegible] of samples [illegible] the best [illegible] of alfalfa [illegible]

[illegible] Rigorous Censorship [illegible] Details of [illegible] Made Public—Journals [illegible] Permitted [illegible] for Both Hankow and Shanghai Outbreaks—Animosity Towards Manchus [illegible]

Peking, Nov. [illegible]—The removal of the rigorous censorship hitherto imposed on the Chinese press is a notable sign of the times. The Chinese papers publish with the greatest freedom [illegible] accounts of the Hankow [illegible] giving the details and attributing the blame to the imperialist leaders for both the Hankow and Shanghai outbreaks. As a consequence of these publications there is increased animosity towards the Manchus.

The United States and Great Britain have decided to take effective measures for the protection of their people in China in event of danger to foreigners, which however does not yet appear probable.

It is suspected that the regent's brother, Prince [illegible] has left the country, as [illegible] been seen for three days. [illegible] a month's leave from his post as acting minister of the navy.

A private letter from an officer of Yuan Shi Kai's staff says that the rebel leader, General Li Yuan Heng, makes twenty-five demands, the most important of which is that the imperial household shall proceed to Jehol with the entire court, including the eunuchs, and shall remain there, receiving in turn adequate pensions from the new government, which is to be republican.

A special secret meeting of the national assembly decided to telegraph Yuan Shi Kai explaining the fearfully involved condition of the political situation at Peking, which required the immediate presence of the premier. Otherwise the assembly would be unable to tide over the difficulties. A member of the assembly explains that this is a fair warning and that if Yuan does not comply another premier possibly may be appointed.

Consular reports from Mukden say many Chinese are fleeing into the country, believing the Manchus will retreat to Mukden and massacre the Chinese inhabitants.

The only demand the people have made lately which the throne has not granted is the punishment of officials responsible for the Hankow slaughter. Noting this the Chinese in Peking consider it a further proof of the throne's weakness that it has not dared to antagonize any faction or party.

Important Railway Securities Case Decided in Alberta.

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 7.—Justice Stuart of the supreme court of Alberta handed down a decision granting the province the right to collect from the Alberta and Great Waterways railway $7,400,000, the proceeds from the sale of the company's bonds guaranteed by the province. In its decision the court states that the legislature did not go beyond its powers in repudiating the bonds.

The Alberta and Great Waterways Railway company was organized by W. R. Clark of Kansas City. The government guaranteed the bonds, which were sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. of New York.

Later, after a political turmoil during which the cabinet resigned and a special election was called, the legislature repudiated its guarantee. The proceeds of the bonds now are in Canadian banks.

5. Postal savings deposits converted into bonds are not counted as a part of the maximum of $500 allowed one depositor, and there is no limitation on the amount of available postal savings bonds which may be acquired finally by a depositor. The exchange is considered as taking effect on January 1, and a depositor who has applied to convert into bonds all or part of the maximum balance of $500 may deposit an additional amount in January, though the bonds may not yet have been delivered.

6. Postal savings bonds can be procured only by the conversion of postal savings deposits and will not be issued to persons who are not depositors. They may be sold or assigned to any person, however, by the holder, and when a registered bond is asigned a new bond will be issued in the name of the owner.

Registered And Coupon Bonds.

7. The depositor's application must indicate whether bonds are desired in registered or copuon form. Coupon bonds are preferable for a depositor who intends to hold them for a sohrt time only and who has ample facilities for their safekeeping. These bonds are payable to bearer, and the title will pass by delivery without indorsement. Interest on coupon bonds is collected by means of interest coupons, which are detached by the holder as they become due.

Registered bonds are preferable for persons intending to hold them for a considerable period, and they differ from coupon bonds in the following respects:

(a) They have inscribed upon their face the names of the persons to whom they are issued.

(b) They are payable only to the persons to whom issued or their assigns.

(c) The ownership of registered bonds can be transferred only by assignment in proper form.

Assignment of Bonds.

8. Registered bonds are assigned by the use of a form printed on the back, properly dated and acknowledged. When the assignment is made by mark, it must be witnessed by at least one person other than the officer before whom it is made. A ledger account is opened in the Treasury Department at Washington with each holder of one or more registered bonds, and when such bonds are assigned they should be transmitted by the new owner to the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency) for transfer on the books of the department. Registered bonds can not be exchanged for coupon bonds. Coupon bonds may be converted into registered bonds, without charge, at the request of the hoder.

Assignment By Minors.

9. Under the regulations of the Treasury Department a minor can not assign registered bonds without the consent of a duly appointed guardian or trustee, evidence of whose authority must be submitted. A minor has the right to convert his postal savings certificates into registered bonds, but if he should desire to assign the bonds during his minority he must comply with this regulation. This difficulty does not exist in the case of coupon bonds, which are transferred by mere delivery.

Payment of Interest on Bonds.

10. Interest on registered bonds is paid by checks drawn at the Treasury Department in favor of the registered holder. These checks are sent by mail to the post office address of the holder, and the holder of a registered bond should notify the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency) of any change in his postoffice address at least 15 days before the interest falls due. Checks for interest on registered bonds, as well as interest coupons detached from coupons bonds, are payable on presentation at the United Sates Treasury or at the office of any assistant treasurer of the United States. Interest checks and coupons covering interest on postal savings bonds may be cashed by postmasters under the same conditions as other Government paper.

Bonds Lost or Destroyed.

11. Payment on registered bonds that have been lost or stolen may be stopped by notifying the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency) at Washington. If coupon bonds are lost the Government does not undertake to protect the owner against the wrongful holder, but recognizes the bearer only. The owner has recourse only to such means as he could use to recover any other valuable property. When bonds either registered or coupon, have been destroyed wholly or in part, or defaced, a claim may be filed with the Secretary of the Treasury under certain prescribed conditions for their replacement. Such claims will not be allowed for coupons which have been detached from coupon bonds.

Information Relating to Ownership.

12. United States bonds are issued, transferred, and redeemed under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. Requests by holders for additional information after the delivery of the bonds should be addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury (Division of Loans and Currency), Washington, D. C.

HOW MUCH CAPITAL HAVE YOU?

Many farmers do not realize the extent of their investment; or that during the past few years land values have been increased by the use of improved machinery and more rigid live stock requirements; that the capital invested in their farms has increased enormously. According to preliminary figures from the last census, the average investment in Minnesota farms, without consideration of seed, cash, and minor items, is $11,385. A great many of our farms, that are of average size, in the southern part of the state, will show average valuations of $18,000 to $25,000. In fact, most farmers have as great an investment in their business as the average country business man has invested in his business. The amount of capital, and the form in which it is invested on the farm, should be carefully considered by the farmer who wishes to make the greatest profit.

Capital may be invested in forms which are relatively unproductive, This is true principally where capital is invested in buildings which are too expensive for the use to which they are put, in stock which is unproductive; or in machinery and equipment which is either used insufficiently or is not properly cared for.

Capital, to be productive, must earn current rates of interest. These rates will average from 5 to 6 per cent in this state. This means that the average farm must not only pay the cost of operation, but in addition pay $684.10 in interest, before the owner can figure that he has received any thing for his own labor or the labor of his family. While a great many farms are not earning interest at this rate for their owners and paying them wages in addition, it is because of the fact that they are either improperly organized or not well farmed. As the capital invested in the farms increases, methods of farming must be so changed as to give an increased earning powes equivalent to the additional capitalization. Most farmers in Minnesota could increase their earning power by using additional capital in the purchase of productive live-stock. At the present time, the farms show too large a percentage of their capital invested in land, and not enough in stock and equipment for caring for it.—Thomas Cooper, Minn. Agricultural College.

Railroads make Rates for big Land Show

Every railroad leading into the Twin City has announced that special excursion rates will be put into effect Dec. 11th on account of the Northwestern Land Products Show which is to be held in St. Paul from Dec. 12 to 23. A fare and one third for the round rip will be the rate and excursion tickets will be sold at points within wo hundred and fifty miles of the Twin City. Tickets will be good to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and will be good for return to and including Dec. 24th.

This is the first time that a reduced rate has been granted for any land show and officers of the Northwest Development League say that the rate was only secured because of the public nature of the show to be given in St. Paul. Most of the land shows have been private enterprises, but the S. Paul or Twin City show as it is called, is an enterprise given by the seven Northwest states and the territory of Alaska.

Minnesota State Band To Play at Land Show.

Arrangements have just been made for the Minnesota State Band to play at the Northwestern Land Products Show to be held in the St. Paul Auditorium from Dec. 12 to 23.

The band is to give four concerts daily, two in the afternoon and two in the evening. This is the organization which has been furnishing the principal music at the Minnesota State Fair for years and is considered one of the best musical organizations in the northwest. Besides the regular band concerts, some of the best soloists of the organization as well as others coming especially to St. Paul for the show, will present a number of solos daily. The entertainment features at the Land Show will be numerous and all of the highest class, the band concerts alone being worth a visit to the show.

GET MANURE ON FIELDS, IF POSSIBLE.

There is often time, during the late fall and the early winter, to clean out the yars and sheds before stock is put in for the winter. Experience goes to show that there is less waste of the fertilizing elements of manure when it is taken directly to the fields from the yards. When spread in the fall, remaining frozen through the winter, there is very little loss of fertility, and time is saved in the spring in preparing the land for a crop. While it is advisable to plow in the fall the land intended for corn, there is often land that cannot be reached on account of pressure of other work; and frequently a piece of land is reserved for fodder or ensilage corn, that is not plowed until spring. Such a piece offers splendid opportunity for dressing with manure from the yards and also in hastening the spring work by having the manure hauling reduced to the minimum. It is a mastake to allow the manure to lie in the yards from early fall until after the crop is in the next season, or until it is harvested. Economy of labor and conservation of the manurial elements demand that the manure be spread upon the land as fast as it accumulates about the barns and yards. This practice should be followed so far as the growth of crops and the climatic conditions will allow.—Andrew Boss, Agriculturist Minn. Exp. Station.

MUCH INTEREST IN "GOVERNORS' SPECIAL"

Will Explain Excellent Opportunities Awaiting Settlers In the West.

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 10.—From all indications the tour of the east by the special train known as the western "Governors' Special," which is scheduled to leave St. Paul, Minn., on the evening of November 27th on an extensive tour of the cities of the east, will present the greatest opportunity for the western executives to combine business, and the welfare of their respective states with pleasure, that has ever been presented.

While the purpose of the trip is ostensibly, to return the courtesies that have been extended to the different sections of the west, through the numerous visits of eastern commercial organizations, and to promote a better understanding between the two sections of our country, the opportunity that will be presented of influencing the tide of immigration that has been flying into western Canada, to turn, to the American west.

On account of the creation of the great development projects that have been completed in different sections of what has heretofore been known as the "arid west", a new era of progress has resulted. Harvests in all sections of the west have broken all former records this season. While the east has suffered in many districts from droughts, that while they have not resulted in total crop failures, have caused much concern to the eastern agriculturists.

On this account the tour of the special, taking place when it does, will assuredly be the means of calling the attention of the easerner to the marvelous opportunities that await the settler in the west.

Once the tide of immigration has settled back to the old channels—to the American west—the west will receive a new impetus to its progress and development.

While on the tour, the governors of the west, practically all of them are contemplating making the trip, will have unexampled facilities for focusing attention on their sections, for invitations have been received from each city on the specials' itinerary, asking them to attend banquets, meetings of business organizations, and even to make addresses at out of door gatherings, where they will have opportunities to deliver the message of the new west to the people of the older east.

Among the principal events that the "Governors' Special" party will attended, are the session of the national Rivers and Harbors congress at Washington and the gathering of governors from the southeastern states, which will convene in Baltimore. Washington is being visited at the special invitation of President Taft, who on the occasion of his recent western tour, recognized the movement officially and extended a formal invitation to the special's party to call upon him at the White House.

In each of the ten states participating, the work of gathering comprehensive displays of each state's resources is progressing enthusiastically, and when the special visits the east during the coming month, every section of the west will be ably represented both by exhibits and missionaries of the new west.

CO-OPERATION, CITY AND COUNTRY.

Whatever advantages the city may claim over the country, either as a place of residence or as an arena for business enterprise ,are mainly due to the fact that in the city the principle of co-operation has found a larger development. The co-operation may be often involuntary, and in many cases the principle has been perverted to the enrichment of corporate and other monopolies; but it nevertheless so permeates all municipal life as to constitute the largest factor in the making of the city. The improved road-ways and sidewalks, the water supply and sewer systems gas and electric lighting and heating facilities, the trolley lines, telephone service, parks, libraries, picture galleries, hospitals, express deliveries cheap amusements and superior school advantages—all are the fruits of a varied application of the "co-operative plan." For co-operation of men to unite in doing or maintaining something which none of them, individually, would be able to do or maintain. The mere fact of a city makes him, however involuntarily, a cooperator in all its works of public service. Their maintenance is a part of the "cost of living" there.

The growth of co-operation has been more rapid in the cities because of the multiplied contracts among the number of people there brought together, which have practically forced them to join hands for the general advancement, along some lines; and along others, has made it easy for the corporate and monopolistic beneficiaries of co-operation to levy the tribute charged for the use of their several conveniences— conveniences which the multitude was not yet reay to install from its own resources. But today contracts—stimulated by the presence of the telephone, the trolley, the aily mails, and all that they imply—are as numerous in many a country district as they were in the city of "ye olden time" before the advent there of the agencies named. And the multiplication of contracts stirs the progressive spirit in the country as it has done in the city. And that spirit can find no outlet like that afforded by the development of co-operation.

How many are the avenues of beneficient endeavor which center at Co-operation's door! Yet how few of those avenues have we, until recently, tried to penetrate! We have made some beginnings with co-operative elevators and grain-selling; with creameries and egg-selling associations with live-stock shipping and stock-breeding associations; with fruit-growers' and market-gardeners' unions. But nine-tenths of the business in the several named, except in the case of the creameries, is still handled on a non-co-operative basis; and this in the face of repeated demonstrations of the effectiveness of co-operation in securing larger returns to the farmer.

The extension of co-operation along these lines may well engage a large share of the new spirit now kindling. So, also, may the "Good Roads" movement, than which few co-operative undertakings promote more. Such extension will make easier the application of the co-operative idea to the purchaser and use of costly farm machinery; to the creation—where neighbors are sufficiently near—of a permanent supply of running water; to the common raising, for shipment by the carload, of a single kind of hogs, a single type of horses; to the establishment of free government news schoolhouses or churches; to the beautifying of country roads with shade-trees and side-lawns; to the establihment of a free government news service, which shall enable the country daily to compete with the city sheet, and thus restore the independence and dignity of journalism; to the lightening of the burdens of the farmer's wife by the establishment of the co-operative laundry. These are but a few of many avenues through which by co-operation, our people may attain to higher and better living.—C. R. Barns, Extension Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

SOME WIVES WANTED

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

Spring had just opened at Strawberry hill diggings when something occurred to put us all in a happy frame of mind. Deacon Turner, who had left us in the fall to pass the winter in the east, returned to camp. He brought with him a grand scheme, and a public meeting was called that he might unfold it. I can clearly remember him as he stood on the head of an empty pork barrel to address the 250 miners assembled. He was tall and angular and serious. Whenever a man died within twenty miles of us his comrades sent for the deacon to conduct the funeral services, and the deacon did it in such a nice, smooth way that everybody enjoyed the occasion. I also remember his opening address. He said:

"Feller Citizens—Let us git right down to bizness. This 'ere camp, numberin' 250 men, is a-cryin' out like the children in the wilderness fur—what? Whisky? No; you ar' two bar'ls ahead. Meat? No; thar's plenty of meat. Punkin pie and feather beds? No; we hain't no use fur luxuries. What our hearts is achin' fur is 250 wives to soothe our weary souls. [Tremendous applause.] No place is home without a woman. No man kin be happy without a wife. [Whoops and yells.] Paradise wouldn't be wuth shucks without women. [More yells.] When our work for the day is over we hev no homes to go to, no wives to welcome us, nobody to smooth us down and comb our hair and sing soothin' songs to rest our weary limbs.

"Why hain't we got wives and homes?" demanded the deacon as he raised his right arm and extended it toward the east.

"'Cause we hain't gone at it to git 'em. Away off thar in the east are 250 women a-cryin' out fur husbands and homes. [Long continued applause.] I kin almost hear 'em holler. They want 'em, and they want 'em bad."

The most intense excitement prevailed when the deacon stepped down. He had been east where there were women. He must know that they were pining to come. He was followed by Judge Pearsall, who had two or three wives back in the States, but who feelingly declared that he wanted one of the drove of 250. Then Colonel Taylor, who had run away from his second or third, mounted a barrel and shed tears as he drew a picture of a happy home at Strawberry hill—a home made happy by the presence of a wife. Two of three others had something to say in the same strain, and then Deacon Turner unfolded his plan. The camp was to raise as large a fund as possible, and the deacon was to return to the States, collect the 250 females and conduct them by the quickest route to Strawberry hill. We were playing in luck just then, and the smallest contribution was $5. I believe the deacon took away with him in cold cash nearly $2,000. Every man's name went down on the list according to the amount he paid, and the following schedule was posted on the trader's front door:

"Twenty-five dollars gits the pick of the lot.

"Twenty dollars gits a reg'lar widder.

"Fifteen dollars gits a grass widder.

"Ten dollars gits a gal.

"Five dollars gits an old maid or whatever is left over.

"No departure from these rules under any circumstances."

The "schedule" seemed perfectly fair and was accepted by all. The deacon left us in May, and we could look for him back in September at the latest.

It was three months to a day before the lookout posted on the hill signaled to us that a caravan was in sight. Had a barrel of powder exploded in camp the excitement could not have been greater. Everybody got into his vest at once, and, according to program, we marched to the hill.

By and by the cavalcade appeared. Deacon Turner appeared first. Behind him, seated on a mule, came a female—a woman, one lone woman. That was all! She was fifty-five years old, wrinkled, gray haired and almost toothless, and she didn't look supremely happy.

"Whar's the other 249?" demanded 100 voices in chorus, while a score of men ran to the top of the hill.

"I'll explain later on," replied the deacon as he continued his way to the camp.

He did. After he had tucked the old woman away in a shanty he came out to us and said:

"Boys, 'low me to introduce my wife."

"But whar's our wives?" yelled the crowd.

"Boys, we didn't figger jest right," continued the deacon. "When I got east I found that women had ris like all git out and could git married quicker'n lightnin'. I didn't want to cum back empty handed, and so I paid that ar' critter in thar (pointing to the tent) $1,400 to marry me and cum along. The balance of the fund was used in travelin' around. I'm sorry, but if women has ris no one is to blame fur it."

We got the deacon under a tree and a rope over a limb, but wiser counsels prevailed, and his life was spared. His "critter" died in about two weeks after she struck camp, and as a result we forgave him and let him stake out a new claim. He was never the same to us again however. He had left us 249 short, and we could never get over it.

Wisdom is knowing what to do next. Skill is knowing how to do it, and Virtue is doing it.

The man who thinks he is always right has at least one thing left to learn: That he is not.

Crookston elected a Socialist mayor and three aldermen. Ten important Ohio cities elected socialist mayors. Massachusetts elects a Democratic Governor and other important straws show whither the wind bloweth. Wonder if the Standpat republicans now believe there is a progressive movement at work.

Governor Eberhart has promised to come to the St. Cloud Development Association meet to make a speech. It will likely be an explanation of the speech he made at Brainard nearly a year ago. It is too bad that we common mortals cannot just understand what the Governor means but cause him the inconvience of an explanation.

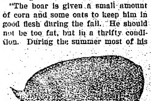
Cyrus J. Northrup, President emeritus, of the State "U" is being mentioned for Congressman at large. We don't see much use for all this talk about Congressman at large. We will have a special session of the state legislature and redistrict the state so we will have a congressman from the Tenth District.

Two weeks ago flax was worth $2.24 in Thief River Falls. Yesterday it was only $1.73. A drop of 51 cents. Is that due to supply and demand or to speculation. The farmer who works hard all the year and expects to market his produce in the fall certainly should be protected against speculators who work hard only a couple of hours each morning.

RAISING TWO LITTERS A YEAR.

When the farmer expects to raise two litters of pigs a year he must handle his sows in such a way that will accomplish this result, writes a South Dakota farmer in the American Agriculturist. "For the first litter I breed so the sows will farrow before the weather gets cold in the fall and then again for spring pigs as soon as possible. Of course this requires the raising of pigs in the fall without much succulent feed. However, this is not such a difficult task if the farmer goes at it right.

"The boar is given a small amount of corn and some oats to keep him in good flesh during the fall. He should not be too fat, but in a thrifty condition. During the summer most of his living is secured from good pasture, and therefore he requires but little care and attention.



There is one class of farm animals that should be given a prominent place upon every farm where alfalfa or other forage crops can be grown, says Professor P. N. Flint of the Kansas Agricultural college. There is no need for me to tell you that this animal is the pig and that, with the exception of the chicken, when properly fed and handled he becomes the most profitable meat producing animal on the farm. A litter of pigs dropped today will be in condition for the market in six months. These very pigs will make a pound of gain from less feed than will the beef steer, and the meat which they furnish you will go further than a like quantity of beef. The Berkshire sow herewith shown was a grand champion last year. The illustration is reproduced from the Country Gentleman.

"The sows get about the same kind of feed, but they require more of it, especially when they suckle a bunch of pigs. In that case they receive corn during the summer, even when on good pasture.

"The little pigs are fed skimmilk and corn in an adjoining pen. Small runways are left in the fence just so the pigs can get through and help themselves. They are accustomed to look for feed at this place, and it does not take long until they are great feeders, and after a few months they are weaned.

"I do not believe it a good plan to breed gilts under a year old unless they are very large and vigorous, in which case nine or ten months is best. When sows are with pigs the board should be taken away, and by the time she is to farrow it will be well worth while to watch her very closely. The sow should be separated from the herd and kept in a pen until the pigs are strong and able to get about. The successful hog raiser remembers that a little care at this time will save pigs, sometimes a whole litter, if not the mother.

Ration For a Bull.

A ration for the bull should be rather rich in protein. One rich in carbohydrates tends to fatten and to impair his procreative powers, says Hoard's Dairyman. Silage is not considered a good feed for the bull. If it is fed it must be given in very limited quantities. Where it is possible a liberal allowance of clover and timothy hay should be given and then enough concentrates, such as a mixture of bran, oats and corn and oilmeal. The corn, oats and bran may be mixed in equal parts by weight and then feed enough of this mixture to keep the animal in good physical condition, besides giving him from one-fourth to one-half pound of oilmeal daily. With timothy hay as roughage the concentrates should contain the higher percentage of protein. A mixture consisting of 100 pounds bran, 200 pounds oats, 100 pounds cornmeal and 100 pounds oilmeal would supplement the timothy very well, using enough of the combination to keep the animal in good physical condition.

Succulent Feed For Lambs.

Recent experiments at the Iowa station show that with corn at ordinary prices, cheaper gains on lambs may be made with dry feed than with roots or silage. When corn and silage are low in price the gains made with silage are a little cheaper than those made with dry feed.

The largest total gains were made by the lambs getting sugar beets, and the finish of this lot was also a little better. The lot getting turnips and cabbages required the largest amount of dry matter for each 100 pounds gain. Silage and dry feed came next.

The least amount of dry matter was required where sugar beets and mangels were fed. The chief objection to mangels and sugar beets is the large amount of hand labor required to raise them.

Grading Up the Dairy Herd.

If you cannot have pure bred dairy cows breed to some pure bred male and secure good grade animals. There is an ever increasing demand for good grade heifers and cows. Keep all of the heifers for your own use or for sale. Buyers will come to your door for them if you have any good ones.

The Larch In Labrador.

The soil and atmosphere are so cold and dry in farway Labrador that scarcely any vegetation thrives at all. The larch is a species of pine tree which is found in all northern countries, but its growth is so stunted in Labrador that a specimen found on the most southern part of that dreary land was but nine inches in height and the trunk was but three-eighths of an inch in diameter. A careful examination of the miniature tree revealed its age to be at least thirty-two years, for there were that number of ring growths shown in its small trunk. The very cold currents pouring down from the north and the fact that Labrador has less sunshine than Alaska, together with several inland climatic conditions, make the summer seasons shorter and colder than are those of Alaska.—Exchange.

The Smoky City.

A Pittsburg man once submitted a Pittsburg story to a New York magazine and got a wire from the editor:

"Will accept story if cut out libel."

So the Pittsburg man hurried over to New York and asked the editor whom he had libeled.

"You have libeled your native city, sir," was the reply. "Why," said the editor, turning over the manuscript, "don't you say here on page 23 that the heroine clutched the air desperately?"

"Yes. Go on."

"And then two paragraphs further down you say she washed her hands. Well, that"—

The editor frowned angrily at the author.

"That, sir, is a foul and disgusting libel on Pittsburg's air."—Detroit Free Press.

Climate and Food.

In the arctic regions human food is almost exclusively animal, because that is the only sort which is available in quantity. In the tropics, where vegetable food is abundant and animal foods readily decay, plant products are and always have been of very great importance in the diet. In temperate regions all kinds of food may be secured, and it seems reasonable to suppose that all kinds have always been eaten as they are today.

DAIRY WISDOM.

Each cow's udder should be thoroughly cleansed before milking, and the hands of the milker should be absolutely clean and dry.

The milk should be strained through one thickness of clean white flannel and then should be quickly cooled and well aired.

Pouring or dipping the milk several times from one can to another rapidly accomplishes this purpose.

Warm milk should never be poured into cold milk, nor should the night's milk be mixed with the morning's milk.

Milk should never be exposed to foul air in the cow stable or in dirty tanks before it is delivered to the creamery.

Tainted, musty or moldy feeds should never be served in the dairy herd rations.

An accessible supply of pure cold water should always be available for the herd.

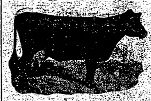
Bloody milk or that from a sick cow should never be mixed with the wholesome milk.

DUAL PURPOSE COWS.

Under Certain Conditions They Are Profitable to Handle.

A great deal has been and is being written about dual purpose and special purpose cows. Each class has a place. The more any part or function of an animal is developed the more delicate the animal becomes, the better care it needs and the better feed it requires, writes W. C. Palmer of the North Dakota Agricultural college in the Breeder's Gazette. The highly developed beef animal or dairy animal is unbalanced from the standpoint of nature, and nature left to herself does not produce them. When man produces them nature leaves it for man to care for, feed and provide the conditions necessary for maintaining this unbalanced creature. When these highly specialized animals are given the requisite feed, shelter and care, they serve man's wants much better than the animal nature made; in fact, one of them will do the work of a dozen or more of nature's kind. And they are profitable animals to raise, providing all their wants can be satisfied. If, however, they cannot be given the proper care, the less highly specialized animal may be more profitable.

That is the place that the dual purpose cow fills. This animal is, from the standpoint of nature, quite well balanced. The fleshing properties are not so extremely developed, nor its milk making carried to so high a degree. Here is a cow that can be a fairly good milker—sometimes a record breaker—and at the same time has good fleshing properties, so that a steer from her would make a fairly good beef animal and sometimes a prize winner.



The modern Red Poll cow is a result of the combination of the old Norfolk and Suffolk strains, and probably all the herds in existence have more or less blood from each. Individual animals still differ considerably in size, form and quality, according as the Norfolk or the Suffolk type predominates, but it is the aim of the most successful breeders to combine the good qualities of both the old strains and produce a cow of medium to large size, blood red in color, of fine bone, smooth, compact in form—a heavy body on short legs—hardy, docile, fattening easily, producing meat of high quality and giving a good flow of rich milk the year round. The Red Poll cow shown herewith is an excellent specimen of the breed.

The dual purpose animal, while it will respond to the best feed, good stabling and fine care, yet can get along without these better than can the highly specialized animal. Dual purpose cows are less liable to disease, so that they should prove best for the farmer to raise who does not feel that he can give as much time and attention to his stock as the best kind of stock might require. Whether this is profitable or not is another question; the point at issue is what a man is going to do, and this he will likely do to quite an extent regardless of profits.

Economy In Feeding.

When feed is short it is economy to feed night and morning in the mangers. The manger saves feed. It makes a little more manure in the barn, but that in itself is worth while. You are more likely to haul the barn manure on to the fields. A feed night and morning in the manger enables you to give the dairy cows a little extra treatment, and this, with the foraging they do during the day with the stock cattle, will give the dairy cows a chance commensurate with the work you expect them to do.

Feed New Corn Slowly.

Commence feeding the new corn crop by very slow degrees. Even after the stock become accustomed to eating it scours are apt to be the result of too generous feeding. Mix a little old grain of some sort with the new product and thus guard against various digestive disorders which may be caused or aggravated by the loosening effect of the new corn.

"I Suffered Intense Pains in My Left Side."

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry; that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured.

MRS. C. C. GOKEY, Northfield, Vt.

If you have any of the symptoms Mrs. Gokey mentions, it is your duty to protect yourself.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy.

is what you need. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your money is returned. Ask your druggist.

Good Rigs of all Kinds with Careful drivers ready to answer calls night or day at Reasonable Rates.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre, of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake County is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this comming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

Lattimore Leaves for Isle of Pines

Alex F. Lattimore left Sunday evening on the 10:20 for Sante Fe, Isle of Pines, south of Cuba. He expects to land in Key West next Saturday, where he will take a boat on the regular line between there and the Isle. Mr. Lattimore has been in poor health for some time and is taking the trip primarily for the purpose of strengthing a weak stomach. As a secondary attraction he has twenty acres of land on the Island, on which land he expects to raise grape fruit, pineapples, tomatoes and potatoes. It is said that there are no mosquitoes on the Isle, that there never has been a frost, that the drinking water is excellent, and that the temperature is very even, never going above 90 degrees or dropping below 60. According to that, the Isle ought to be an ideal place for recovering one's health.

Mr. Lattimore is well known to newspaper men in this section as the originator of The Eleven Towns, a weekly paper the first issue of which appeared the 22d of December, 1905. A year ago, on account of poor health Mr. Lattimore turned the paper over to his brother John, and spent last winter in California. When he returned this spring he found it necessary to spend nine weeks in a hospital here. Several weks ago he took charge of the Plummer Pioneer, but on account of returning poor health gave it up and made plans for his present visit to the south.

TWO FLYERS

Last Tuesday two of Red Lake County Flyers drove up to the school house in Dist. 33 to take a throng of happy school girls and boys, together with the teacher, to Malone school.

It was a delightful afternoon so the drive was enjoyed immensely. Never the less it was not enjoyed as much going as coming back. The pupils of Dist. 33 challenged the pupil of the Malone school to an arithmetic match and that was grating a little on their nerves going over.

Embarrassed they were when they arrived but when they were ready for the match they had mustered up a great deal of courage, for pupils of Dist. 33 ciphered down all the pupils of Malone school. A little boy in the third grade remained at the board until he had eight of their opponents down.

After the match a program was rendered by the Malone pupils which greatly enjoyed by all.

Before departing the pupils and teacher, Jane Tuff extended the pupils and teacher, Lillie Boehn an invitation to return the call. It is anticipated that they will return the call in the near future.

Herbert Kaufman, editor of an eastern magazine says, "We're all competitors". It was very apparent that pupils of Dist. 33 are competitors and hard to compete with. Their motto is grit, self reliance and perseverance.

Edward Hermanson who has of late been forman of the Thief River Falls News has purchased the Plummer Pioneer, and will take charge next week. Ed is a genial and good natured fellow and we wish him success.

Dr. Sample Dentist will be in Plummer at the Scotland Hotel Wed. Dec. 13. Come early as I am usually busy.

A CONVINCING FEEDING TEST.

The Oklahoma experiment station completed a hog feeding test not long ago that should have a practical value for hog raisers. Three pens of five pigs each were arranged. The first pen was fed cornmeal only, the second cornmeal and tankage in the proportion of seven to one, while the third pen was fed cornmeal and tankage at the ratio of eleven to one. In each case the pigs were fed all they would eat. In the feeding period, which lasted forty-five days, it was found that pen No. 1 consumed 1,386 pounds of meal, 630 pounds of cornmeal being required to make 100 pounds of pork. Lot No. 2 consumed 1,855 pounds of cornmeal and 265 pounds of tankage, or a total of 2,121 pounds of feed. In this case it took but 367 pounds of feed to produce 100 pounds of pork. With lot No. 3 the total amount of feed consumed was 2,026 pounds, a trifle less than in lot No. 2, but the pigs made a slightly larger average gain, only 344 pounds of feed being needed to produce 100 pounds of pork.

THE FOOL WITH THE GUN.

Many a farmer gets the reputation of being stingy and unaccommodating for posting "No Hunting" signs on his place when the truth of the matter is quite likely that he has been compelled to do this to protect his animals in pastures and feed lots. If there is any fool that needs tying up in his own back yard it is the chap in city or country who shoulders a gun, takes a hike to the nearest wood lot and who seems incapable of distinguishing a cottontail from a 1,200 pound cow or a gray squirrel from a nanny goat. At any rate, these larger quadrupeds are killed frequently by these hunters, and it matters little whether it is due to ignorance, carelessness or intent so far as the loss which the owner has to stand is concerned. If men and boys will not exercise good horse sense when out on such hunting jaunts the only other thing to do is to warn them off and if they persist in trespassing to prosecute them.

STINKING SMUT.

The plant disease known as stinking smut is responsible for an annual loss to the wheat crop of about $11,000,000. The disease ruins the wheat for flourmaking. The germs of the smut are on the grain at the time of sowing, and it develops as the grain grows and ripens. A simple preventive of the trouble is a treatment of the seed with a formalin solution, using one pint of the chemical to about forty gallons of water. The seed wheat should be spread out to a depth of four or five inches on the barn or granary floor, sprinkled with the solution, then shoveled into a pile and covered with gunny sacking and allowed to remain for five or six hours, at the end of which time the fumes will have penetrated the pile and killed all germs. The same solution is also used in preventing the development of other grain smuts and scab in potatoes.

SEEDLESS APPLE AGAIN.

A newspaper dispatch under a Reno (Nev.) headline states that an apple tree on a fruit ranch in Modoc county, in northeastern California, bears seedless and coreless apples, the placenta being forced out of the apple during the process of growth, the withered stamens and pistils being visible on the exterior of the mature apple. This particular "find" has been hailed as something brand new, the owner taking samples of the fruit to Burbank for the purpose of having him propagate it. Some seven or eight years ago considerable interest was aroused in connection with a seedless apple, but in this case there was a solid string at the center of the apple. While freaks of the above kind are interesting in a way, they have little to commend them for one who would produce apples in a commercial way.

DIHYDROXYSTEARIC ACID.

Investigations conducted for some time past by expert soil chemists in the department of agriculture at Washington have brought to light the interesting fact that a large influence tending to make soils unproductive is that they contain dihydroxystearic acid. In samples of soils taken from unproductive fields in eighteen states this acid was found. This new theory seems to make clear why some soils, apparently fat and rich, do not produce the crops one would expect. The presence of this acid in the soil is supposed to come from mold, to be connected with soil fungi and to be the result of improper oxidation. The difficulty is overcome by drainage, which dries the soil and increases the amount of air it contains, and by the application of lime, which neutralises its acid tendency.

ARTICLE CAUSES POLITICAL STIR

Colonel Roosevelt Attacks Taft's Trust Policies.

MAY MARK PARTING OF WAYS

General Belief Is That Breach Between President and Predecessor Cannot Be Healed.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's attack on President Taft's trust policies was taken here as marking the parting of the ways between the former president and his chosen successor. For months it has been apparent that Roosevelt was not in sympathy with the Taft administration and an open declaration has been expected. Following the filing of the steel trust suit, in which Mr. Taft aimed an indirect blow at Roosevelt, it was predicted that the colonel would strike back.

The breach opened cannot be closed, according to general belief, before convention time and many who have doubted whether Roosevelt would oppose the renomination of Mr. Taft took the statement as conclusive evidence of his attitude. The Taft men were silent, declining to comment, but the Roosevelt article caused a sensation in political circles generally.

The political phase of the attack was much commented on here. The article is looked on as marking a complete break between Roosevelt and Taft. Coming on the heels of the attack on the arbitration treaties it can scarcely fail to stir up resentment at the White House.

It is looked on in some quarters here as a step on the part of Roosevelt to "square" himself with big financial interests and thus to play for their support in 1912. Progressive Republican leaders are pleased with it, as they consider it will weaken Mr. Taft among the devoted adherents of Roosevelt.

URGES CONTROL BY BUREAU

Roosevelt Discusses Methods of Regulating Trusts.

New York, Nov. 17.—Recent litigation and legislation to regulate the trusts is discussed and a remedy to meet the present situation is suggested by Theodore Roosevelt in an editorial entitled "The Trust, the People and the Square Deal," published in the Outlook.

"The suit against the steel trust by the government," Mr. Roosevelt begins, "has brought vividly before our people the need of reducing to order our chaotic government policy as regards business."

He concludes with the following recommendation:

"The national government exercises control over interstate commerce railways and it can, in similar fashion, through an appropriate governmental body, exercise control over all industrial organizations engaged in interstate commerce. This control should be exercised, not by the courts, but by an administrative bureau or board such as the bureau of corporations or the interstate commerce commission; for the courts cannot, with advantage, permanently perform executive and administrative functions."

PROBABLY VICTIM OF PLOT

President Caceres of Santo Domingo Assassinated.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Ramon Caceres, president of Santo Domingo, was assassinated by political malcontents in San Domingo city, according to reports to the state department. No uprising has followed as yet.

Lacking further information it is presumed here that Caceres has fallen a victim to one of the characteristic Dominican plots. It is known that Caceres' administration, which has lasted four years, an almost unprecedented period in Dominican history, has very recently been disturbed by several well defined rvolutionary plots.

SARAH BERNHARDT.

Sixty-seven-Year-Old Actress to Wed Man of Twenty-six.

SARAH BERNHARDT TO WED

Aged Actress to Become Bride of Man of Twenty-six.

Paris, Nov. 21.—Sarah Bernhardt, the famous actress, is shortly to be married to Lou Telegan, a Flemish actor, twenty-six years old, who played subordinate parts in Bernhardt's company during her last American tour.

Bernhardt, in her "memoirs," says she was born of Jewish parentage in Paris at 265 Rue St. Honore, Oct. 22, 1844, but in her infancy was baptized as a Roman Catholic.

The famous actress is a grandmother. Two years ago Mlle. Simone Maurice Bernhardt, the daughter of her son Maurice, married Edgar Gros of Paris. Her son Maurice is forty-six years old.

DECISION AGAINST THE BEEF BARONS

Judge Kohlsatt Dismisses Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—The government won another move in its fight to bring to trial nine indicted Chicago meat packers when Judge Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court quashed a writ of habeas corpus issued several days ago.

Judge Kohlsaat held that the circuit court had no power to issue a writ except in extraordinary circumstances and that in the present case it was without the right. "To do so," he said in his decision, "would be an attempt to review the finding of the United States district court. The order of the court will be to quash the writ, remand the defendants for trial and surrender them to their sureties."

Levy Mayer, counsel for the packers, prayed an appeal to the supreme court.

"We pray an appeal and ask your honor to fix the amount of bail," he said.

"Under the law," said Attorney Sheean, government counsel, "when a writ of habeas corpus is denied it is specifically provided that the respondents be remanded."

"Your honor's order to remand is void," said Mr. Mayer. "We shall find, unless care be taken, this question will be so snarled that there can be no adjudication."

After hearing arguments from the packers' attorneys Judge Kohlsaat refused to interfere. The packers gave notice of appeal.

TROOPS HURRY TO BORDER

Will Arrest All Mexican Conspirators on American Soil.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 21.—The rattle of spurs and the clatter of accoutrements, as Troop I, Third United States cavalry, under command of Captain C. B. Conley, dashed into San Antonio, en route for Laredo, gave emphasis to the announcement that Uncle Sam would permit no plotting against a friendly power on his soil.

The soldiers had strict orders to arrest any revolutionist or enemy of the Mexican government who made any hostile move while in the United States.

MASSACRE TAKES PLACE AT SIANFU

Chinese Officials Confirm Killing of Foreigners and Manchus.

LEGATI[illegible]

Dip[illegible]

P[illegible] con[illegible] foreign[illegible] occurred [illegible] lieve that [illegible] true.

There were forty foreigners in Sianfu and many missionaries in the smaller Shensi towns.

Only Chinese reports have been received regarding the massacre. There has been no telegraphic or postal communication with Sianfu for more than three weeks.

The Swedish missionaries, Messrs. Sandberg and Erickson, arrived here from Tientsin. They said a telegram had been received from Sianfu, before their departure from Southern Shensi, telling of the murder of Mrs. Beckman, a schoolmistress, and five foreign children.

Many Chinese girls in Miss Beckingsele's school, who were mistaken for Manchus because of their big feet, were reported to have been murdered. A German, Philip Manners, who is in the Chinese postal service, was among others killed.

Province Strongly Anti-Foreign.

Messrs. Sandberg and Erickson say that a magistrate in their town offered them $400 each to leave the province. Shensi probably is the most anti-foreign province in China proper, not having received a lesson at the hands of the foreign troops in 1900.

At Sianfu, a city of nearly a million inhabitants, the English Baptists have two stations with six men and seven women missionaries. Also there is in the city the Society of the Brethren, an English organization, with two men and three women missionaries. The Young Men's Christian association is the only American institution which has workers in the local field of Sianfu.

The legations have taken no action, but they have the reported killing of foreigners under consideration. Without a strong invading force, however, nothing can be accomplished beyond the reach of the Yangtse gunboats. Most of the legations advised their countrymen in the interior to escape three weeks since. Many disobeyed, believing they were in no danger, though some of the women and children were sent to the coast.

PARCELS POST CONDEMNED

Transmississippi Congress Opposed to the Plan.

Kansas City, Nov. 19.—After selecting Salt Lake City as the meeting place for 1912 and Kansas City as official headquarters, the twenty-second annual session of the Transmississippi Commercial congress adjourned.

The resolution declaring that the congress was against the enactment of any parcels post law, which was adopted, provoked long and at times acrimonious discussion.

The congress did not openly endorse the plan of the national monetary commission to change the currency and banking system of the country, but the resolution adopted stated that the plan "may be a step in the right direction." It was recommended that the plan be given careful and conservative consideration.

TRUST ASKS FOR REHEARING

Harvester Company Petitions Missouri Supreme Court.

Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 21.—Quoting Theodore Roosevelt's recent declaration for a "square deal" for both the corporations and the public the International Harvester company filed in the supreme court of Missouri a motion for a rehearing in the recent case in which it was conditionally ousted from the state and fined $50,000 on charge of violating the state anti-trust law. The gist of the motion is that the Harvester company ought not to be punished for the mere possession of power. It announced its "intention of vigorously resisting the fine."

MAYOR SEIDEL.

Democratic Alderman Says He Will File Formal Charges.

TO IMPEACH MAYOR SEIDEL

Milwaukee Alderman at Large Says He Will File Charges.

Milwaukee, Nov. 21.—Formal notice was filed with the common council by Alderman at large J. P. Carney, a Democrat, that at the next meeting he would file formal charges preliminary to a trial for impeachment against Mayor Emil Seidel and City Clerk Carl D. Thompson, Socialist, for their alleged failure to do their duty in making up the 1912 tax roll.

Mayor Seidel recently notified the city council, which is controlled by Socialists, that Tax Commissioner Schutz, state Democratic chairman, had undertaxed the property of the rich and overtaxed that of the working men. Schutz immediately retorted that the mayor and city clerk had, as members of the board of review, been derelict in their duty in not correcting these errors when they sat on the board of review with him.

TELLS HOW TEN MEN PUT ON COAT OF TAR

Witness Describes Abuse of Kansas Schoolteacher.

Lincoln Center, Kan., Nov. 21.—Chester Anderson, a laborer of Beverly, this county, related to a jury the startling story of how ten men of Lincoln county dragged Miss Mary Chamberlain from a buggy near Twelve-Mile schoolhouse and administered a coat of tar to her naked body. The witness was implicated in the attack on the schoolteacher.

Under cross-examination Anderson admitted that he had never heard any gossip against Miss Chamberlain and said his part in the crime followed a talk at Clark's mill the day of the "party," when "Sheriff Clark or Mr Simms asked me if I would take Mary Chamberlain out that night; that they wanted to tar her. I said no."

Anderson told of how he had arranged with Edward Ricord to take the girl for a buggy ride and of going back to Clark's mill to notify the "gang." The night of the tarring Anderson and Delbert Kindelsparger drove to the scene in a buggy while other members of the mob came on motorcycles.
